Not long after, the groups founder, Henry B. "Pete" Kreer, convinced the Hallicrafters Company to sponsor the REACT program. The initial requirements for a Team was for three members who agreed to monitor 11 meters several hours a day for emergencies. There were no dues or other requirements except to comply with federal and state regulations.

By 1964, it was determined that there was a need for a National CB Emergency Channel. REACT National Headquarters asked all of its 800 teams to monitor channel 9 as a voluntary emergency channel. The scheme worked so well that in 1967, REACT led a movement to convince the FCC to designate channel 9 as the CB emergency channel. It was a major political success and many CB hobbyists began to look at REACT as a possible voice in Washington. But that was not to be.

In 1969, General Motors Research Labs assumed sponsorship of REACT. Also in 1969, Jerrold Reese -- a name that would become synonymous with the growth of REACT became its Managing Director. Founder Henry Kreer remained on with the title of Executive Director.

It was on April 24, 1973, that REACT and to a lesser degree 11 meter C-B probably got its greatest public exposure. That’s when NBC's Today Show televised an interview with Gerald Reese and Henry Kreer. Their interview dealing with the REACT program was aired on some 220 affiliated stations. It lead to over 500 inquiries.

In 1975, REACT broke from GM and started as an independent organization. Not long after, REACT International received not-for-profit status in the state of Illinois followed by federal tax exempt status.

REACT was on its own and less than a year later, it was represented at the first White House Conference on CB radio. And in the ensuing years it won many awards for promoting highway safety through its radio monitoring efforts.

But nothing last forever and the late 1970's brought declining use of 11 meter Class D CB. As the 80’a approached there were far more CB sets sitting on closet shelves than on the air. The C-B craze was dying and with it fewer people in the REACT program.

By the middle 1980’s REACT the only major organization with any ties at all to 11 meters. REACT had survived the CB shakeout probably because never claimed to be a savior or rallying point for 11 meter hobby operators. It’s self appointed task was assistance to the public. REACT was now national and chapterized and tax exempt. It also had broadened its horizons to include other bands and began using operators from other services including ham radio. C-B was now only a part of the REACT model.

In retrospect, one might say that REACT fought very hard for setting up an emergency communications monitoring system on 11 meters, but it was not a lobbiest for the rights of the 11 meter hobby radio operator. Instead, it always has lived to its mission statement and that’s probablly why it has survived and prospered for the last 40 years.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m David Black, KB4KCH.

Meantine, one question remains: Will anyone ever be successful in totally organizing political potential of 11 meter C-B? That part of the story, next week. (ARNewsline(tm))

Wife and I are in a small town in southern Delaware with rented commecial office space. We were broken into two weeks ago. Bashed rear window in, tried to get into two locked metal file cabinets and ruined them, stole one computer & keyboard. Three other offices were broken into over last one year in a 2-3 block radius all had computers stolen. Landlord says he's been there for 30 years without a problem up to now. Cost me about $450 to replace the file cabinets. Computer was worth $75, BFD. I was mad about the file cabinets, though.

You're a real fuckhead, David, why'd Riley tell you to cool it on the air?
Why'd you retest and downgrade from Advanced to General?
Dumbass David Colostomy.
How's that fatassed wife of yours, does she still wear the pants in the family?

- Declining crime rates our government says eh?
I've was self employed from March 1'st 1991, until November 1'st 2001 when I sold my company. In those 10-1/2 years my store was violently broken into (vehicles thru' doors etc.) four times with several thousand dollars worth of equipment stolen each time. I had my freight trailer stolen, my home garage was broken into (he went BACK to jail - was on probation), I had many bad cheques written to us (we don't take company cheques anymore), of which one was settled with a plea bargain and two others had the fraud charges prosecuted to convictions.
- I know that Dave only wants his radio back, but it would be nice if you could catch the thief as well.

Good for you - one request though - do send it via me - I will immediately pass it on to David - I'd just like to "touch" one - have been looking for one for a lonnnng time... but have as yet to see one "in the flesh".

David: To have had one - and have it stolen... that really sucks!!!!!!!
hopefully it was just "borrowed" and will show back up...

Why did I retire? One retires if one has the money to retire. If you had the money to retire, you'd retire but you don't so you can't. Not only did I have money but my practice and entire corner property building in a shopping center was bought by two NYC dentists who had become licensed in N.J. I was 50 years old with money and not only money from that but money from investments plus a major business unrelated to dentistry that I owned and recently also sold. By the way who are you and do you work? If you're well off, why don't you retire and make room for younger men?
But then why am I answering an unidentified creep asking me personal questions? You know what? Geh cockin!

$1,000 starting price for a 22 year old kit. Too funny, but then again there's fool born every minute.

I saw an unbuilt HW-9 QRP rig that was at $750 the other day - maybe it went for more.

Hard to believe people through away that much money on this old, outdated stuff.

Here's the scenario.

We're installing a 140 ft tower and a Force 12 Tri-Band Antenna. Will be using ½ EHS cable for guy wires. Will be following the ARRL Handbook on non-resonant guy wire lengths. What would happen if there were no possible way to get the last leg (ground anchor point) to fall within the suggested lengths? Is this going to mess with the antenna directivity or cause the SWR to fluctuate when the antenna is moved in different directions?

This falls in the collector class. Just as people (collectors) will pay more than the face value of money just because it is old.

How can you say that without knowing anything about the tower?
Suppose it's Rohn 25? The required 10% tensioning of ultimate strength for the next size larger, 5/16", would exceed Rohn's specifications for 25.
Put the tower up according to the manufacturer's specifications. PERIOD.

hey mark
if you are that concerned use the nonmetalic guy wire then you dont have to worry about resonant lenghts there are a couple of kevlar type guywires out there that would do the job for you and are not much more money

I looked at the Phillystran, would cost about 40% more to use it. That's more than by guying budget will allow.

Jail Main Nr 770-499-4200

Call for confirmation if you do not believe this, but, yes, they are BOTH in jail for Felony Stalking. They have been since last Thursday night, April 4th. There is NO BOND available for either.
It would appear that they will remain as "guests" of the county for a while longer....
It county not have happened to a more deserving couple.

Don't worry about it.

First of all, at 140' you are sufficiently far away from the antenna (near field) at the ground anchor point to not be concerned about any influence by it.

Second of all, there are some notable contesters/DXers who are convinced that breaking up the guy wires isn't necessary at all and who run their systems without any breaks. K4VX comes to mind.

Thirdly, I had a TH6DXX at 70' with EHS and a recommendation from Hy-Gain (in the late 70s) to break up the guy wires 3', 3 times at the top of the guy wire, and then approximately 17' on down to the ground.
I had no SWR fluctuation with that installation.

4thly, with a half power beamwidth of approximately 70 don't be concerned about directivity on HF with what you describe.

If you don't want to cut the guy to install insulators, install several clamp-in ferrite beads where the insulator would go: fasten them with friction tape covered with silicon rubber. If you are operation belowv about 7 MHZ, ferrite cores from TV sweep and h-oscillators work fine.

Rogie...cry, you hypocrite. Cry. I do not recall George attacking you on the newsgroups. In fact, I have never seen a post by George, unless you or your recently incarcerated buddies forged one. But, and here is the hypocritical rub, I HAVE seen you attack him time after time after time!
I wonder what the High Tech Squad will find on those computers that could implicate you, too, Wogie? (or should that be "two"?)
Looks like the Dynamic Duo will be having sweet rolls and chicory for breakfast, bologna sandwiches and Kool-Aid for lunch, and hot dogs and mashed potatoes for dinner for quite some time to come. Look at it this way, Wogie. At least this will give Dimmy a chance to dry out and lose a few pounds. You can bet that these last five days have set a record for being the longest period of time he has been sober in years.

Do any of you have an old Monopoly game tucked away, forgotten, in a closet? Perhaps several of us could look through the old box for one of those "Get Out Of Jail Free" cards and send them on down to the Cobb County jail for Dimmy?
It probably wouldn't do much good, though, but Dimmy would surely twist in his jail-issued dungarees over the kind thoughts expressed by his compassionate fellow Hams.
Do they still have chain gangs in Georgia? Since he is an "engineer" perhaps the county could utilize his road-building skills, though at a much lesser rate than the $93,000 per annum he is used to.

Phillystran is too expensive. Would cost over $1300.00 for the Phillystran alone. EHS is more cost effective, but would require more than 30 strain relief insulators to break the wires up in non-resonance lengths.

It has been suggested to me to use ferrite beads on the guys to create non-resonance lengths of wires. This sounds safer than having many guy grips or cable clamps per guy wire.

Has anyone used this method on their guy wires? If so, what were the results??

I have located 2 get out of jail cards which I'll mail to the Cobb Co. jail, just to imagine the infuriation when and if Dimmy receives them. I'm not one to rub salt in the wounds, but I think these circumstances warrant it. Couldn't happen to a nicer couple. Thanks George, where ever you are.

Okay, here's the skinny on STALKING in the great state of Georgia.

If you are able to open .PDF files with Adobe Acrobat, click on http://www.courts.co.gwinnett.ga.us/magcourt/forms/stalking.pdf and you'll see the blank formal papers. That's scary enough but if you are intrigued by this whole situation then listen up.
In GA, we have two types of anti-stalking statutes, NON FELONIOUS and FELONIOUS. If someone is accused of the former, then.....
==========
"Authorizes anti-stalking protection order with pretrial release order following stalking arrest. Bail may be denied for prior violation of a pretrial release order or of parole/probation conditions. Court at sentencing may order psychiatric evaluation and issue permanent restraining orders and require treatment as a condition of probation." In other words if the O'Briens had not messsed around previously, they'd get a slap on the wrist and some visits with a shrink. BUT poster Hillary FatLegs@demo.com emphasized the word FELONY so here's what FELONIOUS STALKING is all about in the Peach State.
Stalking - O.C.G.A. 16-5-90

When a person follows, places under surveillance or contacts another person without their consent and for the purpose of harassing and intimidating them, then he or she is liable for stalking. The statute requires a knowing, willful purpose of harassment and intimidation therefore, it is not criminal behavior to merely communicate with another person without consent.

Punishment: Typically a misdemeanor unless the defendant has prior convictions for the same offense, in which case it becomes a felony punishable by 1 to 5 years in prison.
==========
Based on Hillary's use of "felony" we can assume that the O'Briens had prior convictions for the same offense but I cannodon't know if that's true. Does anyone? Anyone know for sure? No guesses please..this is very important to understand because according to this statute, a 1-5 jail term is staring the perpetrators in the face. Now let's take look at something worse in the Georgia statutes, i.e. AGGRAVATED STALKING.
Aggravated Stalking O.C.G.A. 16-5-91

When a person is stalking a victim in violation of a judicial order which prohibits such conduct, he or she commits aggravated stalking.

Punishment: Felony, 1 to 5 years in prison and up to a $10,000.00 fine.
==========
This is a real bummer also known as a bitch. If the O'Briens had already been given a judicial order against aggravated stalking, then it's 10Gs plus jail time. Whoa baby! Once again-anyone know about it? I sure as hell don't and if Mr. Arsics can enlighten us, fire away George.
==========
In summation, this is how the State of Georgia defines STALKING. And take special note of the inclusion of COMPUTER. Those of you who do nothing but sit here and on rec.radio for the purposes of harassing,intimidating,defaming and libeling should have your heads examined because you don't know if the axe will fall on you too. Hell, jousting is fine but most of you are going way way overboard. THINK ABOUT IT because do we really want to see our fellow hams and SWLs get really hurt? I say no.

16-5-90. Stalking; psychological evaluation.

(a)(1) A person commits the offense of stalking when he or she follows, places under surveillance, or contacts another person at or about a place or places without the consent of the other person for the purpose of harassing and intimidating the other person. For the purpose of this article, the terms "computer" and "computer network" shall have the same meanings as set out in Code Section 16-9-92; the term "contact" shall mean any communication including without being limited to communication in person, by telephone, by mail, by broadcast, by computer, by computer network, or by any other electronic device; and the place or places that contact by telephone, mail, broadcast, computer, computer network, or any other electronic device is deemed to occur shall be the place or places where such communication is received. For the purpose of this article, the term "place or places" shall include any public or private property occupied by the victim other than the residence of the defendant. For the purposes of this article, the term "harassing and intimidating" means a knowing and willful course of conduct directed at a specific person which causes emotional distress by placing such person in reasonable fear for such person's safety or the safety of a member of his or her immediate family, by establishing a pattern of harassing and intimidating behavior, and which serves no legitimate purpose. This Code section shall not be construed to require that an overt threat of death or bodily injury has been made.

(2) A person commits the offense of stalking when such person, in violation of a bond to keep the peace posted pursuant to Code Section 17-6-110, standing order issued under Code Section 19-1-1, temporary restraining order, temporary protective order, permanent restraining order, permanent protective order, preliminary injunction, or permanent injunction or condition of pretrial release, condition of probation, or condition of parole in effect prohibiting the harassment or intimidation of another person, broadcasts or publishes, including electronic publication, the picture, name, address, or phone number of a person for whose benefit the bond, order, or condition was made and without such person's consent in such a manner that causes other persons to harass or intimidate such person and the person making the broadcast or publication knew or had reason to believe that such broadcast or publication would cause such person to be harassed or intimidated by others.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this Code section, a person who commits the offense of stalking is guilty of a misdemeanor.

(c) Upon the second conviction, and all subsequent convictions, for stalking, the defendant shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than ten years.

(d) Before sentencing a defendant for any conviction of stalking under this Code section or aggravated stalking under Code Section 16-5-91, the sentencing judge may require psychological evaluation of the offender and shall consider the entire criminal record of the offender. At the time of sentencing, the judge is authorized to issue a permanent restraining order against the offender to protect the person stalked and the members of such person's immediate family, and the judge is authorized to require psychological treatment of the offender as a part of the sentence, or as a condition for suspension or stay of sentence, or for probation.

WHEN it comes to way-out conspiracy theories, there can be none more outrageous than the one floated anonymously at the last Assassination Symposium of John F. Kennedy conference, which asserted it was non other than Kennedy himself who had set up the shooting in an elaborately staged and spectacular suicide.

JFK killed himself? Crazy, right? It has been established that JFK suffered from Addisonï¿½s disease, a usually fatal illness that was slowly sapping the presidentï¿½s strength. It was therefore likely that Kennedy would have become incapacitated before dying during his term in office.

Knowing this, isnï¿½t it possible that Kennedy, always with one eye toward his place in history, allegedly decided to go out in a blaze of glory rather than a wretched invalid? So the "idea" went that JFK ordered a small group of insiders to dispatch an assassin on Dallas, Texas to finish him off

Hi Zoran,

What Bob has suggested is to break up the guys electrically rather than physically. By adding the beads to the guy, they present an series impedance to induced currents. I use ferrites strung along the length of one of my test cables (about one bead per foot for thirty feet) for the same reason. Each of the beads, at 20MHz presents about 25-30 Ohms resistance to the flow of currents at that point in the coax's outer surface. Not exactly an open circuit, but sufficient.

Please forward to anyone concerned about the occupation of Palestine and free speech.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH?

CJSW is a campus/community station in Calgary with a mandate to produce programming not generally heard on commercial radio and to give a voice to groups that are marginalized in the mainstream media.

The Blackbird Media Collective has aired its program on CJSW since September 2001 on Monday mornings from 11:30 to noon. We are a group of media activists comprised of CJSW members, University of Calgary students and alumni, and former CJSW staff and board members, who independently produce a weekly spoken word program dedicated to informed social commentary and media activism from alibertarian socialist perspective. The program is carefully researched, presented and edited and takes us many hours to produce.

On Monday, April 1st, we aired Part 1 of a program on the occupation of Palestine. The program focussed on the role of the state of Israel in the continued oppression, humiliation and killing of the Palestinian people.

The facts and views we expressed on the program were similar to those of people such as Noam Chomsky, Edward Said and groups such as Jews for Justice.

Like many people, we were very surprised when the CJSW Station Manager went on the air just after 5 pm the same day, and issued an on-air apology, stating that our program had "failed to meet" the standards of CJSW's programming. On Thursday, April 4th, we met with CJSW management. We felt the meeting was positive because we cleared up any misconceptions about our program, and we were assured more than once that our program would continue uncensored. CJSW management did not have any specific criticisms of the program content, other than to say that they did not like the "tone", a statement they were unable to define and later retracted. We left the meeting feeling the matter had been resolved. The next day at 4 pm, we received an e-mail from the Program Director stating that CJSW would not be airing Part 2 of our series (which she had not yet heard), and that airing future Blackbird Media programs would be at her discretion.

At this point we are shocked, confused and saddened by what has transpired.

We respect the right of CJSW management to make programming decisions, but we think listeners and supporters of CJSW should know that our voices have been silenced without explanation. Ironically, this has happened only a few weeks after CJSW won an increase in student funding using the campaign slogan "Save Freedom of Speech".

IS IT CENSORSHIP?

WHY ARE WE BEING SILENCED?

Beam is 10 feat above the peak of the roofline does the 40% more include all the insulators, guy grips or clamps, and time to assemble it all. all that extra hardware also makes the guys MUCH heavier and i think harder to properly tension. on all the towers i have put up i have never broken up guy wires and everything seems to work just fine, spending all that time and money just because it may affect a tribander seems like big overkill.

The 40% includes everything you mentioned, except my time.

The key here is too kept cost down, but do it safely. How much would a 140 ft Free Standing cost??? Tnx for the input...

Doc. If my information is correct, and I am 90% sure it is, the O'Briens were judicially ordered two or three years ago to stay away from George and his family and to have no contact with them whatsoever. This is most likely the reason for the felony charges being lodged. Obviously, Dimmy chose to ignore that prior order and he is now paying the price for his misdeeds. Law enforcement has become increasingly aware of stalking cases and the cadre of many agencies are receiving many hours of specialized training in dealing with this crime.
In my state the party(s) being stalked often obtain a Restraining Order as a first step in keeping the offenders away and in most cases this will suffice. The first violation of this Order results in a misdemeanor arrest with a charge of violation of privacy. A second violation results in a felony charge being lodged as per state law.
The Dimmys obviously did not take the first order seriously. It is a safe bet that they have now "seen the light" albeit a sixty watt bulb hanging from the cell ceiling that stays on 24/7.

I do not usually laugh out loud at your posts, but this one has proved to

Not to get ahead of things -- arrest is simply arrest -- no one has been convicted of anything yet -- BUT -- do convicted felons not lose their amateur licenses? Or, is it that a convicted felon cannot apply for a license?

Just wondering.

Here we go. Rogie has predictably taken a page from O'Brien's Book Of Dirty Tricks and has read it well! You guessed it. Roger is the "victim", not the others about whom Roger has posted unwarranted filthy diatribe after filthy diatribe. Everybody else attacked Roger for no reason, not the other way around!
My. How suddenly Roger went from "attacker" to "attackee".
Simply amazing, is it not?

Wogie. If you need evidence that the O'Briens are now "guests" of Cobb County you should take it upon yourself to call the previously posted TX number for the jail. Everybody else has, including me. This is public information and is but a phone call away. The jail officers will verify what you are seemingly wanting to deny.
By the way, Wogie. Should you receive any email from either of the O'Briens in the next several weeks it would behoove you to be leery of same. It could very well be a member of the High Tech Squad sending "feelers" from one of the confiscated computers in hopes of drawing you out. It would be interesting to know what the officers have already gleaned from the confiscated units and just where or how you fit into this equation.
But I digress. By your own statement you are the victim here. Right?

Richard, I understand the common mode choke and the balun principle, but I have trouble accepting that this setup, as described, would work in the high intensity field scenario such as guy wires directly beneath the antennas. Even for a simple bead type balun, one needs to add something like fifty or so very specific ferrite beads in order for the balun to be effective, yet here the suggestion is to use "several clamp-in beads". The purpose of breaking up the guys is to make them non-resonant on the ham frequencies, but the ferrite bead principle would just slightly reduce the current flow in the guy wires, and even that is questionable. The resonant guy wire would still resonate on its own resonant frequency and would continue to disrupt the antenna patterns.
For this to work at all, one would have to insert toroid chokes with many turns in the place of insulators (or use hundreds of beads per guy) and that would pretty much defeat the original goal of not having to break up the guys.

Am I wrong in this reasoning and is this why "I never heard about this"? Seems to me that there are no magic solutions. Has it been tested and measured?

Answer. NO! W4AMP is already a convicted felon and from what I have been told such convictions only have credence IF the felony is related to Ham Radio or is otherwise so heinous that it would denigrate the good character of the Ham community at large. Riley Hollingsworth has long been aware of this man's prior conviction(s) and felt that there was not good enough reason to revoke the license.
I cannot understand this premise myself, and perhaps you should direct you query to the FCC.
You are also correct that an arrest is only an arrest. Nobody has been found guilty as of yet. Consider also that for an arrest warrant to be issued (and a search warrant for seizure of equipment) there MUST be some very conclusive evidence in place for a prosecuting attorney to issue an arrest warrant or for a judge to grant the seizure request. This is called Probable Cause in most jurisdictions, and such warrants are not given unless there is a very good showing of evidence by investigators. This is not to say that the charges will not later be plea bargained down as the attorneys become involved, but for now it is a fairly safe bet that the parties so charged did, in fact, commit a crime. Law enforcement personnel are very much aware of lawsuits that will surely follow should they not cross all the "t's" and dot all the "i's".
In this case I would say that the two law enforcement agencies involved have done their homework and convinced a judge and the Prosecutor that crimes have indeed been perpetrated.

I fail to see where his "relativism" argument fits in... I said:
"the law is the law"
and
"break any law and you too are a lawbreaker."
and even:
"This includes speeding, jay walking, littering, driving with defective lights or other defects, driving with uncorrected defective vision."
So, I did NOT say that speeding was "ok", I said that it was illegal.

And, as if that wasn't clear enough, I then said:
"ignorance may be bliss, but it is not above the law"

So, I agreed that all laws are "the law", and even that the phrase "I didn't know" is not a cop out.
So, what is his problem with that, is that not the message that he preaches? Maybe some of the crimes listed reminded him of the things he puts to the back of his mind (not a very long journey) every time he preaches about law "breakers".

If the US brought in a new rule, like our old one, that says that they must use small antennas just a few feet off the ground... would he follow it. Those in this country that blindly followed such rules caused interference, while the "lawbreakers" with large, high antennas did not.
"lawbreakers": 1 Sheep: nil

How about that sneezing law... would he hand himself in to the police if he accidentally broke such a law? Sure, but he may wonder what that strange white suit is for, why the sleeves seem so strange, and why they want him to wear it....
"ah, who cares, they say I should wear it... that's good enough for me".
"hey, this cell has nice soft walls."
"Oooh, the nice Misters are offering me little white sweets".
"Yawn... I suddenly feel sleepy".

"lawbreakers": 2 Sheep: "Zzzzzzzzz"

If the "AKCers" want to act like sheep and follow anything that barks, that's their decision. But they cannot expect everyone else to switch their brains off and start chanting Part 95 while holding their string of beads.

Currently, I am using two amateur radios for communicating: one is the Icom 718 and the other, strictly for 10 meters, is an older Realistic HTX-100. I have used the HTX-100 for about 5 years now and I just obtained the Icom less than 6 months ago. I am puzzled by something though that I was wondering if anyone could address- the noise blanker on the HTX is FAR superior to the one on the Icom. I am wondering why? The Icom was a lot more expensive and I just figured it would have a better blanker. It has AF DSP option, which I tried, and was disappointed. In every case on 10 meters, the HTX receives better due to blanked noise effectiveness.

I doubt I could internally modify the Icom's blanker for better performance so I am wondering if I could add an external, synchronous (or other ?) type noise blanker at the antenna input. I have read a few things about this type of blanker and, apparently by using noise generators, you can match the phase of incoming noise and cancel it out. Any suggestions for a blanker, either internal or external? I understand the synchronous type is better at lower Mhz, but will it work for 10/15 meters?

I believe the main sources of noise at my QTH are computer (of course) and pole transformer noise. The computer noise is easily solved (by turning off my monitor) but I have experienced the transformer noise for many years, and the HTX blanker always nullified it.

Appreciate any suggestions from the groups.

Thanks,
AB

Go to the Cobb County court website. All civil and criminal documents are there. As it is, I am not involved in anything the O' Briens do, we just have settled our differences, and Arselicks and Grimm, etc, can't stand it.
O' Brien and I used to have quite the flame battles at each other, but these idiots seem to forget that. Maybe it's because I quit the Goodfellows and so forth.

Google archives document repeated obscene and unprovoked attacks, posted by Wiseman, describe acts of a sexual nature,

Yes I just went to the Cobb County court website, found it ok.
However, after searching on both the case number you posted and the names you posted, I cannot find anything. I then telephoned the clerk of the court and they too came up with nothing. They even looked back for the last 15 years, nothing. Obviously, you have posted detailed information about a court case, so you got it from somewhere? Please state your source. Without a source, it can only be assumed that you are making up this information, and it has no validity. Post what parameters you used to do a search at the Cobb County court web site, and I will go back and use those same paramerters to do a search. Realize you are posting infomation about an alleged court case, but without verifiable sources of information, it is rubbish. If you obtained this information via telephone, please post the telephone number and department you spoke with. Also, I am not asking if you are involved with anyone, that was not my question. I just want to verify the validity of a court case which you assert has been filed with a court in the state of Georgia.

I have to ask, did you purchase the noise blanker for the ICOM? It is not standard.

Alan,

Although I purchased the Icom used, it did already have the noise blanker, which hardly makes any difference in noise level when activated (unlike the HTX). The AF DSP was purchased and added later, but to me it is no better than the already present blanker.

It very well may be that your ICOM "hears better" than the HTX-100. If it "hears better" it will "hear" noise at a level below what the HTX can "hear". End result: the HTX sounds better - but it misses the weak ones that the ICOM "hears".

On a quiet band, the pre-amps in my 746 are great - but if the band is noisy, I find that turning them off makes the radio sound much better. Bottom line - there may be more noise to blank due to greater sensitivity in the ICOM then in the HTX.
I have neither of the rigs you mention, so I'm only pointing out a possibility. For all I know, the HTX may "hear" better than the ICOM.

Hi Zoran,

I have forced such beads to sustain at least one watt of heat, and as such, for an argument to admit of destructive forces, requires at least this much heat burden in the bead.

Taking the NBS model supplied by Roy for EZNEC, and forcing more than 1000 Watts as source finds the current density varies due to SWR along the guys. This is for the beam one quarterwave above earth with 45ï¿½ guys (3 with the backstay pretty much immune from induced currents).
All guys are insulated from each other and ground (making them all common does add to the problem).

I sprinkled in several beads per leg (5 each) and found that by adjusting the resistance that the current characteristics were very difficult to tailor by this means alone (unless I got carried away with more than 50 beads per leg or the accumulation of 1250 Ohms per leg). Even then, there was too much power delivered to the beads near ground. Worst case found that some beads were forced to load 2.5W of heat burden (perhaps not destructive - until the first raindrop hits with a hiss and a crack) while most of the rest were quite warm. As I do not run amplified, I consider my situation adequate (but again, not an open circuit).

When push comes to shove, I did note that the necessary guys do introduce shifts in the feed and launch characteristics, but the launch characteristic shift was marginal, while the feedpoint may have been significantly perturbed (but certainly tuneable in-situ for good operation).

As such, the advice of snap on beads (presumably tolerant of a higher heat burden) does little to aid in the perceived shift of characteristics (the feedpoint shift being more meaningful in my mind). On the other hand, experimentation along this line does not add any hazard to an otherwise physically robust implementation.

Seems to me if you're pumping that much power into the ferrite that it might get driven into it's saturation region, become nonlinear. That would make all your so-equipped guy wires act like intentional harmonic radiators.

Can you do a spectrum scan while all this is going on?

> Roger, you made the statement that you wonder why the law suit was filed, thus you were interested. Now you say you are not interested? What gives? You can't have it both ways. You are either interested, or you are not? To repeat myself, I went to the exact web site you posted, entered the case number you posted, then tried the names of the law suit parties. I came up with nothing?
You were then asked to please post what parameters you used, which led to a successful search for you. You refuse to post these parameters and instead respond with your typical off subject no substance childish remarks. I then told you two of us tried to telephone the clerk of the court in Cobb County Georgia, who then did a computer search back 15 years while we were on the phone with her. The result was negative, no such law suit was found!

Repeat, What is your source of information? It is not court records, so what is your source of information? As stated before, officials in the county where you assert said law suit was filed, have no record going back 15 years for any such law suit. I say no such law suit exists Roger, and never did! And Roger, you want to be believed don't you? Then start out by acting like a rational adult, instead of a 5 year old child who screams profanity and posts childish remarks.
Anyone following this thread can easily see that you shot off your mouth as usual, then when called on for additional information and proof, you took the position that an emotionally immature child would and tried to defend your position by posting immature off subject remarks.
No such law suit exists Roger and never did. You lied, as usual.
Your hand was caught in the cookie jar Roger. Now scream profanities and insults, like the child you are Roger. By doing so, you will prove what readers of this news group already know about you Roger.
You have no credibility and never did. By the way Roger, the folks down in the Cobb County Courts are very polite and helpful, typical deep south manners. Do give them a call old boy! Just let me know if you would like the phone number. I have it written down here with my crayons.

I do not know your laws and their intended purpose. However, in the case of a law that caused unintentional harm, wouldn't "the right thing to do" be to change the law rather than defy it?

Sorry. The fact that there are silly laws is NOT a valid excuse for breaking any law that you see fit.

MAGISTRATE: Does the accused have anything to say for himself?

BRAINBUSTER: Ceteris peribus, my Lord, I'd rather not obey the law,

Most ferrites commonly used for this purpose will go up in flames at flux densities well below saturation.

Hi Lyle,

Hardly necessary given that the resistance of the bead remained relatively unchanged under the extremes I put it to (and no concomitant change of X neither).

I've decided to stick with the traditional way by breaking up the guys with insulators, after talking to many antenna experts. Seems they're still isn't any magic cost effective solution!

Hey experts--

Are the majority of radio transmissions in the 400-470 MHz range AM, NFM, or WFM? What reception mode does a cheap Radio Shack scanner use in these bands?

Thanks much... I'm using this to unravel a mystery of why I can receive a carrier signal but can't hear any content (radiosonde). I'm thinking my cheap Radio Shack scanner uses AM and I have to upgrade to something with FM modes.

Just a minor correction. Ferrites have a similar composition to un-annealed glass. Sudden heating causes them to explode with vicious cracks like miniature hand grenades. Tiny razor-sharp fragments fly at high velocity in all directions. There's no smoke.

15 years back I once tried to lump-load a shortish length of wire with 2-inch long ferrite tubes at 2-feet intervals expecting it to behave like a 1/4-wave vertical on 160 meters.

It didn't !

So I reverted back from a string of Chinese fire-crackers to helical windings wound on plastic drain pipes. It's ugly but safe !

PS. A similar effect would most likely occur with ferrites on guy wires.

You're absolutely right -- I stand corrected. Change "go up in flames" to "explode like miniature hand grenades".

I'm no expert, but you'll find police and business band up around there.
That would be NBFM. You'll also find 440 amateurs. Between 440 and 450 MHz, you'll find NBFM repeaters. Below 440, you can find almost anything upon occasion, including fast scan television ('normal' TV), digital modes, and, if you have a good pre-amp and a 24 foot dish which you can aim at the moon, you might even find some EME transmissions usually CW. What you want is NBFM.

Poor Woger, too stoopid to realize just why you have so many enemies.
It has to be the Conspiracy to Destroy Roger Wiseman, the ones that got you fired from 7-Eleven and kicked off half the ISPs in West Virginia and even recorded your on-air jackassery and sent it to Riley.

Or maybe it's your ex-wife, who left you for a transvestite because she

Roger, I find your posts interesting, in that they pique my interest but fall way short of being backed up with facts and sources of your information. For example, you state someone is a "wife beating imbecile." Are there any news sources or police reports to back up your assertion of someone beating their spouse? Who exactly is it that your are calling an "imbecile"? Webster defines an imbecile as a person with an intelligence quotient between 25 and 50 and a mental age of between three and eight. Roger, I really doubt if anyone who falls in that category has the mental capacity to operate a computer, much less post here. Do you agree? What is or who is "Asslicks"? It would appear that you have intentionally posted a corruption of someone's name for the purpose of libeling them? Please state who this "Asslicks" is and post the correct spelling of his or her name. You seem to be concerned Roger, with someone not telling the truth, but you don't state exactly what statement(s) from this person you are asserting as being less than truthful. Can you please clear this up for the readers of this news group? Of particular interest is your statement, "...twice fired from the FCC boy." Now that is an interesting theory Roger! Please state who exactly it is that you are alleging was fired not once but twice from the FCC. What is your source of information for this statement? When you say FCC, do you mean the Federal Communications Commission? If so, last time I checked, the FCC does not hire "boys." They hire men and women Roger. Those of us interested in labor law would find your theory of someone being fired twice by the federal government very confusing. Roger, how can someone be fired twice from the federal government? I am confused. Please explain your statement in detail, quoting references and your sources of information.

I am trying to learn Roger, help me out. Normally, if someone is fired for cause from a federal agency, they cannot be rehired, ever. So, how was this person fired, rehired, then fired again? An absolutely fascinating theory in labor law Roger, please do explain it to us. In fact, if your statement is correct, I would like you to post the applicable case notations, as I am sure anyone who was fired twice from the FCC had to have litigated such an unusual case! Roger, were there any news stories on this case? You have stated several times in this news group that your are a candidate for a graduate degree Roger, as such, I am sure you can understand why I must insist that you back up your assertions with factual references and sources. I am sure you are doing same for the thesis you are preparing for your graduate degree. Many people are interested in what you have to say Roger, particularly your sources of information for your statements. So go ahead, talk away. I and others are very interested in what you have to say! Oh Roger, based on your past posting history, a gentle reminder I do find necessary in your case. Please, no name calling, profanity, or off-topic comments of no substance to back up your assertions. Thanks Roger!

In reading a lot on the Icom reflector, I have found consistent comments indicating the problem is Icom's engineers simply do NOT know how to build a really effective noise blanker! I currently own a 756PRO and it can't hold a candle to the blankers in other radios I've owned including a Kenwood 940, Ten Tec Titan and Yaesu FT-1000D. It's probably the worst HF NB I've used. I have not used the Icom 718 but doubt there is any reason to believe it would be the one exception in their line.

I have seen some incredibly good blankers in RS products.

True for Kenwood too. I have an old Uniden 10 meter rig which has the finest noise blanker I've ever seen for ignition noise. I've compared it against a half dozen Icom and Kenwood rigs and it beats them all by far.

Designing noise blankers must be part science, part art and part magic.

Hi Ed

I hate to admit it, but I have to agree with you as well.
I have an HTX-100 and will use it rather than a Kenwood HF rig, unless the band really gets rough.

I have inline with the HTX100 a very old HyGain Receiver Preamp from the hayday of the CB boom as well. I have found that by keeping the Receiver Gain on the HTX100 turned down to about 1/2 and using the external pre-amp I can pull in stations that fly right by the Kenwood. The HTX100 hears them without the pre-amp with the gain cranked up, but the pre-amp seems to keep the noise to a minimum and brings up only the signal itself, in most cases, needless to say, there are exceptions. I also have a DSP from RS, it's great on CW but almost useless on sideband.

When I take the HTX100 on the road, the NB filters out every speck of ignition noise, including that from other vehicles and trucks around you.

The only NB filter I have found that works better than the ones used in the RS ham gear, was the 'crystal lattice filter' that was found in many Lafayette R&E Chicken Band rigs.

Exactly my point, Bill. I can't figure out why the regular HF manufacturers like Icom and Yaesu don't design adequate noise blankers. This 718 for example was over $500 while the HTX was obtained used for under $100. The HTX has a far superior blanker. I've tried AF DSP, but the blanker is still better. IF DSP I think would be a different story though, but I think excessive cost would be an issue.

I'm now checking out a synchronous noise blanker design on the web. Looks promising, but according to the info. I've read, works best only on the lower bands, especially at 160 meters and lower. I'm also checking into a phaser that samples noise and deletes it by inverting and cancelling. Both of these designs attack the noise before it enters the rig and, at least to me, show promise.

Ed, while I cannot agree so strongly with your conclusion, I will admit that my 765 and PRO leave a bit to be desired in the NB department. As far as Icom is concerned, the best noise limiter or blanker I have ever had on a receiver - since 1945! - is the one on the little IC-730 that I use for mobile service. It can totally remove ignition noise that is S7 or more on the meter. Couldn't belive it, first time I tried it. So, it is not a generic Icom failing.

I think that what is happening with the NB situation is that the operation and eventual effectiveness of the blanker has to be balanced off against other performance properties of the radio. I think that we can all agree that Icom engineers are just as competent as any others at designing HF amateur radios, so they are doing what they do for sound reasons, just not very obvious reasons. I suspect that they can design a NB that will handle anything you can throw at it with almost perfect operation. But, what has to "give" elsewhere in order to allow that degree of performance?

Engineering such complex products as our modern transceivers is never black and white - I suspect that even most shades of grey have been worn out by now! <:}

One nasty problem in noise blanker design is the need to have a chunk of circuitry before the narrow crystal filter. This circuit has to delay the noise pulse on the signal path long enough for the noise detector to trigger and shut the signal path down. A few hundred picoseconds would be nice... Maybe even longer to get a really good performing noise blanker. A microsecond or so time delay would help a LOT.

In order to get good strong signal handling most modern designs place the narrow filter as close to the front end of the radio as it can get... Often right after the mixer. This provides better strong signalling performance.

On the other hand, the crystal filter tends to 'ring' on the high energy noise pulse. Also, the phase shifts and group delay on the sides of the crystal filter tend to broaden out the noise pulse, frequently making it very difficult to have a noise blanker work on this broad and long pulse.

So, as a few people have suggested, it is all a matter of compromises in design. The trend has been to make better dynamic range radios and the engineering required to do that makes it difficult to add a really good noise blanker.

Many of the CB rigs had quite a bit of circuitry in them which slowed the main signal path down... They also usually have relatively lousy strong signal handling ability. These CB rigs were optimized for use in cars and such, focussing on low cost.

They also tried to make them handle ignition noise blankers and in the tradeoff they overload much more easily in a strong signal environment.

I am not saying it can't be done, but rather that making a radio with good dynamic range AND a good noise blanker are almost contradictions. The designer can do one or the other. Both at the same time takes CAREFUL engineering and adds quite a bit of cost.

I have an Icom 730 that I used a few times in a VW squareback, which had terrible ignition noise that even the 730 couldn't tame. I built up a little circuit that fired a one-shot from the ignition coil primary, like a tach does, and fed that into the noise blanker circuit of the 730. Did wonders.

[Side note: I gave my "Antenna Basics" talk at Arkiecon last week. At one point, I ask the audience to vote for how many dB they think there are in an "S-Unit". The first choice was "less than 2". A hand went up in the back. Then 2. Same hand. 3. Same one, at every choice, all the way up. . Hm. . . somebody in the audience Has A Clue. Turned out to be George, who introduced himself after the talk. I enjoyed meeting you, George!]

Hey Ed!!

I run my K2 in my old Jeep now and then. And my Jeep needs a radio license! It even tears up 2M FM. But the one mode on the K2 NB takes it ALL out. I mean ALL! I've never heard something work so well.

Next best the Uniden uPD858 chassis SSB set as used in the TRC-449. That seemed to be REALLY effective. The 424 was ok for an AM rig, but not like the 449 (and the other two variants, the 457 and 458, which were pretty much the same rig, only the 457 and 458 had an extra can and filter in the IF.)

My last Kenwood was an old '940, probably 10+ years ago. I thought it had a pretty good NB. I owned an FT-1000D for eight years and it could take 20-over 9 atmospheric static down to S2. Also had a Ten Tec Titan that --once equipped with a redesigned NB-- was as good as any I've ever used.

I guess every model is different within each brand.

Gary, A lot of folks don't give RS credit for some of the things they did extremely well. Maybe I'm partial to 'em since I worked in the main office until about 8 years ago.

If you want to hear a DSP filter that'll knock your socks off, listen to the ClearSpeech system... especially the new version that started shipping last August/September.

For this post, I will stop attacking you. OK? For just this one post, I am not your enemy. Nothing in this post is an attack. It is only an attempt to get you to take a good look at yourself.

Roger, I read some of your early posts in rec.music.beatles and rec.radio.shortwave. You used to be a decent and reasonable human being. (Interested parties may search Google for author:crow26038@aol.com .)

Now look at you. A bitter and vindictive man. I don't know what turn of events made you that way, and it's no business of mine. But you have allowed these happenings to drive you into all sorts of antisocial behavior, and those who share Usenet (and the airwaves) with you would appreciate it if you would curb it. Whatever this unfortunate occurrence was, we had nothing to do with it.

Here are just a few examples:

* You trail Stagger Lee all over RRAM, spewing irrelevant Google cites at his every post. Why? Is he attacking you? AFAICT he's avoiding you like the plague. Claim spank if you must, but it appears that SL has plonked you.

* Any time you see a Latino name (o cuando ves a alguien escribi&#65533;ndote en espa&#65533;ol), you start talking trash, spewing off about "peons" and "bean boys." Why? Who's attacking you here? What is your justification for spewing this racist tripe?

* You accuse every other person in RRAM of being "Lllaaarrrdddaaasss Lllllloooyyyddd", whoever he is, or "Whorass", whoever he is and whatever that means. Why? What did these two do to you? What did the random posters whom you tag with these names do to you?

* Then there's the constant sputtering of "Yer a queer!" You accuse almost everyone of being homosexual. You even followed me into rec.arts.sf.written.robert-jordan and yelled "Hey y'all, Ray's a queer!" (And this in a newsgroup where two regulars are gay, and basically no one gives a damn.) Why? What did homosexuals do to you? What, for that matter, did the good people of RASFWRJ do to you, other than ignore you and tell you to get lost?

* Now let's talk about your behavior on 20 meters: "broadcasting music and other unidentified transmissions", to quote that little greeting you got from Riley. And no, Roger, your claim of having been set up does not wash. Why'd you QRM on 20 meters? What did other hams do to you?

* Finally, posting my sister's contact information on alt.flame was way, way, WAY beyond the pale. This was a clear attempt to expose her to stalking, harassment, or other criminal behavior. You are damned lucky that so far this effort has proved ineffective. I'd be willing to settle for a hefty judgement if you did this to me, but if anything should happen to my sister because of your Usenet activities, then you better not be around when I come to Glen Dale, WV.

In short, Roger, you lash out at everyone and everything, and then you wonder why we don't like you very much. You may know how to answer 37 questions correctly on a 50-question exam, you may even actually know the material that those 50 questions are about, but you know zip, nada, nothing about getting along with people.

Since I'm such a charitable guy, here's a lesson in Human Relationships 101, one that is directly relevant to your present situation:

Apologize.

Say those magic words: "I'm sorry." And mean them. They do wonders for patching things up with those whom you've wronged. There is nothing weak or unmanly about fessing up. To err is human.

Apologize to Eduardo Hernandez for your racist slurs.

Apologize to RRAM for jamming on 20 meters. Apologize to the denizens of 14.313 if any of the same folks are still around.

Apologize to me for opening up on my sister. Clashing with me in alt.flame is OK -- that's what alt.flame is for -- but leave my sister the hell alone. I am willing to forgive you, if you will but ask.

Get some therapy. If you can afford an HF rig and a big-ass antenna, then surely you can afford a few sessions with a psychiatrist. You don't have to be crazy to need some help. Being bitter at everyone and everything is enough.

Somewhere within that angry, shriveled husk that is kc8jbo@alt.net, there is a crow26038@aol.com still struggling to be free. Let him be free. Let go all that hatred. You quoted John Lennon in some of your early posts: "Love is the answer." Remember that.

Tell your mother that you love her.

Then go, and sin no more.

As he is wrong, I asked him to provide proof or show how he came by

I made one and used it to improve some of my rigs, but I am not sure it is has exactly the right sort of pulses.

On Ft-7/FT-7B you could easily improve the NB with larger time

Hello,
over 10 years ago there was a modification from DG8FZ to modify the IC-271 for 12.5KHz steps in FM.

I didn't find anything on the web or packet-radio and would like to ask if someone have this modification stored.
(DG8FZ also don't have it anymore)

Ten meters has been wide open the couple of days. I have heard and worked stuff out of Japan and Austrailia; Both on AM, 29.000 and 29.020 to be exact. Last night the west coast was booming in here signals from stations running 20 watts or so 15 and 20 over S9, at 9 oclock EST on 28.550 too! These signals where heard all over the 10 meter band. Just thought that I would pass it along. I can't decide on which I perfer most F1 or F2 skip or E-layer skip. Its been a while since I have worked some good E-layer skip on 10. For those of you who don't know E-layer skip is 600 or 700 mile skip and F1 or F2 layer skip can go on for Thousands of miles. Summer is on its way so the thunderstorms should start firing up the E-layer. That will make for some short skip fun.

Sage advice Roger, follow it. Only you can make that first move to start anew. Your seething anger and resentment is obvious to all on Usenet and ham radio. Whatever event(s) in your life made you this way, they can be overcome. Many others have suffered what you have and worse. They have recovered and started again. So can you.

How would you like to win a Complete Amateur Radio Station?

You could walk out with all of this..... (a complete custom dream station, and more.....)

For a HF radio,
How about an ICOM 706MKII, Alinco DX77, Kenwood TS2000, and Yaesu FT1000MP Mark V HF transceivers?

For HF Antennas,
How about a Force 12 XR5 Beam, M2 KT36XA Beam, Cushcraft AW3S, Fulid Motion SteppIR Dipole, World Radio ZX20 Beam, and Butternut HV2 Vertical?

For Cabling,
How about 125 feet of National Wire & Cable premium rotor and coaxial cables?

For a Tower,
How about a US Tower TX-455 (yes, the whole tower)

For a microphone,
How about a Heil Goldline Microphone & and Heil Proset Head Set and a Limited Edition Astatic D-104 Collector's microphone?

For a Key,
How about a Bencher BY-1 Keyer and a Idiom Press LogiKey Iambic Keyer

For Station Accessories,
How about a AOR Multi terminal PSK, RTTY, decoder, Daiwa Watt Meters, a HAL DPX38 RTTY Demodulator, ClearSpeech speakers, DXer Dream Clocks, and Coffee Mugs?

Oh, yeah, and don't forget about,
AEA HF Antenna Analyser, Astron RS35m power supplies, W2IHY 8 Band Audio Equalizer, SGC Stealth Antenna System, and a complete Polyphaser Grounding System?

And of course, for all of these radios and antennas, you will need,
Top Ten Devices, International Radio Filters, and Array Solutions antenna switches,

For your Neighbors,
How about some low pass filters, phone filters, and ear muffs?

For your YL and / or XYL, you will have to have,
Wild Women Pins and collectibles

For Miscellaneous Stuff, that no shack is complete without,
How about a few thousand pre-printed deluxe QSL cards, Collector item ARRL Operating Manual, Collector Item ARRL Antenna Book, and a wide assortment of other books, cd's, and publications?

For Callbooks,
How about your choice of CDROM Callbooks from Buckmaster and Radio Amateur Callbooks?

For Logging and Contesting,
How about logging and contest software from DX4WIN, Writelog, NA, EQF Software, LOGic 5, MiLog, and others?

For HF Mobile Operating,
How about mobile antenna products from HI-Q Antennas, K6MB, W6AAQ, KJ7U, and others?

How about deep deep discount certificates on the purchase of ACOM, ALPHA, and Henry Radio Amplifiers & Tri-ex towers?

For your Reading Pleasure,
How about a life time subscription to World Radio Magazine, and 1 year subscriptions to CQ Magazine, Popular Communications, DX Magazine, QRZ DX, Daily DX, Weekly DX, Low Band Monitor, RTY Journal, and the K1BV Awards Directories?

For VHF / UHF,
How about some VHF / UHF / FRS handheld radios?

For Gift Certificates,
How about gift certificates to Amateur Electronic Supply - Las Vegas, The Wireman, Idiom Press, Peter Dahl Co, and Elecraft?

Interested? Well, come to the International DX Convention, and you may just walk out with all of this stuff, and more.

Rogie. Just WHO is doing the "dancing" here???
You seem to have a feminine side in that you ALWAYS have to have the last word on everything, no matter how inane. Your ongoing and silly responses to Gay and Loging it" (sp?) are a classic case in point. You use the most foul language of any poster on these groups and then whine that YOU are the one being attacked!
The old adage that, "Profanity is the effort of a feeble mind to express itself" certainly has credence in your case.

For lowest loss use the cable which has the largest overall diameter.

For durability use the cable whose jacket has been designed for outdoors rain and sunshine and temperature variations.

But when all is said and done, the controlling factor may very well be the SWR you run it at at the the highest frequency of interest.

Remember that a 1dB difference or change will not result in any noticeable difference either by you or by the fellow at the other end.

Roger's anger and denial have him in a very strong grasp.
When left untreated, it is only a matter of time until anger and denial consume the person in their grasp. There is no better example than two of Roger's friends who recently allowed their anger at one person to finally consume them. Roger, there is help in your community. Please seek it out before your rage consumes you too.

A "warning letter" is your idea of overwhelming evidence that some sort of wrongdoing had occured? Have you personally hear me QRM on 20 meters? Do you

This excellent post will be completely lost upon Wiseman. He is too deep into his rage, and will doubtlessly make some kind of incoherent post which is full of cut-and-paste garbage that is simply too dense to wade through.

I don't have him killfiled, but I don't read beyond the first paragraph of many of his posts either. Whenever I see that it is merely the same, thoughtless cut-and-paste job that characterizes most of his posts, it gets flushed.

Without having read any of the stuff refered to above or from the other poster, I already worked out that the claim "and he starts calling me stupid and that I am supporting thugs and terrorists (or something like that)" is a big pile of bollocks. Shit, he even says so, "something like that" must mean he hasn't even bothered to comprehend what the other guy said. So cannot quote him worth a damn.

What a lamer. Also, claiming to be being under attack, well duh, he's in a flame echo, what does he expect to happen? This is like going to court as a defendant and whining about being accused of stuff.

>The old adage that, "Profanity is the effort of a feeble mind to express >itself" certainly has credence in your case.

Might be so, sure. Then again, while there's no point, and it can even be self-defeating, to use unpleasant language, it is also true that some people have arseholes so tight that a judicious "fuck off you cunt" can spank them out of the group quicker than a well-reasoned logical argument. I'm thinking of most of the posters quoted on the site: http://amishrakefight.org/gfy/

Read and learn.

In the meantime, we'll be sure and not point out and quote you in future the above, which is, after all, just what a fuckwit who either never uses profanity (jeez) or who is wanking in the bathroom would say. We'll just have to see which you are.

I use 9913 here for RX only. All I can say it don't try to move it. When I actually build out my "shack" properly I'll most likely run 9913 to a

As the frequency goes up, the run of coaxial cable represents a longer and longer distance in terms of wavelengths. It is entirely possible to get extremely misleading swr readings at high frequencies as a result.

For example, a run of lossy coax can show a nearly 1:1 swr reading, EVEN IF THE OPPOSITE END IS COMPLETELY OPEN! That is, lossy coax makes an excellent dummy load at VHF.

So I'd say exactly the opposite: Transmitter end swr readings are much more reliable at low frequencies than at high frequencies. If you want to know about your coax at VHF, you may want to actually try open circuiting it at the antenna and measuring the SWR at low power. There are published methods for figuring out the coaxial losses from such a measurement, but the rule of thumb is that the lower the swr, the worse is your coax.

My own experience as a VHF DXer indicates that most solid dielectric coaxial cables will deteriorate with age, and that you will need to replace the cable after several years of exposure to the weather. Fail to do that, and you will merely be warming the coax with your transmitter power.

I can still recall the time that I let some RG-8/U polyfoam coax get a little too weathered and a winter ice storm broke open the connection to my 2M yagis at the gamma match. The swr only went up to 1.6:1, and I spent some time warming the coax before I even realized that the connection to the antennas had been broken. And that was only 144 MHz. Higer frequencies get even touchier.

You see, Roger? This is what I was writing about yesterday. Stagger posts reasonably and on-topic, not even talking to you, and what do you do? You insult him. You even accuse him of beating his wife. We have no proof that Stagger even has a wife, let alone that he beats her.

Why, Roger?

Do you think maybe this is why everyone thinks you're a nutcase?

Is Stagger wrong about something? If he is, how about telling us how he's wrong instead of attacking him ad hominem?

Do try and get your facts straight, Junior. You of course know the truth, but you seem to believe that if you lie often enough you can squirm your way out of it. You hope that some reader will be gullible enough to fall for your lies.

W4AMP and wife are out of luck, trying to get friends to post their bail. They don't have any friends, and there is NO bail. Hopefully, they won't get a bail set until late next year. They could use 5 or 10 years to learn manners, humility, the Golden Rule, and other important facets of life. I hope they are changed when they get out. Thank God for George Arsics!!!!!!!!

I've had close to a dozen towers up, 9 or 10 that were guyed, and the only trouble I have ever had with resonant guys was a 150 foot of Rohn 55 supporting a 40 meter Telrex. When pointed on Europe, I could read JA's fairly well.
Couldn't work them, just quite audible. I broke the guys with Johnny balls in 5 places on the top set of guys and 3 places on the lower 3 sets. The audible, unworkable JA's became non existent. Apparently enough pickup and re radiation off the grounded guys to supply the bottom side of the beam with a little RF.

If you use the right Johnny balls, if one is shattered from a lightning strike or some such, you gain 3-4 inches of of guy length until you replace it. Have had to replace a half dozen on a total of 5 towers over a period of 10 years in the lightning capital of the US. NEVER had the first inkling of an incipient tower failure. You can canvass your friendly electric coop for them, they don't usually use them anymore, but any old timer will tell you of someone who is hoarding a box or two of them. A buck apiece in small quantity or a quarter each for a box is about the right ballpark, LOTS cheaper than ferrites big enough to go over guy cable.

Looks like old Jizzy Back Orifice has made the headlines in the Glendale

AB8MQ (Always Blowing 8 Many Queers),
KC8JBO (Keyboard Courage 8 Jizzy Back Orifice) was caught red-handed sexually abusing a neigbors dog. Authorities arrived at the crime scene to find Woger with his pin-dick fully inserted into the anus of the traumatized mongrel. A large vat of lard was nearby.

Par for the course in the Wussman lineage.

No wonder the state took his children away.

suppliers worldwide comply with a high standard of business conduct.
Honeywell employees are proud of their company's strong reputation for ethical conduct; this program helps protect that reputation.

At the core of the Integrity and Compliance program is Honeywell's CODE OF BUSINESS CONDUCT. All agents, consultants, contractors, representatives, suppliers, and employees of Honeywell are ultimately responsible for conducting themselves in an ethical manner in compliance with applicable laws. Our Code provides guidelines to ensure that we are successful in this endeavor.

Under the leadership of the Integrity and Compliance Council, we pursue a dynamic corporate-wide enforcement effort that engages Business Conduct Leaders in each business unit and each region of the world.

And it includes off-work behavior.

No, you slobbering fuckwit. Anything about or from you, I don't give a fuck. And if you think I am the way I post, you should take that measly paycheck you get there at Honeywell, (but not for long mwhahahaha!) and seek professional help.

But nobody pays much attention to your chicken scratchings:

Nobody's running away from you Chason. You're probably the worst flamer /EVER/ on alt.flame.

You're a joke, Chason. Perhaps that's why James Koput doesn't pay much attention to you.

Sorry if this hurts you Ray but it's just my honest opinion.

BWHAHAHAHAHA...and this is your idea of some "overwhelming evidence of wrongdoing," you slobbering fat fuck? How many times to I have to beat your piss poor logic over your fat, obtuse, malformed head before it will sink in?

You present (and seemingly always fall back on) a <guffaw> warning letter from November, 1999....which "may" indicate an impermissible activity ocurred, but by its nature is neither proof of the activity, nor guarantee of the validity of the evidence, if any. And what's with ther first name basis namedropping of Riley Hollingsworth, you are neither a ham, nor have any purient interest in amateur radio, and your only intent is to harass here. (As usual, you fail.) So quit pretending you actually fit in here by namedropping.

So, just for the sake of argument, let's presume that the "warning letter" was some sort of indicator of wrongdoing. That "fact" is just a small percentage of what you purported to be overwhelming evidence of something wrong I have done. You haven't personally heard any wrongdoing, just presenting hearsay as your only defense. Post dates, times and frequencies you have personally heard me interfere on the amateur bands, Chason.

Of course, we can presume with equal validity that the "warning letter" crutch you are using was based on bad information and was therefore improperly presented.
Then your "overwhelming evidence" of my purported wrongdoing has slipped to zero. Nada. Zilch. Nothing. Zippo. No-thing. Sort of like your I.Q., Chason.

Even the RSCB (save for their stupid and infantile members who contribute to this NG?) cannot fail to see the absolute disaster they have instituted with their M3/CB licence?

The CBers who have been whingeing for years for full HF access on the Ham Bands without any real effort on their part now have full HF access on the Ham Bands without any real effort on their part.

The reported behaviour of these CBers in this NG shows what a disaster the whole thing has become.
What is the reaction from the rest of the world to this influx of idiots polluting the HF bands with CB speak?

Sic transit gloria Mundi.

What can we do to resolve the problem and restore Ham Radio to what it really is, a technical pursuit for those suitably qualified and licensed?

I coined the term "RSCB" originally as a cynical satire, but unfortunately it has become a true description of the festering mentality that now runs Potters Bar. Perhaps CBers become "brain-dead" only after following the example of RSCB members?

Though not a regular listener to 40m, the only M3s I have heard have been courteous, knowledgeable and friendly. I have not heard much CB parlance at all, other than one say in a report, "You are hitting me with a 5 and 9" which may be construed as CB lingo, I suppose.

It is wrong to tar all M3s with the same brush. After all, not all G3s and G4s are God's gift to intelligence and radio etiquette, are they?

You posted information earlier in this thread about a law suit which you claim was filed in Cobb County, Georgia. I cannot find it listed at the web site you gave. Do you know the parties of the law suit? How can I find more information? Why was the law suit filed?

Cannot fail to see? The RSGB have failed and still fail to see what a disaster for the future of the hobby the Foundation licence is going to be.

Those who responded to the RSGB invitation to comment on Foundation licence proposals feel they were ignored if their views did not coincide with the master plan. As I said in my response, there is no need for a three tier system. Anyone with even a slight interest in RADIO communications and technical investigation was not deterred by the Novice entry route.

>The CBers who have been whingeing for years for

It is incorrect to blame CBers for whingeing on. Over a number of years, there has been a growing feeling amongst amateurs that knowledge of Morse code is no longer an appropriate test to determine whether someone who holds an RAE pass certificate should or shouldn't be allowed onto hf bands. Some people (and I suspect G4SDW is one of them) resent the fact that they had to do some extra "work" to gain access to hf bands, and want some other barrier to be created instead. Where is the logic in this?

>shows what a disaster the whole thing has become.

Has there been any reaction from overseas about non-technical operators "polluting the hf bands with CB speak" ?

>What can we do to resolve the problem and restore

"What can we do" ?

1. We (whoever "we" is) can engage newly licensed Foundees in QSOs and encourage them to think about their stations from a technical point of view.

2. We can tell those who talk about "poundage", "whiskies", "personals" etc. that we do not use such terms on amateur radio. We have enough jargon of our own!

3. We can set good operating examples, and can suggest newcomers listen to other people's QSOs as well as having their own.

4. We can welcome them to the hobby - it is not the Foundation licence holder's fault that the door into the hobby has been opened so wide.

Well I'm a M3, and all I've heard on the bands from fellow 'Ham's', in all countries is praise for the idea and no problem with the operating procedure.

Tell you what, some of the 'old' G3's I have heard on the bands have operating procedure worse than CB'rs

Poor Grungy Hermaphrodite.......forced to spend all that welfare check on different ISP's to hide behind. No call, just a CBer himself, mainly because of his mental disabilities prevent him from even passing a Technician exam. Sorry, Grungy, the medical waivers were discontinued, you'll have to take that tinfoil hat off of your obtuse, melon-shaped, malformed cranium and actually have to work to get your license. That is, if you can quit crapping in your diapers long enough.

Hello, Robert,

Yes, the CobbCounty Superior Court website is the one that has that information.
http://www.cobbgasupctclk.com/default.htm
The site has been down for a few days for maintenence.

The Plaintiff was George F. Arsics, the Defendants were the O' Briens. Why it was filed, especially under "Family Violence" is one for "Unsolved Mysteries." The case was closed 09/01/98. Guess it was one of theose frivolous lawsiuts you hear about.

David Hendon, head of the RA accepts that Morse proficiency is no longer

I used 9913, too. It's good stuff but don't put it where it'll get stepped on or run over or twisted around a lot. Keep bends on a wide radius.

Also, be aware that with 100 feet you will have losses, especially at UHF. I put an 80-foot piece of brand-new 9913 on a 2-meter antenna once. Before I put it up, I put a Bird wattmeter on the transmitter and read 100 watts output. Put it at the other end of the cable and read 50 watts. You can imagine what it might have been at UHF. I seriously doubt LMR400 would do better.

The only better choice is hardline and the expense of cable and connectors is prohibitive for most hams.

Hi, Michael...

I bought a roll of 500 feet of the 9913 flex. The insulation around the center wire is some kind of foam but "solid" not like the "bead" of insulation that coils around the center conductor in 9913 itself. Also, when I was separating the shield and center wire to connect it, I bent the center wire on maybe a 2" radius and the insulation "snapped" in two. I was distressed to see this happen. Had I known, I would have gone for the "real" 9913 instead.

It seems to work great but there are some handling issues!! "Flex" as applied to this cable may lead to some erroneous assumptions.

Ed,
I find it easier to work with. It's lighter. There are length measurements right on the jacket. 9913 has a problem with water intrusion, due to its air dielectric. I've heard of folks getting water in the shack, even with a good, watertight connection outside.
Theory is temperature swings allows condensation of water vapor inside the cable, over time.

The only station I have heared using CB language in the past month was an M1.

How many people have posted negative comments about M3's on this newsgroup and what percentage of the UK radio amateurs does this represent?

M3's are the future of amateur radio in the UK, like it or not. Give them encouragement and offer guidence to those who need it.

In the future when the Foundation exam is the only entry point into amateur radio, even the most experienced electronics / RF engineer, who is fully competent at designing and building a transceiver will have to start with an M3 callsign. Does this make him / her an idiot or "Brain-dead" CBer?

3 db seems rather high for an 80 foot run, but I don't know what brand of 9913 you used, or the quality of the connector installation. I use the 9913 type flexible stuff from Cable Xperts on all my antennas and it has performed very well over the past 5 years that it has been up.

Standard practice for me is to make up and test my feedlines before I put the antenna up, and I have tested many runs of this cable. A 100 foot run with quality connectors typically measures around 1.7 db at 144 mhz.

However, remember that even with 3 db loss in the feedline (regardless of frequency), if you are feeding an antenna with any reasonable gain, this loss is overcome. For example, a 100 watt input into a feedline with 3 db loss feeding an antenna with 10 db gain (with a SWR at the rig of 1.5 to 1) will still have a net gain of about 6.4 db and provide around 440 watts ERP. (The numbers get even better if the match is measured at the antenna rather than the rig, due to the feedline loss affecting the SWR measurement)

Considering the high costs of hard line and associated connectors (or the cost of a 400 watt amplifier), a gain antenna, a good SWR, and 9913 or LMR 400 feedline is a pretty cost effective trade-off... :>)

My copy of BR68/F states

'4(1) The Licensee shall only use transmitting equipment conforming to EC standards or commercially available kits transmitting inside amateur bands only'

Does this not mean that an M3 can buy and build a kit? Is this not where a lot of amateurs have started? I cannot find any reference to type approval in BR68/F?

It really is a disgrace how so many on this newsgroup randomly hurl coordinated manner.

Not necessarily. Although the recent Press Release by the RA contained the one-liner that "from 2004 the Foundation Licence will be the only entry route into the hobby", there is time to get this ill-thought-through statement changed to allow entry at the RAE level as well.

4143. Ham Radio Recommendation for Tahoe Backcountry Emergency Use?

I'm an older guy who spends much of the winter doing day hikes into the Lake Tahoe backcountry on skiis, going maybe 4 or 5 miles into the woods or up canyons, most often alone (not counting my dog . . .).

Usually someone knows where I'm going, and I've been carrying a cell phone for possible accidents or medical emergencies, but cellular coverage is not always complete. So, I'm wondering about ham radio gear (or CB?) for possible emergency communication.

Question is: Any specific recommendations for a Radio Shack or other handheld unit that I could buy and just toss in the bottom of my backpack for possible emergency use? (No interest in chatting while on trail; just want an emergency unit just in case.)

(I'm told there are some repeaters in the Lake Tahoe region at 146-7, 224 and 442 MHz frequencies, and am digging further into this.).

Would a CB unit have any chance of having sufficient coverage?

I don't know about Barry, but the low loss of the LMR-400 was what sold me.
On 20 meters the attenuation is only 0.466 dB/100 feet.

First off, you might want to obtain the books on licensing for the amateur stuff. the CB re-quires no license, but I don't know how well a handheld would work in the wilderness.
The VHF/UHF ham gear would likely work, but you will need the license. This does give you several options in that you can call for help via the repeater, or dial up 911 and talk direct to the ES authorities if the repeaters are equipped with autopatch.

If it were a perfect world, then if you get into a medical emergency, you would be able to transmit from a mountain top and you might be heard. Unfortunately, in my experience, you won't be on a mountain top when you need to call most. More likely that you will be down in a valley.

There are exceptions, of course. A couple of years ago, some folks were climbing on the north side of Mount Shasta, and they got off route and took a long sliding fall. Broken leg, I think. They had a cell phone, so they called 911. I believe that the call was picked up somewhere in Oregon and a 911 dispatcher in Klamath Falls handled it. They were able to take a forest service ranger in by military helicopter and drop him above the injured party.

That was reported in the news since it was kind of remarkable that the 911 call was received at all, even if you are relatively high on a mountain.

If you had a loss of 3 db at 150 mhz then something is wrong for 9913.
Using about 90 watts I have measured slightly less than 3 db at 432 mhz for 100 feet. This was with 2 differant pieces of coax, one terminated with pl259 connectors and the other with N type connectos. I did have to use some adaptors but forgot what kind or how many. The losses of the connectors were not taken away so the loss of the coax would really be less than measured. I used a Bird meter and a Struthers (sp) military wattmeter to double check the results.

Are you sure that was 9913 or was it just some other rg-8 size you were using ? The run of the mill rg-8 will loose about 3 db at 150 mhz and about 6 db at 450 mhz.

CB is definitely out. No one around there is listening for a weak cb signal. Next to the cellphone you might look into a EIPRB or similar device. I may have the initials wrong on that. It's a emergency transmitter beacon that works with satellites. You can find these devices on lifeboats and aircraft. These devices will get everyone's attention so you need to be careful in not turning it on by accident. The Search and Rescue people have located these things down to someone's automobile trunk a time or two.

Tahoe's trails are usually surrounded by mountain and vegetation all yr long so low power hand held radios don't provide the absolute coverage you might need. There are a few ham rptrs around there but I don't think I would trust my life to them. It would be best to get a ham ticket but in the case of an emergency you could use the radio to get help without the ticket.

It's not quite that simple, I'm afraid. You need a license, not only to make it legal, but to know what you are doing on an amateur frequency--especially attempting to use repeaters.

Handheld amateur band radios are not simple (or cheap) devices, where you just have to turn it on, push a button, and talk. Frequencies have to be programmed in and you must know where the repeaters are and if it's likely you could access them from your particular location.

Operating VHF/UHF repeaters require knowledge of what the repeater offset is, what sub-tone codes are required to access the machine, what the protocol is for making a call (you must give your callsign first) and how the autopatch works (what keypad sequences are needed to be entered to operate the patch, or even if it is an autopatch repeater). Improper (or unlicensed) operation will most likely prompt the repeater control operator to shut off your attempts.

There are lots of sources for help in getting a license and learning what you need to know and newcomers are warmly welcomed and assisted by the many hams in the Tahoe area. But unlicensed operations are not tolerated well by hams on their bands and won't get very far trying to fake it.

Type in your zip code. You should get a list of all amateur radio operators in your area. Ask one of them, they should know the area the repeaters. What I'm saying, Who better to help you get started then

I put up 9913 maybe about 5-8 years ago for my 2 Meter beam. When it was new, I measured 2 dB loss after I had all the connectors on it before I installed it (90') and I haven't noticed that it has deteriorated, but I was very meticulous about installing the connectors and how I installed them (going up under a box to the outside relays 1 horiz and 1 vert). I have been happy with it, I am sure if there is water in it, I would have noticed it by now. However if the LMR400 has better specs, go for it.

I concur with what Bob says. You will get very sporadic signals from both Ham & cellular. What he's describing is probably not a cheap thing, so check it out before scraping all ideas though. Something is better than nothing.

The introdustion of this half licence has been an unmitigated failure. I am sick of being interrupted whilst in conversation by " break break" and "QSK" I predict that the pattern will follow what happened on VHF and UHF where the bands were infested by morons having passed a watered down test, the Amateurs deserted it leaving band noise and a temporary increase in RSGB funds.
I'm considering packing it in after about 22 years.

Mater of fact it will. Not by much, but still 0.4 db at 440 is an advantage where I'll take any I can get.

Even then I'd pick the larger LMR cables if purchasing new cable in that expense range.
LMR 600 ($1.19) is a good UHF cable if the runs are not too long and the connectors are about a half to a third the cost of 7/8ths Heliax connectors.

However you could go to LMR-900 (bout $4.00 a foot)which is pretty much the same as heliax in performance...It will make much sharper radius bends without damage and the connectors are only slightly less than the ones for the Heliax.

> > is prohibitive for most hams.
What? $85 plus for 7/8ths UHF Heliax connectors is high...<:-)) That was for just one and I think the price has gone up substantially since I purchased the last two for the repeater.

Type UHF Male for LMR 600 is $26

But not the future of Ham Radio. Remember that "amateur radio" is lumped in with CB as "hobby radio" by the dog, the RA, and part of its dinner, the RSCB.

The M3/CB callsign is only part of the future if it is allowed to remain.

That depends entirely on whether she has an interest in, and is motivated by, technical matters. However, for as long as she holds an M3/CB licence where operation is limited to type-approved equipment, there is no way for us to disambiguate the situation.

Please don't do that.

My original posting was intended to address the issue of degeneration (brought on in the main by the RSCB), and to solicit ideas to halt the degeneration.

Could we, for example, conceive amongst ourselves a standard design for an HF radio that could be constructed by anyone, and for about £300? Such a target might be unreachable now, but given the march of progress (march, not step backwards as is the M3/CB facility) suitable DSP chips will be available cheaply in a couple of years' time. There are ways of future proofing such a design against technical changes and obsolescence, such as defining the input to the audio amp as phono-plug, and 1mW into

Sorry, I missed W6DKN's original question...

It was Belden cable and the connectors were silver-plated. It worked quite well but I was still quite surprised at the losses. Connector installation should have been fine... been doing it for 50 years including about 12 years professionally.

Absolutely!

I spent some time on 40m SSB on Saturday and Sunday. Between every 'over' on every QSO, there was a chorus of "break break" from M3's, trying to interrupt a conversation to which they had nothing whatsoever to contribute.

Why, in the name of reason, can they not call CQ themselves, or answer someone else's CQ call, or wait until the end of a QSO before butting in?

I ignored them all after a while. Other people are beginning to do the same.

The RSGB/RA plan is to take out all of the Foundation level syllabus from the Intermediate level and all of the Foundation and Intermediate level syllabi from the Full level (aka RAE). To do the full diet you will need to take all three tiers. The Intermediate level syllabus is being designed now, so I think it is already too late to change this basic plan. Since the plan is for all levels to include practical as well as theoretical (exam) elements, the exam on its own will not be a complete qualification. The RSGB was forced into doing something when the C&G declined to renew the contract for the RAE, which expires at the end of next year. The new Intermediate course/exam will be run from the end of 2002, with the new Full from the end of 2003. If the traditional or 'tick-box' RAE is to continue beyond the end of 2003 then it will be necessary to find an organisation to set and mark it. It is already difficult to find exam centres in many parts of the U.K. for the RAE as the C&G have fairly demanding standards for such centres and the costs of registration, moderation etc. are far beyond what could possibly be justified for a single exam with only a few candidates per centre. Local radio clubs are very unlikely to get a registration as a C&G of London exam centre. There are no obvious alternatives to the C&G to set and hold an exam style qualification.

The RSGB/RA seem to be replacing the effort required to pass a Morse test with the effort needed to complete a series of courses with practical, operating and exam elements. The introduction of real operating experience to the training scheme must be a good thing, surely, especially in view of the furore caused in this group (uk.radio.amateur) by a little CB jargon. It is very different, but not necessarily very much worse.

Chason doesn't have a amateur radio license, and is really too stupid to get one. So why is he here? Just to flame.
He could care less about amateur radio, he works for Honeywell, and had to sign an Employee ethics agreement :

Honeywell's Integrity and Compliance program reflects our vision and values. It helps our employees, representatives, contractors, consultants and suppliers worldwide comply with a high standard of business conduct. Honeywell employees are proud of their company's strong reputation for ethical conduct; this program helps protect that reputation.

At the core of the Integrity and Compliance program is Honeywell's CODE OF BUSINESS CONDUCT. All agents, consultants, contractors, representatives, suppliers, and employees of Honeywell are ultimately responsible for conducting themselves in an ethical manner in compliance with applicable laws. Forget about CB's, handheld won't get you much coverage and besides unless you're by a highway it's not likely someone will be listening for a distress call.

If there is repeater coverage in the area where you want to hike, then a 2 metre ham radio will probably do the trick most of the time. As someone else suggested here, go to http://www.qrz.com/i/names.html and find out who is a ham operator in your area and they'll be able to help you much better than any of us here.

Maybe you could get a local ham to scout out the area where you hike with their radio to see if it's worth it for you to invest the time and money in ham equipment and passing your license. You might be surprised at the repeater coverages.

I've personally used a repeater in the adirondacks to call in a rescue for a lost child a few years ago and the local hams were extremely helpfull and professional. They had the local Rangers over in a flash and the kid was found within a few hours.

My 2 cents...

Some of them do, Walt. You just don't notice them. Which is as it should be. I think it's only a small minority who are so abominably behaved. I wish the RA could do something about them, but, as they are not annoying the paying customers, there is no profit in it, and nothing gets done. :-(

All good responses thusfar. I agree, forget CB.

An EPIRB would be very affective, as mentioned previously. But it might take a couple of days for your signal to work it's way thru the sattelites, FAA, local authorities, and ultimately to a SAR (search and rescue) group. Can you wait this long? A cellular telephone or amateur radio would be faster.

Key to both Amateur Radio and cellular telephones is understanding how radio waves propogate. For VHF and UHF it's basically line of sight. I know this is an oversimplification but in a general sense it's true. Getting your ham radio license will teach you all about this. This means that the receiving station needs to be on your side of the hill, or you need to hike to the top of the hill. You must know where the local cellphone towers and Amateur repeaters are located, this is crucial information.

Don't bother trying to use Amateur Radio gear without knowing what you are doing, it would not work. It's difficult to grasp while in the comfort of your own home, let a alone when you are lying in the woods with a broken leg. Again, getting your ham radio license will teach you all about this.

Sometimes I take a cell phone and sometimes a 2-meter HT. It depends on the area. In the past I've taken Amateur HF gear along for doing CW, but my code is getting pretty rusty so it stays at home now. I can't make any comments specifically on Tahoe.

Ok what has EC standards got to do with type approval? As I understand it EC Standards could be a simple CE mark which is not worth the paper its printed on. Nowhere does it mention Type Approval.
Also you seem to have conveniently ignored the referenc to 'Kit bulding' which certainly does _NOT_ make it a CB licence

I don't know but I wish the folks in this NG would not be so quick to recommend "getting a ham radio" everytime someone requires occasional communication outside the range of FRS or CB. They make it sound like getting a fishing permit.

Dear ARRL,

I don't know if this fellow (see below) is a member of your organization or not, but he is certainly making a nuisance of himself in the rec.radio.cb newsgroup by continually advertising his "10 meter amps" to CBers.

I thought hams were supposed to police themselves? If so, someone should take this disgrace to amateur radio aside and let him know what harm he's doing to the citizens band.

Sincerely,

Aaron H. Voobner

There are a few models of "Back Packer" low power, HF radios that would be suitable.
Most (all ?) of them are CW (code) only so knowldge of code would be required.

High frequency (7 or 14 MHz) would get out from most any place.

It is linear simply because that is the scale they wish to use. Putting it on a logarithmic scale is certainly possible.

??? What are you talking about? There's no such thing as a "log. power law" and anything that can be expressed in numbers can be converted to a logarithm of some kind, including pay. What you call "log. power law" is nothing but a ratio of two power measurements over the same impedance. Base 10 is used because it is easy to work with and easy to visualize on scales and graphs, but it could be any other base. Decibels describe nothing but ratios of two numbers, that is all. They are not a basic unit of measure like Volt, Ohm and such.
The reason they're used in power measurement is because it is easier to work with 60 dB than with expressions like P1= 100000 P2, i.e. it reduces the enormous linear scale to a readable logarithmic one.

The guy was right because he wanted to point out that 1 dB is not insignificant when taken personally, and one

That was my thinking. I built a few different QRP (low power) radios for the 30-meter band. The entire setup (radio, battery pack, key, and dipole antenna) weighed one pound. I used it a couple of times in the field and it all worked fine.

Yet this rig presented a unique problem, the signal went too far. If you broke your leg in Nowhere, New York you could talk with someone in say Texas or Europe. I suppose this is better than nobody, but it's usefulness is greatly diminished after the first skip. Of course if you were in a very remote region of the world this would be great.

The solution to this problem is to move to a lower band (with a subsequently larger and heavier antenna) or just use 2-meters. I chose the latter.

I bought some of the 9913F when it first came out about 1995, and likewise was disappointed in the performance vs specifications. From my as-built notes:

2.44 dB/100' @ 144 MHz

For comparison, I had also measured some "special" Teflon double shielded Belden RG8/U (Ethernet cable?) that I picked up surplus for $0.25/foot (wishing I bought more) and found 2.38 dB/100 @ 144 MHz. The odd-ball surplus RG8/U cable is just as good (at 2M) and cost one third of the RG9913F. I recently stripped off the cables from the tower. The 9913F looks ready for a junk heap after 5 years, the surplus teflon stuff looks like new.

At the time, I called Belden concerned that my type N connectors were to blame. Belden wasn't too concerned about the connectors I was using, saying that the cable losses were "typical". In other words, don't get too impressed by the catalog spec.

I wanted to add a comment about a mode of communication used mostly by the military. It's called NVIS (Near Vertical Incidence Skywave). You basically lay an HF antenna on the ground and pump a kilowatt into it.
The signal goes pretty much straight up then bounces straight down.
This lets you talk to someone in the next valley over, while hiding you from enemys with radio direction finding gear on the ground.

This would be great for us backpackers, if someone else carried the amplifier and generator.

I am afraid you will discover real 9913 isn't any more flexible. About 1 meter radius is about all it is good for. What you have lost track of is one of the reasons it has such low losses is that isn't very flexible. That allows the use of dielectric materials with lower losses.

The The foam inner dielectric is much lower loss at UHF frequencies then solid plastic, and the solid core has lower losses then stranded, and the nice big center conductor has a nice big surface area, which is where the energy actually travels anyway.

The lowest loss cables aren't flexible at ALL.....

Mention should be made of the ARRL Wilderness Protocol. This encourages hams to listen on 2-meters once an hour for distress signals. Go here for a little more information:

http://www.liscar.org/wilderne.htm

So a 2-meter radio can be affective without a repeater, if there's another radio amateur in the area.

Oddly enough, that HF antenna and the kilowatt generator was exactly what was used 30 years ago in the US Army, actually mostly for the Forward Air Controller to be able to call in the B-52 strike. Of course, I was only a tiny child at the time.

Actually I think Microsoft has still a few bugs to work out. That translates

"I sniffled above to the police a post of Internet".

And what's with WiseAss? How can anyone be that boring and stoopid at the

I, too, was not at all happy with the actual Belden stuff, but the "improved" 9913F like Cable Xperts sells is a "different animal" altogether... I have several runs that have been up over 5 years in the Mohave Desert heat and sun exposure, and they are still in excellent shape.
I also have 3 runs that have been direct buried (no pvc, etc) for about 3 years now, and they still test out fine.

You can usually find the print editions on eBay. Or the complete set can be ordered on CD-ROM from http://www.arrl.org. Nice to have.

"Type Approval" is synonymous with "EC standards". ie, if it

WRONG! Decibels describe the ratio of two _POWERS_.
That the ratio is dimensionless is neither here nor there,
for it is the fundamental definition that _POWERS_

WRONG! Decibels describe the ratio of two _POWERS_.
That the ratio is dimensionless is neither here nor there,
for it is the fundamental definition that _POWERS_ are being compared.

Warning! Do not feed the META_TROLL! Comments such as the above are likely to institute a childish

Hi,
I would like some functions of the NHRC 10 repeater controller to change for German needs (without phone funtion, etc.).
Therefore I search for this controller the source code.
Can anybody help me?
Thanks in advance.

Sadly, on Tuesday afternoon, I heard my first evidence of MM3s using CB lingo on the GB3ED (Edinburgh) 70cm repeater. I didn't catch the whole QSO but it was indeed two MM3 stations asking each other for their "20" and using words such as "Come on!" and "Good Bud". And then, one of them played some music over the repeater - the first time I have ever heard this done.

Having said that, after they had cleared off, two more elderly old hands came on the repeater, didn't give their callsigns and muttered something about how GB3ED was being inundated with "bloody nutters".....

Not so.

CE marking, which is the current EC standard, is very definitely not type approval. CE marking is self certified by the manufacturer, type approval needs testing by an authorised external tester by a specific method. A CE mark _does_not_ indicate type approval. A CE mark just requires ordinary design and the cost of printing the mark, no mandatory testing at all. Type approval will cost many tens of thousands of pounds per design for the testing and would probably double (at least) the cost of Amateur Radios.

The RSGB/RA plan is to take out all of the Foundation level syllabus from the Intermediate level and all of the Foundation and Intermediate level syllabi from the Full level (aka RAE). To do the full diet you will need to take all three tiers. The Intermediate level syllabus is being designed now, so I think it is already too late to change this basic plan. Since the plan is for all levels to include practical as well as theoretical (exam) elements, the exam on its own will not be a complete qualification. The RSGB was forced into doing something when the C&G declined to renew the contract for the RAE, which expires at the end of next year. The new Intermediate course/exam will be run from the end of 2002, with the new Full from the end of 2003. If the traditional or 'tick-box' RAE is to continue beyond the end of 2003 then it will be necessary to find an organisation to set and mark it. It is already difficult to find exam centres in many parts of the U.K. for the RAE as the C&G have fairly demanding standards for such centres and the costs of registration, moderation etc. are far beyond what could possibly be justified for a single exam with only a few candidates per centre. Local radio clubs are very unlikely to get a registration as a C&G of London exam centre. There are no obvious alternatives to the C&G to set and hold an exam style qualification.

The RSGB/RA seem to be replacing the effort required to pass a Morse test with the effort needed to complete a series of courses with practical, operating and exam elements. The introduction of real operating experience to the training scheme must be a good thing, surely, especially in view of the furore caused in this group (uk.radio.amateur) by a little CB jargon. It is very different, but not necessarily very much worse.

Not so, I'm afraid! The RA may have had to consider alternatives, but the national society did not HAVE to do anything. The RA could have implemented anything compatible with its International obligations - the 'Morse appreciation' springs to mind here. That the national society CHOSE to act might have been the result of a number of possible drivers, not the least among them a large amount of self-interest

Yes, of course there will need to be continuity. But you are suggesting that there are no alternatives to the rather formal C&G approach. A system could be devised to set and hold the (full) RAE on-line, for example, it could be done 24/7 fashion, on-demand and in real-time, with credit-card payment, automatic script marking, and the issuing of a results slip copied to SSL/RA. It could be run through clubs or done privately, witnessed by two authorised club officers using a digital-signature approach. It could even be held at weekends at Potty Bar! The national society could have suggested this, but one can see reasons why they didn't! Lack of control of this method of entry being one, I guess. There could be others.......

>The RSGB/RA seem to be replacing the effort required to pass a Morse >test with the effort needed to complete a series of courses with >practical, operating and exam elements. The introduction of real operating >experience to the training scheme must be a good thing.....

This is strange indeed! A series of examined training courses to enter a hobby that has as a main reason for its existence....self-training!! Am I the only one to find this a strange approach? As far as "self-training in communications" is concerned the contribution of the practical element is minimal, if the increasingly-common black-box approach is maintained, and almost irrelevant to the M3 licence.

There are many things that could be discussed here. One gets the impression that - even if this had taken place - openness and availability for the general good were not to the fore. The so-called progressive system could wind up damaging amateur radio beyond recovery. The M3 licence has had mixed results so far.

Thank you for taking the trouble to put together a response.

Type approval would raise the cost of ready made equipment - but not by the amount you suggest. Larger manufacturers are now able to certify their own (radio) kit to the relevant ETS standard, which is equivalent to type approval - it no longer requires external testing if the manufacturer is accredited to do his own.

Amateur Radio Newsline™ Report 1287 - April 12 2002

(Note: Producer Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF is away on business this week. ARNewsline™ Report 1287 was produced and recorded in New Orleans Louisiana by Don Wilbanks, KC5MFA)

Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1287 with a release date of Friday, April 12th, 2002 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T.

Another threat to the 2.4 Gigahertz band. This time it comes from the FCC. That story is first on Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1287 coming your way right now.

RADIO LEGISLATION: FCC PROCEEDING PUTS NEW PRESSURE ON AMATEUR MICROWAVE BAND

The FCC has again targeted Amateur Radio's primary allocation at 2390 to 2400 MHz for possible sharing or use by other radio services. Newslines Norm Seeley, KI7UP, has the details:

According to the ARRL Letter, a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking known as WT Docket 02-55 has been presented by the FCC. The Letter says that it invites comments on either sharing the 2390 to 2400 MHz band with public safety services being displaced from 800 MHz or moving amateurs elsewhere.

The N-P-R-M identifies 2390 to 2400 MHz as an "Unlicensed P-C-S Band." Unlicensed, asynchronous P-C-S devices were authorized there in 1995, but Amateur Radio remains primary.

Why the action now? The FCC says that its receiving an increasing number of reports of incidents of harmful interference to public safety systems in the 800 MHz band. To alleviate the problem, the Commission now is looking into restructuring 800 MHz and moving some occupants elsewhere. And 2390 to 2400 MHz could be where those users get moved.

But says the FCC, that’s only one piece of spectrum being considered. One place its not looking is the adjacent 2385 to 2390 MHz band. The FCC says it can’t consider 2385 to 2390 MHz because that part of the band is slated to be auctioned off.

This is the second threat to the ham radio allocation in less than a year. Just last summer, the FCC invited comments on its proposals to reallocate some spectrum in the 2390 to 2400 MHz amateur segment for possible use by unspecified mobile and fixed services. The Commission has also proposed 2390 to 2400 MHz and other bands to support the introduction of advanced wireless systems, including so-called third-generation or 3 G mobile systems. The FCC also has asked for comments on whether amateurs could share the band with government users.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Norm Seeley, KI7UP.

WT Docket 02-55 was released in mid-March but not yet available for public response. The FCC will officially invite comments for 30 days after the NPRM is published in the Federal Register. Reply comments will be due 60 days following publication in the Federal Register. The ARRL says that it plans to file comments in this proceeding. (ARRL)

RADIO LAW: FCC MAY MANDATE FASTER CONVERSION TO DTV

Federal regulators may look for ways to mandate faster transition to all-digital television if the TV industry fails to move quickly enough on its own. This, according to a Federal Communications Commission official speaking on Friday April 5th.

The comments are from Ken Ferree, chief of the FCC’s Media Bureau. And what he has said adds emphasis to a proposal by the agency's chairman that aims to bring digital TV to more American viewers.

FCC Chairman Michael Powell has challenged everyone involved in the digital conversion, including television networks, local network-affiliated stations, cable and satellite service providers and equipment manufacturers to voluntarily meet a series of goals on the way to a 2006 deadline.

Accordng to Ferree, Powell’s proposal, which was sent to Capitol Hill and the industry on Thursday April 4th is an effort by the FCC to pressure the industry into voluntary compliance. He says that Chairman Powell believes exposing more consumers to the technology of digital television will stimulate them to demand more and thus jump-start development. (Published report)

FCC TO UTILITY: STOP INTERFERING WITH HAM RADIO

The FCC has told GPU Energy Corporation of Morristown, New Jersey to clean up the harmful interference that the utility is causing to several area radio amateurs. In a letter to GPU Energy the FCC said that incidental interference from its Part 15 devices to operations of authorized stations cannot be tolerated and that use of the devices cannot resume until the harmful condition is corrected.

According to the W5YI Report, those hams complaining have been unable to find a satisfactory remedy through the GPU complaint resolution process. They turned to the FCC which investigated. Now the FCC has told GPU that unresolved interference complaints may constitute a rules violation that could lead to fines. The FCC urged GPU Energy to contact the ARRL for advice in resolving the issues. (W5YI)

INDUSRTY NEWS: NEW DEALER & MANUFACTURERS GROUP FORMED

During the informal annual industry meeting of Amateur Radio manufacturers held in Milwaukee, Wisconsin and hosted by AES during Superfest 2002, the industry decided to create a formalized and official industry group for dealers and manufacturers.

The American Association of Radio Enthusiasts (AARE) was formed as a non-profit corporation for the promotion of amateur radio and emergency communications into areas outside of amateur radio and to provide a conduit for dealers and manufacturers to exchange ideas, to work together on projects, to help ham radio grow and to double the number of hams in 5 years.

Members of this group will be the manufacturers and dealers of radio and emergency products. The group will be ‘the voice’ of the manufacturers and dealers in radio, much like the American Radio Relay League is the voice of each ham radio operator. (AARE)

THE CONVENTION SCENE: HAMFESTS ARE SAFE

The ham radio convention season is in full swing, but some radio amateurs are asking if it’s safe to attend them. President Bush says that we have to put 9/11 behind us and all Americans have to resume normal life. Most of us have, and the shows are going on. But regardless if it’s the OSCARS or a tiny hamfest, event planners are now taking a closer look at show security. This includes the giant Dayton Hamvention. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ, looks at what they are doing to keep you safe as you enjoy ham radio’s greatest show on Earth:

If you travel by air, or even visit your local police department, you have seen heightened security measures in place since the terror attacks of last September 11th. And while nobody expects an al-Quida sponsored assault on a hamfest, law enforcement and planners of even the smallest events cannot dismiss the possibility either.

A few weeks ago, the Dayton Hamvention mailed out a promotional flyer. One of the items it contained was an area dealing with show security. In reality, what was shown is nothing more than an update to what's been in place for several years, but as the magic weekend of May 17th to the 19th approaches, its important to take a look at what the Hamvention will be doing to make your stay safe and secure.

The rules in effect are the same we have all been living with since 911. Be prepared to show photo I-D upon request. Also be prepared to have vehicles, merchandise and personal items searched. This may be especially true of large containers such as backpacks.

Do you carry a weapon for self protection? Sorry, but no weapons will be permitted into the area. Hamvention says that even applies if you have a license to carry a concealed weapon. Leave the weapon at home. You won't be permitted in with it.

Nor can you bring in any ammunition, explosives, chemical or incendiary devices. Also banned are alcoholic beverages, drugs and burglary tools.

This year there will be tighter scrutiny of vendors as they bring truckloads of merchandise into the flea market and exhibit halls. Since most of you will arrive well after merchandise is in place, this will have little impact on the average attendee.

And very important. Everyone must display at all times, so it's clearly visible, a Hamvention badge or ticket.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Henry Feonberg, K2SSQ.

Garry Matthews, KB8GOL, is Executive Director of Hamvention 2002. He recently told CQ Magazine that the planners are trying to take common-sense precautions to provide security for a show of this size. Matthews adds that 99% of Hamvention attendees will not notice anything different from past years. The most important thing is to know that Hamvention 2002 and every other ham radio show is doing everything to keep you safe. (CQ)

THE CONVENTION SCENE: NO BIG ACTS AT HAMVENTION 2002 BANQUET

Speaking about Hamvention 2002, the planners say that you have spoken. As a result there will be no big name acts at this years grand awards banquet. Jim Graver, KB8PSO, is the General Chairman of Hamvention 2002:

Graver: "This year we are returning to tradition of years past and will not have a post banquet entertainment."
--

A few years ago, the Hamvention added concerts by top talents to its famed Saturday night gathering. Among those who have appeared are Joe Walsh and the Smothers Brothers. And even though the entertainment has been well received, there has been a call from the ham community to get back to basics. And says Graver, so it shall be.

Graver: “We have gotten feedback from our attendees saying that they would like to have the same banquet that they used to have years ago. So, in 2002, the Hamvention is going to deliver just that: A banquet with great food, a celebration of the award winners, fantastic guest speakers and of course prize drawings.”

Jim Graver has a lot more to say about Hamvention 2002 and what will be happening this year. You can hear it in Part 2 of Hap Holly’s exclusive interview with KB8PSO. Just take your web browser over to www.rainreport.com and click on this weeks special. Or call area code 847-827-7246. That’s 847-827-R-A-I-N. (ARNewsline(tm))

RADIO LAW: DIREC-TV SUES RADIO PERSONALITY OVER ALLEGED SIGNAL PIRACY

DIREC-TV Inc. is taking a New York City radio personality to court. This as it files suit against WFAN radio personality Sid Rosenberg alleging he violated the Digital Millennium Copyright Act and the Federal Communications Act by stealing its programming.

DIREC-TV says that on March 11th, while talking with Don Imus on the "Imus in the Morning" show on MSNBC, Rosenberg allegedly said he had used an illegally modified access card to steal DIREC-TV.

Although air personality Imus is said have told him what the was doing is "dishonest" and constitutes "stealing," Rosenberg allegedly continued to "boast" about using the illegally modified access card to watch movies and sports.

DIREC-TV says that with this lawsuit it is sending Mr. Rosenberg a very clear message. One that says using an illegally modified access card to receive DIRECTV programming is stealing and it violates federal law. Larry Rissler, vice president of DIREC-TV's Signal Integrity office adds that the company has a transcript of the program and what he calls Mr. Rosenberg's brazen comments on national television of stealing DIREC-TV programming. NAMES IN THE NEWS: STEVE DIMSE K4HG HONORED BY NOAA

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration has named Steve Dimse, K4HG, of Tucson Amateur Packet Radio, as recipient of one of its Environmental Hero Awards for the year 2002. Dimse, of Cudjoe Key, Florida is being honored for his volunteer efforts in real-time citizen weather observations.

The data collected by Dimse and other volunteers is used for numerical weather prediction research at NOAA's Forecast Systems Laboratory and for training and research at the National Center for Atmospheric Research. In Florida, the data is used by National Weather Service’s Weather Forecast Offices for local area prediction. It is also used at Kennedy Space Center for weather prediction in support of launch operations.

Each year the agency presents a number of Environmental Hero Awards to people who don't work for NOAA, but have contributed a great deal to NOAA's ongoing job of providing environmental services to the citizens of the United States. For 2002, Dimse was one of five people chosen for this honor. (NOAA)

NAMES IN THE NEWS: GM3ITN INVITED TO FAULKLAND ISLANDS

Les Hamilton, GM3ITN, has been invited by the Falkland Islands government to visit the islands for the 20th anniversary of their emancipation. Hamelton played an important role in making the liberation happen. Jeramy Boot, G4NJH, has more.

It was Les Hamilton who first informed the UK government that the islands had been invaded. On the 2nd of April 1982, he received first-hand reports that the Argentine flag was flying over the islands. Les was therefore the first person outside the islands and Argentina to know that an invasion had taken place. He phoned the Ministry of Defense, who informed then Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

GM3ITN remained in contact with VP8 stations even during the period of occupation, passing vital information on to the MoD. Les and his wife Pilar also intercepted Argentinean radio communications, which Pilar - a university lecturer in the Spanish language - translated for the MoD.

Jeramy Boot,G4NJH.

The Hamiltons will be flying to Port Stanley for the 20th anniversary celebrations which take place on June 14th. Until recently, Les Hamilton's role had been a closely-guarded secret, known only by senior British politicians, military intelligence officers and a select group of radio amateurs. (GB2RS)

HAMVENTION 2002: THE HARA ARENA STORY

Earlier in this weeks newscast we spoke about plans for this years Dayton Hamvention. As most of you are aware, Dayton’s HARA Arena has been the home of the Hamvention for many years. As a result the HARA has become as famous as the show it hosts. But there’s a lot more to the HARA story than just the Dayton Hamvention as we learn from Amateur News Weekly’s Jack Parker, W8ISH:

The HARA Complex is as unique as its history. In 1956, a dance hall called the Wampler Ballarena was built as the cornerstone of what is now a six building exhibition center. Originally, the location was a thriving, family-owned fruit orchard. Today it is a thriving, family-owned entertainment, conference and exhibition facility.

Very few entertainment complexes are privately owned. Even fewer are family owned. You see HARA was named by founding brothers Harold and Ralph Wampler. The arena building, built in 1964, ushered in entertainment to the Dayton area never seen before. The Rolling Stones, Elton John, The Who, Neil Diamond, The Beatles, The Grateful Dead have all played at the facility.

The HARA has survived and prospered by combining the professionalism of one of the areas largest exhibition centers with the care and personal concern of a family business. Because of this the HARA has been the catalyst to successful hockey in Ohio's Miami Valley. The Dayton Gems and later, the Dayton Bombers, have both enjoyed success while on the HARA ice. But, most agree, the one event that has put HARA ARENA on the map worldwide, is the Dayton Hamvention. It’s where the Amateur Radio Community and a family owned business meet to carry on a wonderful tradition.

For Amateur News Weekly, Im Jack Parker, W8ISH

Today, the HARA Arena remains the home to many high profile events for the Dayton area. This includes Disney On Ice, Sesame Street Live, the Silver Sticks Hockey team and of coarse the Dayton Hamvention. And, contrary to rumors on the Internet, the Hamvention says that it’s there to stay. (ANW)

EMBARRASSING TECHNOLOGY: SPYWARE DEBACLE DISCLOSED

Call it a gotch’ya. This as thousands of Internet users who thought they were installing a program for sharing music and other computer files apparently accepted a program at the same time that tracked their Web surfing habits.

The tracking program, or spyware, linked Internet users to an on-line sweepstakes game called Click-Till-U-Win. But the site was also collecting data on other recent cyberspace visits by the surfer’s computer.

Spyware is a clandestine computer program downloaded to your computer without your knowledge that can track your Internet-surfing habits without your consent. These types of programs exist in the open elsewhere on the Internet, but in this case there was no disclosure and no option to reject.

Now at least three companies are posting new versions of their software on the web without the tracking programs. And one of the web sites is actually offering visitors to its site an apology. (Computing Technology)

INTERNATIONAL - UK: BRITISH HAM RESCUED BY HAM RADIO

Turning to international news, word that a ham radio operator and his wife on board a yacht that ran aground have been rescued. This, thanks to the efforts of radio amateurs on the Maritime Mobile Service Net.

According to reports from the ARRL and GB2RS, Dave Beane, G0TAG, and his wife Sara, were aboard the pleasure craft Tao when it ran aground on a reef off the north coast of Cuba on the 26th of March. Apparently their initial call for assistance to the Cuban authorities had no response.

So they turned to ham radio and the 20 meter Maritime Mobile Services Net. Radio amateurs in the United States and in the Virgin Islands were able to alert the authorities in Havana via the US Coast Guard and the Swiss Embassy in Washington. Later reports via amateur radio indicated the couple had been rescued and that efforts to salvage the vessel were under way. (ARRL, GB2RS, Q-News)

SPACE AND SCIENCE: SPACE REFERIGERATOR

A NEWSLINE FOLLOW-UP: A POLITICALLY DISORGANIZED 11 METER CLASS D SERVICE - PART 3

Over the past two weeks, Amateur Radio Newsline’s David Black, KB4KCH, has been looking at the not so political side of 11 meter Class-D C-B. In this third and final installment, David explores the reasons that there is little chance of C-B ever becoming a major two way radio political power:

The Citizens band radio service has a unique distinction. For all the years it has existed...for all the people who have bought and used 11 meter radios...for all of the public exposure CB has obtained TV, radio and the movies, 11 meter Class D C-B remains the only major radio service in the U-S without political representation in Washington. No support either before the FCC or Congress.

In the mid 19-70s, the Government held conferences to find better ways to use C-B. Today's Government leaders give it no attention. Congress and local governments are tired of consumer complaints against C-B operators running illegal power and who interfere with all sorts of consumer electronic gear. As a result, federal regulations are now in place that give almost any law enforcement official the ability to shut a C-B operator down. The C-B operator can appeal, but it is a long, and costly process.

So why is nobody on 11 meters seriously attempting to organize users of the band? As one former CB enthusiast suggests: Perhaps it's the sheer diversity of the CB radio community. CB has over-the-road truckers, sidebanders, emergency monitors, numerous private nets, the occasional family highway trip, and the usual assortment of troublemakers. Each of these groups operate separately and independently of the others with apparently little knowledge or regard for other uses of the band.

Whatever the real reason or reasons, one simple fact remains. When it comes to having a voice before the FCC and Congress, CB radio is out in the cold. Chances seem slim it will ever have such a voice. And without that, C-B operators like Gary D. White in Illinois are likely to continue to face Disorderly Conduct charges for disturbing anyone by transmitting on the 11 meter Class D Citizens Band.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm David Black, KB4KCH.

The silence was deafening.

I think the EC standards are being tackled further down this thread so I will leave that one.

I am still unclear how you can define the FL as a CB licence when it clearly states that the licensee can build 'commercial' kits? As far as I can see this very much distinguishes it from a CB license. From what I have read of your postings your definition seems to be based around that fact that FL holders can only use Commercially manufacturered, EC approved, equipment but does not take into account the 'kit' element.

Can anyone point me to the best repeaters for the Adirondacks in NY (High Peaks Region)? Or, south of Lake Placid and north of Newcomb.

Thanks for your help.

4246. Is Ham Radio a cult?

Ham Radio is not the only possible perspective on Amateur Radio. There are some people that like radio technology, but do not like "Ham" radio.

My initial exposure was through some mobile radio troubleshooting and antenna assembly. I set up radios at mobile locations and troubleshooted and calibrated radios. In my calibrations, I went on the air. It was fun working through the radio circuits and seeing its spectrum. Also, it was fun being part of a mobile team troubleshooting electronics and communicating with the other team members through the radio.

Probably, if my initial exposure was though a Ham radio club, I would not have got exited about radios and would have forgot about it. Hams like to blame the internet for people’s lack of interest in Ham radio. I would say the cult like activities turn many people away.

Here’s what one radio enthusiast (now an rf consultant) had to say. I gave up amateur radio, mainly because it was not what I had expected. The idea , I thought, was to further your abilities in radio with self training etc.. instead it involved lots of clique groups of people, committees and clubs who frowned heavily upon non members who dared to push boundaries independently.

Yes, "Hams" own the spectrum. (And I am grateful for use of the spectrum). Yes, Ham radio has a wide variety of activities and modes. But, to be a "True Ham", you must follow traditional "Ham" conventions. I know this may sound like a troll, but this is my sincere belief. Ham radio has many required beliefs and ways of interaction that it seems like a cult. I can give several example of this.

(1) Strange exclusive terminology
One sign that Ham radio is a cult is all that unnecessary terminology. A "rig" is a radio setup. This seems childish to me. Also, all those Q abbreviations. . QRP means low power. QST, QSL, QSO. The number 73 seems to mean you are going to end your conversation. All these secret code like abbreviations get confusing. It tends to keep newcomers out. And, they serve no useful practical purpose.

(2) Morse Code
For one thing "Hams" are insistent on using Morse code. Morse is obsolete. The military knows it. The public knows it (hence the "cult" perception). Probably the FCC would eliminate it, but then Hams would protest. (Ironic, isn't it)? Even now that it is 5 words per minute, some Hams want to increase it to 20 words per minute. They made the test easy so you have to know Morse code (you can’t fake that) to advance above Technician, but not the electronics (you can just memorize the questions and answers).

(3) Contests
Also, Hams seem to like "contests". Contests are not what you would expect the word to mean. A "contest" is represents how many people you can contact in a given time period. This to me is more a measure of rote operating skills than competitive spirit.

The awards are for "how many", not "how difficult". There are awards for contacting every US state (the "Worked All States" award). This seems to prove you waste a lot of time, more than it proves your radio skills. Awards for how long you talk ("Rag Chewer's Club award). It seems like almost all Ham awards are like this.

Direction finding activities, "Foxhunts", seem to be the only Ham competition that could be fun. It is a good measure of rf skills and gamesmanship.

(4) Dislike of "CB"
I told a ham I got a CB radio. He said he felt sorry for me. What is there to feel sorry about? CB people want to use the radio too. Also there is FRS. More personal freedom for particular needs. This is good. But why the disdain for people that use a CB? Why the feelings of superiority? Even if you do know more, why should you dislike people who use another band for another purpose?

==========

Good points all. It's what you make of it really.

The Q signals, as well as things like 73 are from abbreviations used in Morse Code, to speed-up communications. It's really not proper to use them in voice communications, but some people get carried away. There are jerks in Amateur Radio I suppose just as in society as a whole.

Morse Code is not dead, nor will it ever be. When band conditions are bad, too bad for voice and data, CW is the most effective mode, likewise for low power transmissions. Morse code requires the least power of all modes for establishing communications. This is how guys are able to talk around the world on a radio powered my a lemmon, potatoe, or button-cell battery. You could not do this using voice or data modes. BTW, low power communications are another ham pursuit (called QRP). It's really very cool when you think about it. How far can you talk on a few microwatts, on a radio made of less than 20 parts? You might be surprised. It's certainly a challenge.

Contesting is all about operating skill, speed, and endurance. DX'ing (trying to contact distant places) is a different skill, more to your liking I'm sure.

I use a CB sometimes on highway road trips. I started using CB back when licensing was required. Then it turned into the zoo it is today for the most part. But I see it's use tapering off over the last few year, and that's a good thing. It's more civilized now.

Once you learn and know the ham bands you will know where to find quality communications. For instance the jerks (hams call them "Lids") show up on 2-meters during rush-hour traffic, and 80-meters in the evening. I guarantee a Lid will post an objectionable reply to me saying this.

9913 works good in the desert. If you live anywhere where there is moisture, it will fail due to moisture (eventually). LMR-400 performs better, is more rugged, and doesn't get water in it. It is easier to attach connectors to as well.

LMR-400 is available from cable experts.

If you buy even a third rate 'ham' book, you will have the Q-codes. I should also add, it is improper to use Q codes in the VHF and UHF bands.
Q codes are for morse code to facilitate ease of communications.

The FCC can't, by International Law, remove all of Morse code. Russia and Germany voted to keep morse code on even their version of Technician. For lower band usage, International Law requires the knowledge of Morse code, the FCC did lower the code speed which, in my opinion, made it easer for people to learn and maintain skills. I personally think we should keep morse code. It isn't obsolete, just not as popular outside of amateur radio.

Whose to say how hard a contact is? QRP is a hard contact. Making a contact with someone on another continent at 5W is pretty tough and very rewarding and deserves all the bragging rights you inherit.

CB isnt hated per say, it's just all the profanity and there is little or no recourse. I don't want my daughter hearing about a truckers experience with a 'lot lizard' on our way to church. I have a CB but removed it because of all the crap on it. Enforce the rules with CB and more people will get on CB and more hams will not have a problem with CB, I know I wouldn't.

How would you like to win a Complete Amateur Radio Station?
Interested? Well, if you come to the International DX Convention in Visalia, CA on Friday - Sunday, April 26-28, 2002, and you buy enough raffle tickets, and you are very very lucky.....

You could walk out with all of this..... (a complete custom dream station, and more.....)

For a HF radio,
How about an ICOM 706MKII, Alinco DX77, Kenwood TS2000, and Yaesu FT1000MP Mark V HF transceivers?

For HF Antennas,
How about a Force 12 XR5 Beam, M2 KT36XA Beam, Cushcraft AW3S, Fulid Motion SteppIR Dipole, World Radio ZX20 Beam, and Butternut HV2 Vertical?

For Cabling,
How about 125 feet of National Wire & Cable premium rotor and coaxial cables?

For a Tower,
How about a US Tower TX-455 (yes, the whole tower)

For a microphone,
How about a Heil Goldline Microphone & and Heil Proset Head Set and a Limited Edition Astatic D-104 Collector's microphone?

For a Key,
How about a Bencher BY-1 Keyer and a Idiom Press LogiKey Iambic Keyer

For Station Accessories,
How about a AOR Multi terminal PSK, RTTY, decoder, Daiwa Watt Meters, a HAL DPX38 RTTY Demodulator, ClearSpeech speakers, DXer Dream Clocks, and Coffee Mugs?

Oh, yeah, and don't forget about,
AEA HF Antenna Analyser, Astron RS35m power supplies, W2IHY 8 Band Audio Equalizer, SGC Stealth Antenna System, and a complete Polyphaser Grounding System?

And of course, for all of these radios and antennas, you will need,
Top Ten Devices, International Radio Filters, and Array Solutions antenna switches,

For your Neighbors,
How about some low pass filters, phone filters, and ear muffs?

For your YL and / or XYL, you will have to have,
Wild Women Pins and collectibles

For Miscellaneous Stuff, that no shack is complete without,
How about a few thousand pre-printed deluxe QSL cards, Collector item ARRL Operating Manual, Collector Item ARRL Antenna Book, and a wide assortment of other books, cd's, and publications?

For Callbooks,
How about your choice of CDROM Callbooks from Buckmaster and Radio Amateur Callbooks?

For Logging and Contesting,
How about logging and contest software from DX4WIN, Writelog, NA, EQF Software, LOGic 5, MiLog, and others?

For HF Mobile Operating,
How about mobile antenna products from HI-Q Antennas, K6MB, W6AAQ, KJ7U, and others?

How about deep deep discount certificates on the purchase of ACOM, ALPHA, and Henry Radio Amplifiers & Tri-ex towers?

For your Reading Pleasure,
How about a life time subscription to World Radio Magazine, and 1 year subscriptions to CQ Magazine, Popular Communications, DX Magazine, QRZ DX, Daily DX, Weekly DX, Low Band Monitor, RTY Journal, and the K1BV Awards Directories?

For VHF / UHF,
How about some VHF / UHF / FRS handheld radios?

For Gift Certificates,
How about gift certificates to Amateur Electronic Supply - Las Vegas, The Wireman, Idiom Press, Peter Dahl Co, and Elecraft?

Interested? Well, come to the International DX Convention, and you may just walk out with all of this stuff, and more.

Today, Thursday marks the two week anniversary of the Dynamic Dou, Dimmy and Mrs. Dimmy, being "guests" of the county. One must surely wish them well in their endeavor to post bond and return to their palatial residence where they will most likely lick their wounds and plot vengeance against those that they feel are responsible for their incarceration. (Not their fault, hey?)

There is, of course, the possibility that their "palace" will no longer be available since during their unscheduled absence the landlord may have evicted them. Tent City for them!

Maybe Roger will let them pitch a tent in his mommy's back yard while they are getting back on their hooves, er...feet.

Watch this as it unfolds. I have a bet that the Dimmys will soon lose their Ham licenses, too, since many of their threats against others were made via Ham Radio and duly documented. Watch for Riley to see where the criminal suit goes and if the Dimmys are found guilty, I suspect that their Ham tickets will be the next to go.

Good riddance to that rubbish.

WRONG! It's nothing like your silly comment about Canada and the USA. In the case of the dB, it's a matter of resorting to the fundamental definitions.

All measured quantities are expressed in numbers, so your second comment is rather silly, OM.

Dear Mr. Voobmer,
I don't suppose it has occured to you that many ham operators go to that cb newsgroup because..they still own citizen band transceivers and enjoy it.
Further, most everyone (with the exception of you of course..) knowing this bit of trivia; these same ham operators may be interested in this equipment.
Just as many in radio-phono newsgroup do not have ham license but are interested in ham receivers.
In short Mr. Voobner.....get a life..

Not according to what I have found by searching on the sites given. Yaesu Musen (AKH) do not seem to have any entries for an HF amateur radio. Maybe I'm doing something wrong Steve, but I think not. Perhaps you could find the FCC ID for an FT1000 (any model). I don't think HF amateur radios are type approved by the FCC despite your assertion. Perhaps someone could look on one to find the FCC ID. It should say 'FCC ID: AKHxxxxxxx' for a Yaesu where 'xxxxxxx' is an alphanumeric string. This is _not_ the same thing as an 'FCC REG #:' number. Kenwood don't seem to have any HF radios either.

Lets all hope that the gruesome twosome will appreciate the free room and board, and decide to stay in the crossbar motel. Of coarse, it's not their fault their there, it's some sort of GIANT conspiracy. The threats that were made on ham radio, alone, would get most ham tickets pulled, but it takes a little extra for the dynamic duo. Thank God for George Arsics.

Amp Supply Co. LA-1000 HF Amp. 160-10m

Have for sale or trade an Amp Supply Co. LA-1000 HF amplifier. Late 80's model, with Ameritron serial placard. Manual states 500-600w output. Tubes are doing about 450 on 80m. Amp is in good shape and working perfectly but has a few scratches. Power switch has been replaced with incorrect but heavy-duty switch. Looking to sell or trade for a Dualband mobile such as TMV-7A or similar. Will only consider Icom, Kenwood and Yaesu mobile ham radios depending on mod availability. Will also consider only Motorola/Radius handhelds or mobiles (Max, GM, M1225, etc, as well. Jedi, Radius or Pro series.) Prefer VHF. U-ship, (will average $20-$35 CONUS).
Thanks and please reply direct,

I am unsure as to how you can make a statement like that? My point is that the FL License allows kits to be built and therefore cannot be classed as a CB license.

No Woger, you'd need to have written "Je me suis plaint ï¿½ la police ï¿½ cause d'un message sur internet". You're welcome.

You got "police" and "internet" right, though. That's not bad, your

There was about a week of activity regarding the alleged incarceration of W4AMP and bride. Now for several days there is nothing. Surely by now there would be information on the net confirming the allegation, yet there is silence.

Is this another "wishful thinking" case, much like the bozo who posted that K1TP had his website pulled by AOL, which story turned out to be laughinly bogus. Several weeks later and 'TP is still there.

"AB Brown" <abbrown@nospammail.com> wrote in message news:a93aas$68n$1@slb1.atl.mindspring.net...
Currently, I am using two amateur radios for communicating: one is the Icom 718 and the other, strictly for 10 meters, is an older Realistic HTX-100. I have used the HTX-100 for about 5 years now and I just obtained the Icom less than 6 months ago. I am puzzled by something though that I was wondering if anyone could address- the noise blanker on the HTX is FAR superior to the one on the Icom. I am wondering why? The Icom was a lot more expensive and I just figured it would have a better blanker. It has AF DSP option, which I tried, and was disappointed. In every case on 10 meters, the HTX receives better due to blanked noise effectiveness.

I doubt I could internally modify the Icom's blanker for better performance so I am wondering if I could add an external, synchronous (or other ?) type noise blanker at the antenna input. I have read a few things about this type of blanker and, apparently by using noise generators, you can match the phase of incoming noise and cancel it out. Any suggestions for a blanker, either internal or external? I understand the synchronous type is better at lower Mhz, but will it work for 10/15 meters?

I believe the main sources of noise at my QTH are computer (of course) and pole transformer noise. The computer noise is easily solved (by turning off my monitor) but I have experienced the transformer noise for many years, and the HTX blanker always nullified it.

Appreciate any suggestions from the groups.

Thanks,
AB

I can't believe that you think us ham's are a causing a disgrace to the "citizens" band by posting an ad selling something. Do you want to see disgrace? Take a listen at the 10 meter band on a HAM radio and listen to all the "hash and trash" that's being transmitted illegaly by the "citizens band" Lets get even simpler. I can go a whole day, or a whole month without hearing one swear word on my local repeater, or one slander towards anybody.
But, oh no, god forbid i say "damn" on the citizens band!
FCC should make it so everybody has to have a license to use CB's.

Call them "HF amps", "10 meter amps", "Broadband amps", whatever you like. We both know they're meant to sell to CBers and be used illegally, so why continue the charade?

A Scientific Wild-A Guess: perhaps that lithium battery is used to preserve the memories, and if it's changed, the memories will be erased unless the main power is present.

That said, I'd weigh my own safety against the minor inconvenience of programming all the memories anew. If you must open up your rig with power applied, at least unplug the mike so you don't key the transmitter by mistake.

Hi there and thanks for reading this!

I am looking for some help in solving the following problem on an Icom IC-2710H dualband mobile radio;

The radio will only TX on VHF. The UHF frequencies can be dialled up but that band cannot be selected as the main band and hence no Tx. When coupling another IC-2710H control head to the radio, the UHF band can be selected as the main band, so I suspect something has been done to the other's control unit. I have tried a CPU reset to no avail.

Any ideas as to how I can fix this??

Thanks in advance!

Regards.

I am unsure as to how you can make a statement like that? My point is that the FL licence is a CB licence because it requires the use of type-approved equipment. Although there is an option for kits to be built, that is not used by any of those who went on the weekend crammer on how-to-knit organised by the RSCB, neither is it used by those who obtained their M3/CB licence in exchange for two Cornflakes' packet tops.

The Cobb County court, in it's infinite wisdom, has denied bail for the gruesome twosome. Also, additional charges in paulding County, have placed an additional hold on their freedom. Yesterday was the two week anniversary of their incarceration, and I'm very proud of them. They've finally found a home. God does work miracles. Thanks George.

Well said

Whilst I may not agree with the FL I am certain that it is not a CB license.

Having been a SWL for many years I cannot reall the last time I heard a station, of any classification, using a homebrew radio, on cw or phone.

You think I should send Riley a copy of the tape in which he screamed that he'll kill me because he killed once and will kill again? It's a wonderfully clear tape which was given to the Passaic County NJ Prosecutor's Office after the Clifton P.D. heard it and suggested I press charges. I felt sorry for O'Brien and didn't follow up. You've heard of someone getting "dip sixed?" This time he's going to do some serious time because of getting "Arsixed."

Hi guys.

Just a quick mail to say I have mirrored my site to improve the downloading capability. Problems with servers can make one site better than the other to download from. I carry a reasonable amount of software for PSK,RTTY,SSTV,SAT, HELL, CW, etc all use the soundcard for comms. MixW software in particular has virtually every mode you can think of, including Packet !.

Take a look at:

www.g3vfp.com/download.html or www.g3vfp.org/download.html

Have fun out there.

Dave.

No, you're just too far away.

Jupiter and Saturn are pretty potent radio sources, but nowhere near the power of the Sun, and they're too far away from Earth to produce more than the faintest static on the most sensitive receivers. It's just a fascinating light show; nothing more serious.

Mr H. has had a VERY clear and explicit tape of that incident for approximately 2 years. I was told "It is added to AMP's file". There are TAPES of AMP actually doing 10 times more than I was even accused of, with nothing done to slow him down. At least they won't have a ham radio in jail. At long last, they've found a home where they won't bother anyone.

The gruesome twosome are still guests of Cobb County with Paulding County wiating in line for their turn. Their bail request was denied yesterday and they have to wait another 30 days for another turn with the judge. If the judge lets them make bail, Paulding County will hopefully give them free room and board. I personally think 30 days in the electric chair would be appropiate, for the crap they have pulled and attempted. Thank God and George Arsics.

I heard that tape. Dimmy was certainly in a rage when he went berserk on you. Unfortunately, that tape will not be relevant since the Aggravated Stalking case deals with another Ham. You would have to look into filing charges and yours would be a separate case altogether.
Dimmy has made his proverbial bed, albeit a steel one, and now he is, as they say, "laying in it." Dimmy, in his dementia, will most likely claim that any/all tapes of him are forgeries, that he is being "set up" by George and I am betting that Dimmy will also go on to claim that George was stalking him.
One must also bet that Dimmy will claim that the assault charge in Paulding County (he is charged with choking his wife and hitting her in the face with a Pepsi bottle and holding her down so she couldn't call 911) is a bogus charge, too.
Jail is a good place for James O'Brien. He did it the old fashioned way. He earned it.

Perhaps not on VHF. However, I operate CW in the QRP sections of the HF/LF bands (using home-brew equipment myself) and I rarely work anything else but people using home-brew equipment. You need to dig a little deeper, OM!

I have certainly not heard a single M3 station using homebrew equipment ... not even a kit. Evidently some of them do not even know how to limit the power of their transmitters to 10 watts, nor do they understand how to measure the power output.

Sad but true. A large number of new M3's have been encouraged into the hobby by friends, family and colleagues who subsequently lend them kit to get on air. I suspect most of this will be kit discarded as it was not up to the job any longer.

Most of it will not be properly tested and I heard one comment which went roughly; "The owner told me that the power settings are a bit dodgy, so I reckon that using the 25 watt setting will only put out about 18 and I will lose the other 8 in the feed cable so I am probably legal".

Making excuses and backpedaling because you lack an education isn't convincing anybody, pissant.

What's your excuse for leaving out entire words so your babble makes even less sense than usual in:

Twatty snivels out the following drug-induced babble in Twatty the "Hemingway" of alt.flame, slobbers incoherently in

Yes, your utter lack of a clue on either subject has given the flame

Oops indeed, little Scotty.

Give me one reason why I should do this again?

You have already embarrassed yourself and your country. And besides, you really have nothing to prove anymore.

Everybody knows your alt.flame reputation: You're an uneducated, pimple faced little boy who posts uneducated, juvenile, stupid and pompous shit. I guess that makes you a stereotype of a typical alt.flame kid a.d 2001.

Its a pity they don't give them out any more. SWL-ing was always the best apprenticeship for ham radio. Nowadays, people just want to get a ticket and go on the air without ever having listened to the ham bands.

The JUNOP- Multifunction - Interface considerably expands the possibilities of the amateur radio handhelds Yaesu VX-1R / VX-5R and ICOM IC-Q7 / IC-R2 etc.. In addition it can be used as remote control interface for ICOM-Transceivers (e.g. IC-706, IC-775, IC-756, IC-746, IC-736, IC-275 etc.) (replacement for CT-17 CI-V Levelconverter). In detail it offers the following features:

* Memory - Programming (with appropriate software, e.g. EVE)
* Packet- Radio/ APRS- Operation (1k2 Bd; with appropriate TNC/Modem and Software)
* all modes generated or processed by a soundcard, e.g. SSTV, RTTY, FAX, Hell, PSK31
* Connecting microphones and speakers for fixed/ mobile operation, expensive special microphones are required no longer
* Remote control of ICOM- Transceivers (CI-V Bus)

I remember being about 5 years old and listening to Grany's 12 ft tall the dial must have been 12" around. Been listening and "ect" ever Thanks for the tip Craig. In order to redress the balance, I have just sent my girlfriend onto the trailer roof with a chainsaw, (my wife refused to go up there) and told her to shorten the twig by 80%, and also be careful not to cut the coax.

Do you think this will compensate for all that nasty, unwanted, extra signal strength that just might damage my chicken box? ;-)

My my my, never thought we'd see the day 14313 once again became a normal ham radio frequency.

Looks like Riley and local law enforcement in Georgia have cleared off the last of the BARF/Stumpjumper trash and psychos off of 14313.

Maybe the BARF/SJs have finally began to realize there will never be a return to the days they caused mayhem on 14313, under the misguided direction of their precious Herbie.

AND, the Maritime Service nets live on, providing service in the highest traditions of ham radio!

Yes. And ain't it grand? Good riddance to Psycho Dan, David the Zipper 4362. Professional file shredding program?

As you know, deleting files on your disk drives doesn't really remove them; neither does reformatting your hard drive. Professionals can recover such files with some sophisticated hardware and software that they use for the purpose.

Chances are that, if your computers are seized, the police can recover all of the things that you thought you had deleted.

But there are some special programs available for the purpose of placing deleted files beyond the reach of such efforts, and one of the regular posters here is probably in need of one of those programs. It seems that a couple of his pals got thrown in the clink, and that their computers have been seized for forensic analysis.

Can anyone recommend a good file shredding program to him? Or would he be better off simply replacing his hard drives and throwing the old drives away?

But lots of people have called the Cobb County Jail and obtained

I have used one mounted at about 6' for 4 years. The multi-band coverage is a great feature, being able to band-hop without having to switch antennas. I always start out a shack session with a quick scan of the bands using this antenna. And I have QSOs/QSLs on bands that I would not have if it were not for this antenna. But in the end, it is a compromise of performance for convenience. My 15, 20 & 40M dipoles at 35' ALWAYS outperfom the Titan.

Probably safer to parallel the old battery with an equivalent voltage source (with 1-ohm series resistor) while you are replacing it.

While I'm not sure, I didn't think that Kenwood had the issue with the battery that some ICOMs did.

I thought Kenwoods were all 'ROM' code radios, or at least flash with the new ones. Even the new ICOMs.

The only radios that I heard of that required the battery trick were ICOMs about the mid to late 80's. Those radios had RAM only. No ROM. No flash (pre-flash days). Loose the backup battery, loose everything.

ICOM wanted to make the ultimately flexible radio. Well, they did, all the way to zero! (Sorta like the one Clancy novel where the Clark is on the stress test machine and ask the nurse what's the record and the guy replies 'zero'.)

If you turn your TS-440S on and the frequency readout reads ....

14.000.0 MHz

Why would you be concerned about retaining the programmed memories, when they've already been effectively wiped by a dead battery?

Unplug the rig; put the new battery in; and reprogram your memory

Dunno, WA2EXQ always impressed me as a goof who went in the direction the wind was blowing at the time. No loyalty. Just liked to be wherever he could stir the pot and make trouble, then

Wogie knows it is not a lie. He has known it from day one. He has also deleted any and all emails from his buddy and the accompanying photos that Dimmy sent.
Wogie...do a Google search for a program called Eraser. It is a free program that overwrites the free space on your HD so as to eliminate all evidence of your complicity with W4AMP. It effectively overwrites the free space on the drive several times, thereby making your deleted files impossible for Detective Joe Myers to recover. This program is so good that the Dept. of Defense is even using it.
You better hustle, Wogie. And delete those porn files, too, while you are at it.
Detective Myers will be back in his office this Monday going through O'Brien's computers, and you could be next on his list.
Also, Wogie...did you know that the CCSD is working with Mr. H on this?
You'd better conduct yourself accordingly, Curtain Boy, or the next visitor to your mommy's house may have a badge and a warrant.

Amateur Radio Newsline™ Report 1288 - April 19 2002

Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1288 with a release date of Friday, April 19th, 2002 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T. Amateur Radio volunteerism is praised at the N-A-B Ham Radio Reception and a Montana senator calls for a change in the way the United States oversees the electromagnetic spectrum. These stories are first on Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1288 coming your way right now.

AMERICA AT WAR: HAMS PRAISED AT NAB AMATEUR RADIO MIXER

The heroism of ham radio operators who donate their services in times of national disaster, and especially those who volunteered in the days following the 911 terrorist attacks was not forgotten at this years National Association of Broadcasters Ham Radio Reception. The April 10th gathering was co-hosted by Kenwood Communications and CQ Magazine. It was CQ publisher Dick Ross, K2MGA, who took time to honor those hams who put their lives on hold, to be there when needed:

K2MGA: “I do want to take a moment to focus a little bit of attention on how proud we have a right to be as Radio Amateurs. I think we saw that on September 11th, when thousands upon thousands of hams throughout the United States jumped in their cars -- or -- in the New York are -- hopped onto the subways -- with back packs filled with radio equipment and did whatever they could. They are still doing ‘whatever they can,’ and that is really what Amateur Radio is all about.”
--

Ross comments were enthusiastically received. CQ was represented at the gathering by Ross and Editor Rich Moseson, W2VU. Also making presentations were Kenwood’s Paul Middelton K4NUH and ARRL President Jim Haynie, W5JBP. 600 to 800 radio amateurs who attended the NAB convention also usually show up at the Ham Radio Reception.

SPECTRUM ISSUES: SENATOR TO ASK FOR COMPLETE SPECTRUM REVIEW

A U-S Senator says that its time to overhaul the method by which the United States manages the entire electromagnetic spectrum. Montana Senator Conrad Burns, said on Monday, April 15th that he plans to introduce such legislation. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Norm Seeley, KI7UP, has the details:

Senator Conrad Burns says that he expects a two to three year battle over the legislation he plans to introduce this congressional season. But Burns also told a packed audience at the recent National Association of Broadcasters Convention in Las Vegas that he is going to put together a total spectrum reform bill because he does not think that Congress should be piecemealing how it makes spectrum available.

Senator Burns told the NAB audience that he predicts an intense battle over the legislation affecting multiple constituencies. He noted that many frequency bands are used by government agencies like the Department of Defense Department. Burns said that he is still awaiting a report from the General Accounting Office which is reviewing a large number of spectrum issues and related government practices.

And what does this mean to ham radio? In the short term probably very little. In the long run it could affect our future survival.

Depending on the scope of the Burns legislation and how much of it -- if any -- is ever enacted by Congress, the future use of all spectrum could well come under a bureaucratic microscope. Those services that legislators do not feel justify spectrum could -- eventually -- loose it.

Earlier plans to move some government operations to other spectrum now have little support in the wake of the September 11th terrorist attacks. Meantime, numerous telecommunications companies are pressuring the government to make large portions of spectrum available quickly, to introduce new consumer wireless services. (Published reports)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: NEW FRENCH HAMSATS COMING

AMSAT has announced that two new French Amateur Radio mini satellites or picosats are planned for launch on May 3rd. This, as secondary payloads with the SPOT-5 satellite.

The two hamsats are being funded, designed and built by AMSAT-France. They are battery powered and should operate from orbit about 40 days. Both will transmit recorded voice messages using Narrow Band FM along with digital telemetry. Data will be transmitted at 400 baud BPSK. Downlink frequencies are listed as 145.84 MHz and 435.27 MHz.

An Ariane 4 booster will carry the satellites to orbit but the ham radio birds will not be free floating. Rather they will remain fastened to the Ariane’s third stage at a panned altitude of about 800 kilometers. Both of these new birds will switched on about ten days after the launch. (ANS)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: AMSAT-NA TO RE-EVALUATE THE FUTURE

Meantime, AMSAT North America President Robin Haighton, VE3FRH, has called a special Board of Directors meeting for April 20th. This, to review the current fiscal situation and to decide on a proper course of action for upcoming ham radio space projects.

In a published column earlier this year, Haighton had commented that financial support coming to AMSAT for the Eagle satellite and other projects have been reduced as a result 911. Haighton now says that this continues to be the case.

Haighton does say that the design of another satellite called Echo is progressing and he should have more information to make public next month. The AMSAT North America president adds that the organizations forum at the upcoming Dayton Hamvention will offer a closer look at several proposed satellite projects. (ANS)

ENFORCEMENT NEEDED: WORLDWIDE QRM TO 40 METERS

The March issue of the Monitoring System Newsletter talked about a rogue broadcast from Eritrea on 7.100 Mhz. A transmission that continues to be heard well in eastern North America.

According to the IARU, this broadcast can at times also be heard around the world. Also, the report says that its lower sideband can dominate the top few kilohertz of the 7.000 to 7.100 MHz Amateur band. (ANS)

ENFORCEMENT: FCC ARRESTS NYC UNLICENSED BROADCASTER

An unlicensed broadcaster has been arrested for refusing to shut down operations. Paul Dorleans was taken into federal custody on April 15th for operating an unlicensed FM radio station on 87.9 MHz in Brooklyn New York.

The FCC says that earlier enforcement actions had failed to discourage Dorleans’ unlicensed operation of the FM Station. The FCC, on more than one occasion, had issued notices to Dorleans directing him to cease operation. And the U.S. Marshal’s Service, in conjunction with the United States Attorney’s Office and the FCC, had seized his radio equipment on one previous occasion.

The United States Marshals Service arrested Dorleans working in conjunction with FCC Agents and the Office of the United States Attorney for the Eastern District of New York. So far this year, investigation of unlicensed broadcast operation by the FCC’s Enforcement Bureau has resulted in the shutdown of over 20 unlicensed stations. Dorleans faces the possibility of a heavy fine and a prison sentence if convicted. (FCC Release)

ENFORCEMENT: FCC TO UTILITIES - DON'T INTERFERE WITH HAMS

The FCC has issued letters to five power utility companies to request that they contact and work with Amateur Radio operators in the area to resolve power line interference problems. According to FCC Special Counsel for Amateur Radio Enforcement Riley Hollingsworth the utility companies are:

Hollingsworth: "Anderson Indiana City Utility, the Dominion Power Company in Richmond Virginia, Northeast Utilities in Berlin Connecticut, Southern California Edison in Rosemont California and the Soccoro Electric Co-Op in Soccoro New Mexico."
--

Hollingsworth says that the companies were instructed to report back in 90 days to outline the progress made in clearing these interference complaints. (FCC, RAIN)

SPECIAL COMMS: RADIO SOLO NOW ON THE GROUND

The United States military broadcasts to Afghanistan are still being widely heard on 8.700 Mhz, but are now land based. The broadcasts are being produced by the same unit that produced the Commando Solo airborne transmissions during the early stages of the war on terrorism. (Media Network)

THE SUPPORT FUND REPORT WITH ANDY JAREMA N6TCQ

Ladies and gentlemen, with some words regarding Amateur Radio Newsline's current fiscal situation, here is Support Fund Administrator Andy Jarema, N6TCQ:

That's right. Its me. A.J.. And when you hear my voice you know I am here for one of two reasons. One is the bad – as in – help we need your financial support. The other is to say thanks to those of you who have kicked in to keep amateur Radio Newsline coming your way.

This week it's the bad. The numbers for the first three months of 2002 are in and its not good news. Right now we have about $145 in the bank and close to a thousand dollars in back bills sitting on my desk. And the people we owe money to like the phone company and our Internet providers want to be paid.

The bottom line is that this is once again a financial emergency. Only you can keep these weekly newscasts coming your way. We need your help, and we need it right now.

And remember. Amateur Radio Newsline Newsline is a federal 501c 3 corporation and a California certified non-profit corporation. This means that all contributions are tax-deductible.

The address for the Newsline Support fund is PO Box 660937, Arcadia, CA 91066.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline Support Fund, I'm Andy Jarema, N6TCQ.

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: JERRY ROSS SETS SPACEWALK RECORD

United States Astronaut Jerry Ross, N-5-S-C-W has set a personal best . On Tuesday April 16th Ross made his 9th spacewalk on the latest of his seven orbital flights. In doing this, the 54 year old retired Air Force Colonel set the record for the greatest number of flights and spacewalks ever by an Astronaut or Cosmonaut.

Prior to his current flight, N5SCW had logged 1133 hours in space.
Ross is flying for the seventh time and may not get an eighth turn. This is because of other astronauts in line for flights. (Published reports)

INTERNATIONAL-RUSSIA: SPACE TOURIST READY TO FLY

The world's second would-be space tourist is almost ready for takeoff. Jeramy Boot, G4NJH, has the details:

--
Russian space officials say that Internet industrialist Mark Shuttleworth has completed most of his training and is ready to visit the International Space Station.

Shuttleworth is a 28-year-old South African economist who made his fortune with an Internet business. He said he would conduct gene engineering studies while on the space station using animal stem cells. He said he hoped his research could be used to help find cures for Alzheimer's and Parkinson's disease.

Liftoff of has been set for April 25th from the Baikonur Cosmodrome in Kazakhstan. Shuttleworth confirmed that he is paying $20 million for the trip but in installments that will be complete only when the mission is over. That's the same sum American Dennis Tito, KG6FZX, paid Russian space agencies last year to fly to the international station, becoming the world's first space tourist.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Jeramy Boot, G4NJH

Its not yet known if Shuttleworth will be licensed to operate the ham radio gear on board the I-S-S. (Space Adventures, published reports)

INTERNATIONAL - NEW ZEALAND: POWER COMMS STANDARDS TO BE SET

Powerline telecommunications and its potential as a source of interference will be a major topic to be discussed in New Zealand. This, from September 16th to the 30th. The gathering is slated for the city of Christchurch where a newly established committees, is working to create common standards for information technology equipment and radio and television products. According to NZART, this should prove beneficial to that nations radio amateurs. (NZART)

THAT FINAL ITEM - HAM RADIO IN THE MOVIES: IMAX ISS MOVIE PREMIERES

And finally this week, ham radio is not only at a film premiere. It is actually an important part of the movie. This as the new 3-D motion picture about the International Space Station gets to the giant screen in a press preview on April 16th. Amateur Radio Newslines Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, has more:

The movie we are talking about is the new IMAX film called Space Station. Amateur Radio on the International Space Station is a part of it. According to ARISS Program Manager Frank Bauer, KA3HDO, the film simply breathtaking:

KA3HDO: “It was the closest way that an individual could experience space without going to it themselves. It was spectacular from the persoective that you really felt like you were there. hat you were part of the team that was making Space Station happen.

It just was phenominal. Breathtaking views of the Earth, of Space Station and inside the cabin of the space station.”

Bauer says that it was pretty awesome to see Astronaut Bill Shepherd talk to the Texas students with using ham radio equipment. Also, ARISS appears in the movie’s credits.

According to Bauer, there were 21 members of the ARISS volunteer team attending and supporting the sneak preview. Visitors included Astronauts Bill Shepherd and Yuri Usachev. Also attending were the film’s producer Toni Meyers and National Air and Space Museum Curator Jack Dailey. The comments were all glowing and Bauer says that this is a must see movie.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF.

Consult local listings to find out when Space Station will be shown at an IMAX or OMNIMAX theater near you. (KA3HDO, ARNewsline™)

I understand that, when WWII was over and there were signals personnel scattered all over the globe, it was reported that received noise levels increased when Jupiter rose above the local horizon.

IIRC, it has been mentioned in some work published about the foundations of radio astronomy, I can't recall the reference, however.

They say that a little wine is worth a long acquaintanceship, but there are those on this ng for whom a little wine just might relax
'the monsters of the id' - but I doubt it.

Nicely put. This stalking included an aged mother in a nursing home, taking pictures of the man's wife and describing her in graphic terms on ham radio, pictures of children at a school bus stop and conversation about them on ham radio, pictures of the man's home, ordering pizzas late night, late night phone calls, internet background searches and posting them on the NG, Talk of "Niggers, Kikes, ect. and threatening to kill people on the air. This couple knew no bounds. Gloating?? Hell yes I am. I'm glad they finally have a home in the Cobb county jail.

With the need for expensive professional software, coupled with the fact that hard drives are very inexpensive now, it is doubtlessly more cost-effective to simply replace the incriminating drives, Roger. You can remove your old drives and then throw them in a lake somewhere, after which you'll be able to sleep soundly at night.

Hope this helped.

Yes, the story is very long and sordid. W4AMP has attacked many, many Hams along the way. He would do childish things such as ordering hundreds of magazine subscriptions for his "target". He also went so far as to order a two thousand dollar Yaesu from AES using the name and call of one of his enemies. He would, when sober enough, call the ISP's of those he was angry with and represent himself to be a lawyer in hopes of having his latest target tossed off the ISP. If that didn't work he would next call the employer of his target and make numerous false allegations. He once went so far as to call Hawaii to complain about a professor there! Of course there were always the three a.m. hang-up phone calls that this clown would initiate, usually while in a state of inebriation. These calls almost always took place between three and five a.m. and would occur 15 or more times in a row.

Need we touch on the anonymous letters he would send to all the neighbors of his intended victims? Letters that would "explain" to the neighbors that they had a dangerous person living in their midst and would make many, many false statements about their neighbor?
Should we go into detail about how this pair was taking photographs of his latest victim, his victim's wife and young son? How this stalker got so close that he could even describe what the child's bedroom door even had on it? How this pair even took photos of the child as he waited for his school bus? Chilling, is it not?
There is also the story of how W4AMP and his wife, WA4SEX went to a nursing home and threatened the elderly mother of one of his harassment victims. Add to this the story of W4AMP threatening the life of the father of an attorney he had hired to defend him for harassment charges, and, well, the list is just too long.
W4AMP has a hatred for authority figures. This probably stems from his narcotics conviction some ten years back...all three counts...a conviction that alleges he sold narcotics to the minor daughter of the local Sheriff! This prison record can be verified and his records are easily found on line. No amount of denial will make it untrue.
It is rather odd that over the years O'Brien was so quick to accuse everybody of being drunken wife beaters. Odd, is it not? Note that those who are so quick to accuse others of abusing their wives are almost always the persons who are guilty of same. They speak from experience and it is called transference of guilt.
Am I, like many others, gloating over the fact that this gruesome twosome are behind bars yet again?
YOUBETYOURASSIAM!
Am I gloating that they are looking at some serious prison time and hefty fines?
YOUBETYOURASSIAM!

I know of at least one family who is much relieved. At least for now their son will be able to wait at the school bus stop without having to worry that this pair will be taking photographs of him from their parked car.
I hope this incarcerated team gets to spend many, many moons behind those steel bars. They earned every minute of it.

If I recall correctly, the primary frequency for Jupiter is around 22-Mhz. Of course it has to be above your horizon to hear it. That's currently the late morning to early evening at this time of year.

I'm looking for the manufacturer's part numbers (Mouser, Digi-Key, etc) for a DPDT or 3PDT 12 Vdc relay that can handle 100 watts RF at HF. The purpose will be to switch out a preamp on transmit. If specific part numbers aren't available, what relay characteristics should I look for?

Thanks,

As it happens, my astronomical society included basic information about receiving Jupiter at our booth at the Boston Museum of Science for Astronomy day on Saturday.

Nasa has a lot of information about listening to Jupiter. One of the best items is a 20+ page pdf file for building a dipole antenna system. Their instructions would be good for anyone wanting to build their first dipole, as they have lots of pictures and drawings.

They also sell a $125 kit for a direct conversion radio for picking up Jupiter, but you may need to be a teacher to order it.

Here's a link to the reference shelf with PDF files:

http://radiojove.gsfc.nasa.gov/library/ref_shelf.htm

Clicking on the other links on the page will bring you more information.

==========
Any normal relay (preferably hermetically sealed) with a contact rating of a few amperes will do the trick.
I have seen plastic cased relays for RF power duties in 100 W Yeas-ic-ken transceivers not larger than 1/4 cubic inch.
However ensure that RF power does not hit the relay contacts before these are fully closed and use all the contacts for a single duty eg don't use one of the contacts for control purposes.
For control purposes use (a) separate relay(s)

Coaxial relays are the obvious choice here, but expensive and not really necessary at HF. Let's face it, all the commercial autotuners use bog standard plastic cased ones.

Personally, I would go for any big chunky single throw relay. Parallel all the contacts if it's a multipole, and do not use any spare contact sets for control purposes, there will doubtless be lots of RF on them. Assuming that the relay is not going to be sited at a point of extreme RF voltage, an auto-salvage yard should yield several contenders. Remember though, that the longer the switching elements are, the less isolation you'll have, so the more RF will get into your pre-amp when on TX.

Omron make some nice compact 250V 10A SPST relays with a 12V coil, almost ubiquitous in monitor and TV degaussing circuits. These have a BIG contact gap too to cope with any back emf off the coil, although the thermistor should mean there isn't any.

Careful choice of sequencing circuitry so there is no RF on the line when it is switched will help prolong the contacts' life.

Good luck

Yes, while it's true you can use an ANALOG technique to examine anomalies in flux transition timing to read 'under' a layer that was erased, it's pretty close to impossible to read a second layer. Pretty close. But that just means that the techniques to do so are kept quiet. It can be done. But the 'third' layer? Or the fourth?

And these techniques mean the media has to separated from the drive electronics, and the heads interfaced to an ANALOG reader...
In fact, I'm not even sure the 'stock' heads would work that well to begin with, as they are designed to look for flux reversals.

You really think local PDs would have the resources to do this?
Even for something vile like kiddieporn? Unless, of course, there was an 'event' that brought all the weight of law enforcement to bear, and in that case a deleted file is probably the LEAST of your problems!

Almost ANY good 'disk wipe' software like Norton or whatever, that does multiple wipes, will in fact reduce the 'under' layers to well below the noise floor, and make it impossible to recover with current techniques.

Hello everyone.

My fathers name was Peter Guenther, "VE4-PG"
He passed away in January of 2000.
I am looking for the cards he used to send out to those he communicated with on Amateur radio. Currently out of about 500 cards he originally ordered for himself, I nor any member of the family has any.
We would dearly like to have one or two of the cards for the family records and to add to the memroirs he wrote during his last couple of years.
I realize they will be written on and that is just fine.

If any of you that read this might know of someone who has one or maybe, if you could just pass along this information to other Ham operators, I would appreciate it.
Thankyou very much for your time ... Don Guenther ...

Hi guys and gals,
Ok, DXMON is fine, but I'd like to find out how 'local' or 'US-only' conditions are.

Got any good ideas on where I can go to get actual conditions reports rather than look at all the messages on DXMONITOR? I like the program, but too many people use it to send messages back and forth and such.

Even better, something I can understand that would help me with the MUF at the current time in North America vice Australia or somewhere else.

Thank you ahead of time,

With the advent of restructuring and the end of new Novice licenses, the old Novice bands will have less and less reason to be set aside for that purpose. ARRL has recommended that they be disestablished and that the phone segments of those bands be increased, and FCC is requesting comments (the reference to the petition in "RM-10413").

Wouldn't this be a great opportunity to set up some sub-bands to showcase amateurs experimenting with new technologies? You can comment to FCC at their web site (http://gullfoss2.fcc.gov/prod/ecfs/upload_v2.cgi) or by mail.

Below are my comments.

Before the Federal Communications Commission
Washington, DC 20554

In the Matter of)
)
Amendment of Part 97 of the Commission's) RM-10413 Amateur Service Rules Governing) Operating Privileges)
)

PERSONAL COMMENTS OF HANS BRAKOB, K0HB

OVERVIEW

These comments are in response to the ARRL proposal for "refarming" the existing HF "Novice sub-bands".

I. Discussion:

The ARRL petition does not address the implementation of new technologies as repeatedly requested by the Commission in WT Docket 98-143. It simply proposes to eliminate the Novice segments and reshuffle that spectrum among existing legacy modes. Rather than gain consensus, the ARRL polling method produced a popularity poll among several non-responsive (to 98-143) choices.

Rather than just "more of the same old stuff", I propose that the Commission take this opportunity to provide the Amateur Radio service with a new incentive to concentrate on paragraph 97.1(b) of the Commission's Rules.

97.1(b) Continuation and extension of the amateur's proven ability to contribute to the advancement of the radio art.

While I agree that the declining Novice license population no longer justifies several significant chunks of spectrum as a "reservation" for improving their Morse skills, and that these "reservations" have outlived their regulatory purpose, I propose that we retain these 50-year old "reservations" and convert them to a new purpose which will ensure the future Amateur Radio service continues our "proven ability to contribute to the advancement".

II Proposal:

A. To "de-populate" the current Novice segments, I propose that all Novice (and Technician with code credit) licensees be authorized to use Morse code in the same band segments now authorized for General class licensees.

B. I propose that the current Novice sub-bands be set aside as a new "Experimental Reservation" for non-traditional and experimental modes such as digitized voice, digitized image, and other "forward looking" communications methods.

C. I propose that the current power output level of 200W be retained for those segments, and additionally propose that transmitters in those segments must be equipped with auto-adaptive circuitry to reduce output to the lowest level consistent with reliable communications.

D. I recommend that the Commission grant broad discretion to amateurs operating in this "experimental reservation" as to innovative modulation schemes and non-traditional technologies.

Respectfully submitted,

Faggot Lee is really stupid, if his post hasn't already clued you in. He really should worry less about my hard drive and more about his kiddie porn

From: Rev Turd Fredericks <turdfred@catholic.org> said about Faggot Lee in Message-ID: <PM000391D524FF3746@dhcppc1.home.com>

"Stagger Lee is anti-free speech because he originally came in here demanding that Steve Geilda, a regular in this group, cancel Roger Wiseman's account on his server because he didn't like what Roger was saying. That is anti-free speech."

"Since free speech is one of the foundations of the American constitution and America it's self, if you are ant-free speech, you are by defintion anti-American."
--

Faggot Stagger Lee, who fails to "grasp" the concept that "slander" is spoken and "libel" is written, would be better served if he just stuck to grasping nutsacks, incoherently babbled in <3C4AE592.6A0CDA7E@houston-hunks.com>:

"COTSE seemed to have the laughable notion that what Wiseman was doing was exercising freedom of speech. Slander is of course not protected speech in the US, but the concept that even free speech has its limits seemed to be impossible for Steve Gielda -- COTSE's owner -- to grasp."

It's also funny that the Cobb county criminal court docket has no O' Brien listed as a defendant, either.

The civil court archives has this, however:

Look at you little, bitty wimpy pussies! Riley says "jump" and you suck his weenie! THE MAN HAS NO AUTHORITY! HE IS AN FCC LAWYER! ALL HE CAN DO IS R E C O M M E N D ENFORCEMENT ACTION!!!! It's the other FCC officials who do the actual enforcing!!!!! But you Hillbilly Dan, Dumb Ass Donnie and the Fairy from Berry, VT, you idiots fall over backwards when he ASKS you to do something!!!!!

I could not believe Dumb Ass Donnie today! (April 24th) He said Riley contacted him and "ASKED" him to leave for "a while"! What kind of crap is that? Isn't there legal procedures to go through? NO!!! Because Riley can't do shit!
You all need to learn from WA9KJI. He's had more complaints and OO reports filed against him than anyone in the history of ham radio. And he's STILL on the air qrm'ing and jamming!!! Last night he parked himself 1.5 KHz away from the "Caroliners" (as he calls them) who were on 3950. Someone comes on 3947 and Dave has a fit, saying he was on 3948.5 first!!!! Now if 3947 was clear, why didn't KJI and his gang of jerks go there? BECAUSE HE WANTS TO QRM the folks on 3950! AND RILEY CANNOT DO ANYTHING TO HIM CUZ HE IS JUST A DAMN LAWYER!!! I had fun with Dad's 72 Grand Torino when I had a trunk mount 10 meter mobile antenna on it. I pulled a friend over once just flashing my lights at him. He didn't recognize the car... When I got out and went to say hi to him he had his license and registration in hand. Hehehheheheehehe.

Look for a relay where:

- The moving contact isn't connected with wire (low stray inductance), and

- The moving contact is isolated from the magnetic armature (low stray capcitance).

The Potter-Brumfield "RK" series is a good example. Its leaf spring contacts have low inductance and are well separated from the armature metal. Their T90 series is not, because the moving contact is mounted directly to the iron aramture.

Other manufacturers have similar parts. Go to the surplus store and have a look at the goods before buying.

Search on the correct spelling (Tektronix) and you'll likely have better luck. Besides eBay, have a look at the manual resources listed at http://www.reprise.com/host/tektronix/home/default.asp. This is not a particularly rare bird, so it shouldn't be too tough to come up with a manual for it.

Three years after Porkbutt is off the air, W4OXD and K4VVV are still obsessed with Rich! Marion and Jimo whined for over a hour last night on 3894.5 how awful Rich was. Of course both these fruit loops are as pure as the wind-driven snow! Who can forget Jimo getting three sheets to the wind and making long-winded one-way transmissions on 3894.5, talking about guess who? Yup, Jimo would whine for hours about Porkbutt. Oh and Marion? Who could forget Marion's off-key juvenile singing on 3894.5 about guess who?
Yup, you guessed it, Porkbutt! Both these losers need to get

While ARRL did show positive total results for the years he's talking about, it was all from realized gains on securities transactions. When you exclude those and consider the drop in the value of their securities, unfortunately ARRL had losses from operations in those years. KR4UQ seems to have some sort of ax to grind and, like any good Unabasher, will interpret the numbers to fit his argument.

He also seems to lack an understanding of the difference between the 501c(3) side of the house and the for-profit side.

With all kind wishes,

Some colleagues of mine have been using "International Tax Solutions" in London for several years now and have suggested that I begin to work with them for my new contract in Sweden.

The difference is that I am a US citizen and I am wondering how that complicates the issues with the IRS. The people I spoke to at their office were not sure of the implications.

Are there any other US citizens in this newsgroup that have used them in the past?

The way I see it, I definitely have to declare the salary portion of my income to both Sweden and the US. What about the portion that remains after the contract is over? Can I just leave it where it is until a later time when I withdraw it as a "dividend" and then pay taxes on that dividend to the US only?

Thanks,
Fred

Would it help if somebody were to send a Get Out Of Jail card to Dimmy's last known address?
I'd send 2 Get Out Of Jail Free cards if the guards would take a picture of their faces when they get them. Otherwise, I wouldn't piss in their mouth if their throat was on fire.

It sure would be easy enough to send each of them a sympathy card. The address for the Cobb Co. jail can be found on the web and I am sure the jailors would give them the cards.
Wouldn't that be rubbing salt in their wounds? Heck, I might send them each a card just to make them hit the roof. It would be well worth thirty four cents.
Maybe I'll sign Rogers name to them.

I am sure he is feeling pretty lonely by now and would love to hear from his friends. Maybe a cheerful greeting or two will help him get through the long days ahead. Be sure to enclose a SASE with a piece of blank paper so he can reply. I know he'd like to hear from all of you. His wife, Donna, can also be reached at the same address and she would also appreciate any and all sympathy cards.

The Jersey Shore Amateur Radio Society is pleased to announce its 4th Annual Shorefest to be held August 11, 2002 at the Bayville (NJ) Fire House, Route 9, Bayville, NJ.

Table reservations are now being accepted. The hamfest is all indoors in 4,000 square feet of airconditioned pleasure.

If you plan to sell your gear in the the New Jersey shore area this is your only hamfest left in the area. Look at the current hamfest lists. Absecon, Brookdale, Shore Points, Garden State, they are all gone. The JSARS Shorefest is the only hamfest remaining along the shore from Sandy Hook to Cape May. With fog and early morning rain last year that's why we drew over 1,000 hams to our hamfest.

Come see all the area vendors in amateur radio and computers.

Visit http://www.jsars.org to see pictures of our past hamfests and to download a PDF hamfest flyer.

RESCUE RADIO: HAM RADIO ASSISTS AT CALIFORNIA TRAIN COLLISION SITE

Amateur radio played a pivotal role following two major rail accidents occurring within a few days of one another. On Tuesday April 23rd, a Southern California Metrolink commuter train headed to San Juan Capistrano collided with a mile long freight train that may have missed a stop signal and wandered onto the same track. 2 people on the commuter train were injured and over 260 injured. Local hospitals were swamped with casualties. Joe Moell, K0OV, has more:

About four times a year, the hospitals and emergency responders in Orange County, California, hold large-scale drills to test the patient triage and transportation procedures that must be followed in the event of a mass casualty incident. The Hospital Disaster Support Communication System -- an ARES group with agreements to support all 35 hospitals in the county -- is always asked to participate. So it was on Tuesday, April 23 as two dozen HDSCS members awaited their assignments for a mock hazardous material incident, to be staged on a shopping street in Brea, California at 9 AM.

But it was not to be. At 8:10 AM, just 5-1/2 miles away in the city of Placentia, a 6000-ton mile-long freight train collided with a Metrolink double-decker commuter train. HDSCS hams were immediately assigned to the fourteen hospitals expected to receive patients. For the next 4-1/2 hours, a total of 28 hams provided vital links between these hospitals, the county's Central Point ambulance dispatch, and the county's Emergency Medical Service agency.

[sound bite 1]
--
Other traffic included verifying victim dispatch, locating victims, providing hospitals with information for inquiring victim families, and liaison with hams supporting the Red Cross. Within some hospitals, hams provided direct communications between triage areas, Emergency Departments, and Command Posts. Dennis Kidder WA6NIA tells how important this was at one facility:

[sound bite 2]
--
This was the 75th actual hospital communications emergency in the 21-year history of HDSCS. From Orange County California, this is Joe Moell K-zero-Oscar-Victor for Amateur Radio Newsline.

--

More on this in a future Amateur Radio Newsline report. (ARNewsline™)

RESCUE RADIO: HAM RADIO ASSISTS AT FLORIDA DERAILMENT

Ham radio also helped provided coordination of emergency services following a train wreck near Crescent City Florida on Thursday April 18th. The accident happened at about 5:15 P-M Eastern time. Billy Williams, N4UF reports from Jacksonville:

The accident killed four passengers and injured 159 other passengers. It happened after the engineer of an ill-fated Amtrak train saw damaged track and hit the emergency brakes.

Rescue workers say 21 of the train's 40 cars including 14 of the 16 passenger cars derailed. Seven flipped on their sides, lying along the mangled track in a zig-zag pattern. Some passengers escaped through windows, while dozens of were trapped inside for hours.

Soon after the accident Bill Krueger, KF4EJD, was on the scene and at the wreck site relaying information to hams associated with ARES. Other hams soon had portable stations operational at the Putnam County Emergency Operations Center and the Crescent City High School shelter. A secondary shelter at Middleton-Burney Elementary School was established to assist in moving the passengers.

At the peak of activity, about 400 people were sheltered at Crescent City High School where a triage center had been set up. Also, a group from the Northeast Florida Chapter American Red Cross headquartered in Jacksonville was sent to the scene. This included several Jacksonville ham radio operators and a Red Cross Emergency Response vehicle.

Two hospitals in Jacksonville were staffed by Duval ARES operators to provide status reports to medical volunteers who were ready to head to the site if needed. Their help was not required and the hospital ham stations were secured at 10 PM Eastern time..

Meantime., the Florida Crown Emergency Net was in operation on the W4IZ Repeater System which was linked to the KF4PXZ system in Palatka. The net was in session from 5:30 to after 11PM.

There were many hams who volunteered in this emergency. Far to many to list here. And they once again proved that ham radio was willing and able to help when called on.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Billy Williams, N4UF, in Jacksonville Florida.

According to news reports, many of the train's 418 passengers were senior citizens traveling between northern homes and winter retreats. (N4UF, ARNewsline™)

REALLOCATION: FCC PUTS ARRL NOVICE BAND PROPOSAL TO PUBLIC COMMENT

Comments are due to the FCC by May 16 on An ARRL petition that would eliminate the 80, 40 and 15-meter Novice and Technician Plus CW subbands. The information is from an ARRL Bulletin. Amateur Radio Newsline's Paul Courson WA3VJB, reports from the nations capital:

Designated RM-10413, the notice is aimed at reusing the current Novice spectrum in part to expand the 80 and 40 meter phone subbands. The ARRL's petition was filed in March asks the FCC to eliminate the Novice and Technician Plus Morse only subbands and divvy them up alleviate what the ARRL sees as overcrowding elsewhere.

If the FCC goes along, the current Novice and Technician Plus would be permitted to operate on the 80, 40, 15 and 10-meter General-class CW allocations at up to 200 Watts output. For General and higher class operators, the ARRL plan would implement changes in the 80, 40 and 15-meter phone bands, expanding phone segments for many amateurs.

But the ARRL petition goes well beyond just refarming the Novice bands. The League also seeks FCC permission to use spread spectrum on 222 to 225 MHz. It also proposes to expand the pool of special event call signs beyond the 1 by 1 format to include identifiers for United States territories that do not provide for mailing addresses. The ARRL also wants to incorporate into the rules a 1990 FCC waiver authorizing amateurs in specific areas of Colorado and Wyoming to operate on certain segments of the 33-cm band. Lastly, the petition asks that the government clarify rules to indicate that modulated CW is permitted for repeater station identification.

May 16th is the designated commentary cutoff date on RM-10413, and the FCC is expecting a lot of response on this one.

Paul Courson, WA3VJB, Washington.

And we at Amateur Radio Newsline want to know your position on the reallocation of the current Novice subbands? Do you like the ARRL proposal? Do you have what you consider a better one? Should the subbands even be re-farmed? We would like to hear from you. Please send us a short e-mail with your opinion and we will put some of them on the air in future newscasts. The electronic address is news;ine@arnewsline.org. (ARRL, ARNewsline™)

RADIO RULES: HAM PETITIONS FOR MANDATORY FIELD REPAIRABLE RIGS

How would you like to be able to take the cover off your radio and replace a plug-in highly complex integrated circuit, put the cover back on and have the radio work again. Kind of the way it was when tubes rather than solid state ruled ham radio. Well, that is what Nickolaus Leggett, N3NL, says hams should be able to do and he is asking the FCC to provide the rules to make it so. Amateur Radio Newsline's Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, has the details:

Nikolaus Leggett filed his request to the FCC in February. After reviewing it, the Commission has assigned it as RM-10412 and has set May 16th as a commentary cutoff date.

What Leggett suggests is not really new. He believes that Amateur Radio operators should have a fighting chance to keep their own gear operational. He acknowledges that today's high tech equipment may not be component level serviceable, but he as asking the FCC to make mandatory certain key aspects of design so that a ham with a general knowledge of troubleshooting techniques might get a broken radio back in operation. Especially in time of a declared emergency.

Leggett: "What I proposed is that the Commission establish some sort of standards that would essentially establish that equipment be field repairable in some manner. Either it should have replaceable modules or replaceable circuit boards or parts on a circuit board should be spaced at a certain distance so that you can access them. There should be LED indicators on digital busses. There should be test points to take voltage and current measurements. In other words the equipment should be accessible for the Amateur to repair or modify it."
--

Leggett acknowledges that should the FCC adopt his recommendations it will probably lead some makers of ham gear to drop out of the United States Amateur Radio marketplace:

Legget: “My response on that is to look at the QRP field. There is a very nice Single Sideband QRP transceiver kit, which costs about $700. It is fully field repairable. It is advertised allot in QST Magazine, and this indicates that there certainly are vendors in the marketplace who can come out with a nice piece of equipment; highly regarded; very well reviewed; and at a reasonable price that is field repairable.”
--

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Bruce Tennant, K6PZW in Los Angeles.

You can hear lots more with Nickolaus Leggett on this weeks RAIN report. Take your web browser to www.rainreport.com or call area code 847-827-7246. Meantime, the manufacturers who supply ham gear are expected to file in opposition to the Leggett rule making request. (ARNewsline™, RAIN)

SPECTRUM USE: FCC ON AMTS AND DENIALS TO HAMS

The FCC has approved proposed rules allowing geographic based licensing of coast stations in the Automated Maritime Telecommunications Service, the primary user of the 219-220 MHz band. According to the ARRL Letter, the Commission also agreed to consider an ARRL petition for changes in the rules governing the secondary amateur allocation at 219-220 MHz.

Amateur use of the band within 80 kilometers of an the Automated Maritime Telecommunications Service or AMTS coast station is currently requires permission from the AMTS licensee. Industry practice has been to routinely deny such requests, regardless of channel separation.

Now, the FCC will consider whether AMTS licensees denying permission should be required to give a technical justification for the denial. This, in conjunction with the ongoing 3-G proceeding that's considering use of 216-220 MHz for new technologies. (ARRL)

SPECTRUM REALLOCATION: CONGRESS PROPOSES DELAY IN UHF CHANNEL AUCTION

Congressional lawmakers say that they plan to introduce legislation to delay indefinitely the Federal Communications Commission's June sale spectrum currently used by television broadcasters to wireless carriers. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Norm Seeley, KI7UP, Takes a closer look at what is about to transpire:

--
The proposed legislation is being sponsored by House Energy and Commerce Chairman Billy Tauzin and ranking Democrat Representative John Dingell. The current law requires the FCC to auction the spectrum used channels television channels 52 through 59 by September 30th of this year. But if Congress says O-K, the measure will eliminate the legal deadline in September for an auction be conducted. It will also tell the agency not to go forward with the sale slated for June 19th.

The anticipated congressional action is intended to give more breathing room for broadcasters to move off their current analog television channels. It would also give mobile telephone carriers more certainty about a date when they would obtain this spectrum so that they make available a number of new services.

So far, no one has gone to court to force the FCC to hold the sale.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Norm Seeley, KI7UP.

RADIO RULES: COURT SAYS OWNERSHIP CAPS ARBITRARY AND CAPRICIOUS

Another blow to those who support a cap on the number of media outlets any one company can own. This, as a federal appeals court rules in favor of easing an FCC regulation that bars a broadcaster from owning two TV stations -- known as a duoploly -- in a single market. That is, unless there are eight other broadcast TV stations in that same market.

The court held that the Federal Communications Commission was arbitrary and capricious in excluding cable companies and other media outlets from the eight outlet standard. The ruling also admonished the FCC for failing to back up its argument that diversity and localism are protected by broadcast stations alone.

The court stopped short of declaring the duopoly rule unconstitutional and throwing it out altogether. Rather it directed the FCC to rethink that part of the rule dictating what constitutes a broadcast voice in any given market. (Published news reports)

RADIO LAW FOLLOW-UP: TOWERS VS. BIRDS

The United States Fish and Wildlife Service believes that communications towers are estimated to kill 4 to 5 million birds each year. And the service says that these kills violate the spirit and the intent of the Migratory Bird Treaty Act.

Now, a new organization called the National Antenna Consortium has been formed. Its purpose is to help communications companies deal with bird kills and other vexing issues associated with tower construction.

The CGC Communicator reports the group held a meeting at the recent National Association of Broadcasters meeting in Las Vegas. Speakers included Andrew Skotdal of KRKO Radio and attorneys Barry Umansky and Fred Hopengarten, K1VR. More information is on the web at migratorybirds.fws.gov (CGC Communicator)

NAMES IN THE NEWS: KB0G SPEARHEADING LINUX

A alternative computer operating system now has a ham helping to develop it. Nate Dueher, WY0X, reports:

--
One of the worlds largest Linux organizations now has a ham radio operator as its leader. Bdale Garbee, KB0G, of Blackforrest Colorado, has been elected as the 2002 Project Leader for Debian Linux. Bdale, who is known by many hams for his excellent work on many Amateur Radio projects including the RUDAK system on board AO-40 has also been on the software development team for Debian Linux for many years.

Debian -- spelled D-E-B-I-A-N -- has excellent support for many popular ham radio modes including CW, RTTY, packet radio, APRS, PSK-31 and many others. It is a version of the Linux operating system known world wide as dedicated to free software, quality and even ham radio. Bdale’s leadership skills should prove to be a match made in technology.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Nate Nueher, NY0X, in Colorado.

DX

In D-X, Cuban VHF DX'er Arnie Coro, CO2KK says over the VHF Reflector that six meters is, properly named the magic band. According to Coro, while testing a balcony mounted half wave dipole he heard VK2ZF calling CQ on CW several times near 50.106 MHz. Coro says that the signal was good copy with no signs of echoes. Arnie responded but with only two watts and a dipole, no Q-S-O was made. Coro says that if he had been running at last 5 watts and a beam, that contact would have been made. (VHF Reflector)

THAT FINAL ITEM: AN EDITORIAL - WHERE HAVE ALL THE NOMINATIONS GONE?

And finally this week, an editorial word about the Amateur Radio Newsline Young Ham of the Year Award. Here is our producer Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF:

Im going to start this commentary with one word: Help!

Why help? Well its now the end of April. The nominating period for the 2002 Amateur Radio Newsline Young Ham of the Year Award has been open since February 1st. We have announced it at the end of every newscast for almost three months. Sadly, to date, we have not received what we consider to be a single viable nomination. Not one!

Normally by now we have received at least a dozen or more nominations. As this is written, all we have are the usual letters asking that we enter a youngster in a contest that some think the award to be. To paraphrase one: "Our 5 year old just got her ham license so send a free radio."

But that is it! And for the record; the Young Ham of the Year Award is not a contest. Rather its a way to honor the accomplishments of youth in ham radio. It has been that -- and only that -- since 1986.

The nominating period for this years award closes on May 30th. Just about 4 weeks from now. As it stands, there may be no Young Ham of the Year Award presented in 2002 unless we begin to receive valid nominations. And that is where you come in.

Do you know of a young ham -- age 18 or younger? One who has accomplished something really special using Amateur Radio? Well, what are you waiting for? Now is the time to nominate that person.

Does your radio club have a youngster who has been an outstanding member. Maybe one who does far more for the club that most of the grown-up hams? Again, what are you waiting for? This very moment is the time nominate that boy or girl.

How about that quiet young ham who is always willing to volunteer in public service events? You know; the one who does everything from organizing the communications to keeping the club repeater operating. Ill say it once again: What are you waiting for? Nominate that person.

I think you get the idea.

OK. How do you file a nomination? Simple. You go to www.arnewsline.org, scroll down to Young Ham of the Year Award. Click on the rules. Read them. Click on the nominating form. Download it. Fill it out and mail it in or e-mail it to us. Its that easy.

We at the Amateur Radio Newsline™ believe that the future of our hobby, our service and our nation is in the hands of the young. It will be the next generation of young hams who will be the technologists, public service leaders and political leaders of this new millennium. The Young Ham of the Year Award is one way to guarantee that there will be this “next generation” of ham radio leaders. By taking the time to nominate a youngster for this award, you take one step to help insure the future of Amateur Radio.

Thank you. Roy.

If the award is made this year, the youngster selected will receive a trip to the Huntsville Hamfest and a ham radio gift courtesy of Vertex Standard. He or she will also be treated to a week at Spacecamp Huntsville thanks to the folks at C-Q magazine. (ARNewsline™)

I have decided to get my amateur radio license. I will take the Technician test first but plan to move onto the General class shortly afterward. I like the idea of using CW.

I ordered the books from ARRL and am waiting for them to arrive. While they are being shipped, decided to look around the web for on-line study material. I did find many copies of the question pool on-line, but not real reference material to help understand the theories and regulations.

My goal is to really understand the stuff, not just know how to pass the test questions.

Can anyone recommend a web-site with this info so I can get started while waitng for the ARRL material to arrive?

Thanks in advance...Keith

I was surprised Friday here at the university when they gave me a bonus check for writing a new program for the engineering dept. computer. So I'm not going to put off buying a long awaited new rig. I'm going to spend a small part of the bonus on a new Yaesu FT-1000D.

Anybody have comments, negative or positive about this transceiver?

Thanks,

If you are attempting to allude or imply that the FCC may be using sophisticated techniques such as you describe here, NO, not even close. The FCC does not even appear on the screen, when national priorities are considered, especially when you start talking about sophisticated intelligence systems. Perhaps in the eyes of a few bureaucrats at the commission whose egos have surpassed reality, but no, you're talking about an unimportant

Joe,

Can you give me some topics to start with Google? I did spend time yesterday searching with Google yesterday on things such as "Amateur Radio license" and other variations. All I got back was testing pools to look at. I want to read the theory behind it all.

I am not sure what the tech license covers and what topics to start with. I hope the books show up this week, I am anxious to get started.

Thanks...Keith

Poor Chason.

How did you scrape up enough from your welfare check to get a FT 100D? or

Keith,
Look at the past posts of AB4MQ and you won't want a ticket. He's the new kind of trash that got his ticket after the code requirements were relaxed and came from the CB band. He uses every kind of four letter filthy word you could use and some I've never heard before. He QRM's HF and leave vulgar messages here. Ham radio is lost and thousands are letting their tickets laspe. Don't bother.

Go with Code Quick the author recognizes that adults learn differently than kids....they learn by association. He uses sound alike phrases to teach code. It is a great way to make it to 5 words a min.

The best way to handle it would be to grab one of the complete question pools, and use it as a guide. Search for keywords from each question, and you should be able to find a lot of information.

For Tech, probably the best thing to study is the part 97 rules, available on the FCC's Amateur Service page.
http://wireless.fcc.gov/services/amateur/index.html

Your books will probably show up before you're done with that, but if they don't, try http://www.google.com/search?hl=en&q=amateur+radio+propagation+atmosphere as a good search topic that will be mentioned on the Tech test, and will always be useful information.

Interestingly, that also turned up a tutorial site that looks pretty good: http://transworldradio.8m.com/tutorial/tutorial.html

Why not? Rogie lives with his mommy, her house is paid for, and the only thing Rogie has to pay for is his car and gasoline. Learning how to use it may be confusing for him, though. The first thing Rogie would be trying to find on it would be the location of the Malicious Interference button.

Hello all, I have an HT1000 UHF radio, H01RDC9AA3DN, 16ch, Intrinsically Safe, Stubby antenna, no charger.
Guaranteed excellent condition, not a re-case, working great and programmed to your specs if necessary.
Has some engraving in back under older battery. (Batt. seems to hold a good charge though)
Looking to trade for same model/version/etc. in VHF or will consider a late model set of standard size SP50's 10ch, w/chrgr. in VHF, (or similar radios.) Only interested in Motorola. Send those model #'s please!!
Thanks!

Hi ALL

IRLP has come a long way since its early days in Canada. Since then the network has surpassed 420 nodes and in that time, there have been comments made by non IRLP folk about what they think goes on inside IRLP.

If you really want to lift the lid on IRLP and dispel some of the mistruths out there, checkout http://fudbuster.vk.irlp.net

Its time to form an opinion yourself and not just rely on others

Anyone, with a knowledge about streaming for a local radio. We want to start one up, but we don't know which format to use, Reals, Microsofts or Shoutcasts? We're on-air three hours a day and we want to send MP3s the other time. So the server/program has to take the input signal the three hours and then switch to MP3 the other time.
Is one of the abovementioned able to do that, or do we have to buy a package that does?

That's strange! I got a FT-920 in late '98 and paid AES
$990 for it. The rig was actually cheaper in 1998, due to a Japanese labor surplus quotient. Even with all accessories, it only came to about $1,500. perhaps the gentleman from West Virginia was overcharged? Afterall, we know us hams never lie!

4569. Balloon beacon/telemetry on 147.455

I have lately been experimenting with a TTL 29.941 MHz oscillator working in conjunction with a PIC microcontroller. I have figured out how to modulate the oscillator using the PIC, and by running the output through a frequency quintupler, am able to produce a carrier with beeps suitable for transmitting FM MCW. I can also generate simple CW by turning the oscillator on and off. This is an amazingly simple device, less than $15 in parts, and my immediate thought is that it would make a fabulous poor-man's telemetry device for balloon experiments.

Being built on a fixed oscillator, though, the frequency is fixed at 147.455. My question is a legal one: If I tied this thing on a balloon and set it free, would I be in violation on anything? I see that Part 97 limits automatically controlled beacons on 2m to 144.275-144.300. On the other hand, telemetry seems to be allowed over pretty much the entire band, or at least I can't find language that specifically limits it the way auto beacons are limited. ARRL's bandplan sets the subband around 147.455 for simplex operation, so at least I can be reasonably confident I won't interfere with anybody's repeater.

I've also been considering a 10m version of the same device, which would most likely be at 28.322 Otherwise, same question.

I guess a relevant secondary question is: what exactly is the difference between an automatically controlled beacon and a telemetry transmitter? If, for example, I have my transmitter sending temperature data as opposed to just sending a call sign at intervals, does that make it telemetry rather than beacon, and how (if at all) does that change the situation?

Thanks for any input.

Yes they did, and since all were ham ops, this is an appropriate place for discussion. These two sub-human creatures preyed on decent people long enough. Richard, don't click on it, if you don't want to see it. These AHoles caused a lot of people a lot of grief.

The "bio" you read is but the tip of the iceberg. There are many, many more such tales that are equally as sordid. Dimmy is psychotic. He is a con man. If his XYL has her wits about her she will not return to him once they gain their freedom. It was just last year that he tried to rearrange her face with a Pepsi bottle. By the way, there were witnesses present when he did so and who watched as he held her down so she couldn't call 911. Apparently somebody made a report, because that is yet another charge he has pending against him.
The list goes on. Suffice it to say that AMP is presently where he so richly deserves to be.

Tomorrow night, Thursday, May 2nd, 2002 marks the four week anniversary of the Dirty Dou's captivity. I wish I knew who the investigating officers were because I'd send them a Thank You note for a Job Well Done. All too often the law enforcement personnel in this country do not get the recognition they deserve. In this case they deserve a gold star and a pay raise.
I'm sure that I speak for many when I wish the Dimmys many more such "anniversaries".

And then there are the other pending charges they have yet to answer to. We may not hear Dimmy on the Ham bands for a couple of years at least. Maybe never, if Riley pulls his ticket.
Perhaps Roger can send them a few pennies to buy stationary and stamps so they can keep in touch.

Wiseman, That photo was sent to you by W4AMP and WA4SEX. Oh, and don't say later that someone else posted that photo, and it is a forgery and not from the real AB8MQ.
My email tells me Chris Caputo archived your posting this morning, along with the photo and the true identity of the poster. Go ahead and email him, if you don't believe it. Your poor judgment has now made you part of a criminal case.

Was this right before you were forced to retest for Malicious Interference, Roger?
I got it...you special ordered a Yaesu 920 with a built-in Malicious Interference button and Yaesu tacked on an extra $800 for that option, eh?

I said it before, but perhaps it bears repeating.
Roger Wiseman, near as we can tell, is a fifty-something toad.
The poor little man is fast approaching fifty years of age and still continues to bicker on these newsgroups with kids one third his age.
This would be funny but for the fact that the kids are spanking this alleged adult day in and day out.
To be blunt, Roger is a pussy. He has no life outside the newsgroups.
Roger is everything that adults do not want to be.
Wimp. Milquetoast.
Curtain Boy.

It is not hard to make a good clean and wide audio transmission with a mobile rig, so the answer to your second question.... I have owned both and yes it will transmit as cleanly and clearly as the 746,,, or at least close to it.

Your first question... it does not even come close to the selectivity and the sensitivity of the 746, so there is no way possible to get the same receive capabilities. The hi tech digital circuitry in the DSP, The notch filter et al is superior by far in the 746 when compared to the 706. Don't get me wrong... the 706 in my opinion along with the FT100D are the two best mobile rigs made.

Well maybe if you are good your mommy might let you use an Icom radio.And if you play nice with it she may even buy you one.

lol...

My Mom lets me do what I want. It's a product of being a decent citizen all my life. However, there are some folks that post to this NG that feel they know what's best for everyone and want to control everything people say and do.

I don't own an ICOM, but I'm sure they're fine radios. Not being licensed, I would only be able to use one for monitoring purposes anyway. I use my TS-430S for that so I'm already covered.

Good luck.

Jeff

That, of course, isn't the way it will work at all, Dimwit.

First, the police who confiscated the W4AMP and WA4SEX computers find email to you in one of the out boxes. Next, they subpoena your email servers for their logs.

If the logs show that you retrieved the email that the O'Briens sent, then your lies fall apart. No judge will believe your story about a mysterious remailer ("I don't know where the marijuana came from, your honor. Somebody must have thrown it into my car while it was parked").

Do you want the upper or the lower bunk?

If you were really sorry, you would put all your stuff in one post.

If you were good, you would create a for sale web page and direct everybody to that. You can update the web page with what's been sold, and put new stuff on it at will.

I am thinking about possibly purchasing the IC 746 PRO OR 2000 Kenwood

Now I know the main drawbacks, as far as no tnc or no 432 on the 746 but how good is the 32 bit floating DSP On the ICOM.
Anyone had the chance to play with both the 746 pro and the kenwood?
did you feel that the DSP was better on one or the other?

I am leaning toward the 2000,due to its features.
but also know that the 746pro seems to be a pretty cool radio too thanks for the input

"Many years ago, while in the fourth grade at my elementary school, I had the misfortune of losing my gloves. This, unfortunately, precipitated a fateful trip to the land of limbo known as [evil music] The Lost and Found [echoes]. Now, the Lost and Found was located in a large wood box at the end of a poorly lit dead end hallway perpendicular to the main hall. I approached the box with trepidation in my heart, and began rummaging through the mountains of crap in search of my lost gloves. After a minute or so, I came across a mysterious, (heh) closed brown paper bag. Curious as to its contents, I picked it up, little realizing what cards the hand of fate would deliver to me this day. I opened the bag, and peered in. At first, I wasn't sure what I was looking at, but after a moment it hit me - It was a sandwich! Not just any old sandwich, mind you, but what appeared to be a tuna fish sandwich on whole wheat bread, that apparently had been there for awhile. Quite a while, actually. As I gazed in horror at the sight of this monstrosity, I came to the realization that it wasn't on whole wheat bread after all, fuck no, it was white bread that had been hideously transformed into a new darker shade of color; a yellowish-brown to be somewhat imprecise. My eyes creaked in their sockets as they wandered over the surface of this bacteriological nightmare, nay, petri dish of perhaps some new and undiscovered form of life. There was a greenish fuzzy substance that appeared to be growing in small clumps around the perimeter of this foul sandwich of the netherworld. In one corner, a putrid, dark creamy substance appeared to be oozing out and staining the bottom of the bag. Mayonnaise! I began to feel a tickling sensation in the back of my throat; this was not good. In retrospect, I should have realized that my brain was sending emergency response signals to my feet, telling me to "FLEE, GODDAMN YOU, FLEE!!!". I didn't listen. I also wasn't thinking about what I had consumed for school lunch an hour or so earlier - Sloppy Joes and chocolate pudding. I continued to stare at this atrocity, unable to wrench my eyes away, and noticed for the first time that there was movement going in there. Like living grains of rice, there were hundreds of maggots squirming around this foul amalgam of organic material, disturbed by the movement of the bag. Then it hit me: The putrescent smell that emanated from this revolting metamorphosis hit my nose like a 100-ton Freightliner(tm) truck loaded with bridge parts, and pushed my churning stomach over the edge. Old Faithful was erupting! The tremendous river of vomit and bile hit the back of my throat, and careened forward to splash chunks of meat and chewed bread mixed with chocolate pudding and stomach acid all over the contents of the Lost and Found that I had previously been rummaging in, thus guaranteeing that there would be numerous items to never be claimed by their rightful owners. Little Timmy's G.I. Joe(tm) lunch box was for evermore never to be re-united with its broken-hearted owner. It was probably fair to say that the only proper thing to be done was to drag out the box to the front lawn, and incinerate the entire foul mess before another victim fell prey to it's contents. It's fate I never found out, perhaps the janitor added his own projectile vomiting to my masterful work of art. I lurched away from this ungodly disaster, trying to keep the remaining contents of my stomach under control. I crept with as much stealth as I could muster back to the main hall, and peered around the corners to see if anyone was coming. The coast was clear! I slunk away like a thief in the night, never to return to the scene of the desecration again. I never did find those lost gloves. Even if I had, I don't think I could ever have worn them anyway."

Roger,

Here's some facts. You post to what? maybe 100 groups on Usenet?
give or take? You claim to have received a photo from an anonymous source, right? Then, you post it to a ham radio group. Why? did you select a ham radio group? Posting it here implies that you have knowledge of why it should be posted here. Follow me so far? Ok.
Then, you begin asking questions and making statements about an open criminal investigation. By virtue of your statements, you indicated the photo and criminal investigation are connected in some way known to you. Thus, you know something about that photo and the criminal investigation, but what? Tell me more Roger. Who is the woman in the photo? Do you know? If not, then why did you post a photo of an anonymous woman in this NG? Roger, you posted that photo for a specific reason, known to you. Tell us why. And spare us your childish profanity and name calling.

Thank you,

Nomesco

This is an announcement concerning an e-mail based "natural radio" VLF discussion group. This group contains members from all walks of life who are interested in discussing "natural radio" and related topics to "natural radio" VLF monitoring. VLF listeners now have an outlet for discussing "natural radio" related issues and similar topics in a group format. Current VLF activity, whistlers, chorus, schematics, receiver designs, etc., are all welcome.

The natural radio VLF group is a discussion group dedicated to those who enjoy monitoring radio frequencies in the VLF radio spectrum and slightly below the VLF spectrum (3-30 KHz). We listen to the amazing "radio" sounds created by planet earth such as whistlers, chorus, tweeks, risers and hiss on simple VLF receivers. Listen to beautiful bird like sounds created by the northern lights while watching them at the same time! Listen to an oncoming solar flare impact our planet's ionosphere and magnetosphere live! Listen to distant lightning ring during nighttime hours. Study sprites and jets! Discuss VLF receiver designs. The sky is the limit when it comes to VLF!

To join the VLF discussion group simply send a blank e-mail to VLF_Group-subscribe@yahoogroups.com. Once subscribed, all messages sent to VLF_Group@yahoogroups.com will be sent to all members who are part of the VLF discussion group. The VLF group is an e-mail reflector and is a recent endeavor to try to tie VLF listeners together by e-mail for discussion and alert purposes. Feel free to subscribe or unsubscribe from this group at any time. You will be sent a confirmation e-mail and further information upon successfully subscribing to the list.

Amp Supply Co. LA-1000 HF Amp. 160-10m

Have for sale or trade an Amp Supply Co. LA-1000 HF amplifier. Late 80's model, with Ameritron serial placard. Manual states 500-600w output. Tubes are doing about 450 on 80m. Amp is in good shape and working perfectly but has a few scratches. Power switch has been replaced with incorrect but heavy-duty switch. Looking to sell or trade for a Dualband mobile such as TMV-7A or similar. Will only consider Icom, Kenwood and Yaesu mobile ham radios depending on mod availability. Will also consider only Motorola/Radius handhelds or mobiles (Max, GM, M1225, etc, as well. Jedi, Radius or Pro series.) Prefer VHF. U-ship, (will average $20-$35 CONUS).
Thanks and please reply direct,
Randy, KC8CPK

Why is his case not listed on the Cobb County offense page? I know he's in jail but why is it not there?

Simple concept, really. In fact this is one of Roger's rather empty arguments...not to imply that you are as vapid as Roger.
The information and the charges are just that. Charges. According to the law of the land the accused remain innocent until found guilt either by confession or by a trial. The police will not, cannot, post such information until the case is closed and then only if the party(s) are found guilty.
There are many reasons for this, the major one being one of legalities. To post such information before the resolution of the case would have many, many repercussions. It would be foolhardy for any police agency to post each and every arrest they make on a web site even if they had time to do so.
Roger can argue that the "arrest" did not take place because he cannot find it posted on various agency web sites, but Roger knows better. He is very much aware of the arrests and incarceration and no amount of denial will negate such. He is only blowing smoke.

Could it be because he lives in Paulding County? It would not be unusual to have a regional jail, shared by several counties. Or, his local jail may be full and Cobb County Jail is taking the overflow. In either of these cases, people who are arrested would be housed in the regional or overflow jail -- Cobb County -- but would go to trial in the court in their home county. If this is the case, the individual's name will never show up on the Cobb County docket because he is going to trial in Paulding County.

Don't know if this is the case, but it is a possibility.

Heck...he has yet to figure out what day it is much less how to spell same.
He is still denying that the two Dimmys are wards of the county.
If ignorance is bliss, Rogie must be one happy dude!

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: SECOND SPACE VISITOR OPERATES HAM RADIO FROM THE ISS

South African amateur researcher Mark Shuttleworth has made his way to the International Space Station and to ham radio. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Roy Neal, K6DUE, has been following the mission and brings us up to date:

(STUDENTS CHEER)

MORE THAN 200 STUDENTS, IN SOUTH AFRICA, CHEERED THEIR NEW HERO, MARK SHUTTLEWORTH. THEY TALKED TO HIM VIA AMATEUR RADIO. NICE DX. ON THE FIRST CALL, THESE ARE STUDENTS IN CAPE TOWN, TALKING TO THE PASSENGER IN SPACE BY WAY OF HAM STATION VK5ZAI, IN AUSTRALIA.

(STUDENT QUESTION AND SHUTTLEWORTH RESPONSE)

MARK SHUTTLEWORTH HAS BECOME A HERO IN SOUTH AFRICA. TO QUOTE THE HEADLINES: “HE’S THE FIRST AFRICAN IN SPACE” AND HAM RADIO HAS ENHANCED THAT IMAGE.

USING ARISS -- THE AMATEUR RADIO ON THE INTERNATIONAL SPACE STATION -- WITH SPECIAL PERMISSION AND AN HONORARY LICENSE -- SHUTTLEWORTH LINED UP CONTACTS WITH HUNDREDS OF SCHOOL KIDS -- SCHOOL LEARNERS THEY'RE CALLED IN SOUTH AFRICA. HE ALSO MADE SOME GENERAL CONTACTS WITH HAM RADIO OPERATORS.

ON FOUR DIFFERENT DAYS, STUDENTS GATHERED AT FOUR SPECIAL SCHOOLS, STARTING WITH SHUTTLEWORTH'S ALMA MATER, BISHOPS IN CAPE TOWN. ALL TOLD, ABOUT A THOUSAND SOUTH AFRICAN STUDENT LEARNERS SHARED THE EXPERIENCE OF DIRECT CONTACT.

ON THE SECOND DAY SOME 300 STUDENTS GATHERED AT THE HAVENSIDE COMMUNITY CENTER IN DURBAN WERE TREATED TO SOME REAL TIME EXCITEMENT. SHUTTLEWORTH WAS NOT ON THE AIR AT THE APPOINTED HOUR! HE WAS BUSY COMPLETING A MEDICAL EXPERIMENT.

AN EMERGENCY TEAM WENT TO WORK. THEY CALLED RUSSIAN MISSION CONTROL, IN MOSCOW, NASA MISSION CONTROL IN HOUSTON, MARK SHUTTLEWORTH ABOARD THE SPACE STATION…AND THEY AWAKENED TONY HUTCHISON, VK5ZAI, IN AUSTRALIA BEFORE DAWN.

AT ONE POINT THE SOUTH AFRICAN COORDINATOR, RICHARD MILLS, WAS ON THREE PHONES AT THE SAME TIME. SOMEHOW IT WORKED AND LESS THAN HALF AN HOUR AFTER THE FIRST ATTEMPT THEY MADE CONTACT AND THE HAPPY STUDENTS CHATTED BRIEFLY WITH THEIR HERO IN SPACE.

ARISS PROVIDED TOP NOTCH GROUND STATIONS IN AUSTRALIA, SOUTH AFRICA AND THE UNITED STATES TO MAKE THE CONTACTS. ON THE AIR, MARK USED ONE OF THE ISS INTERNATIONAL CALLS, NA1SS. THE COMMUNICATIONS WERE FED AROUND THE WORLD AS A DONATION FROM WORLDCOM, THE INTERNATIONAL COMMUNICATIONS NETWORK.

MOST SOUTH AFRICAN RADIO AND TELEVISION STATIONS AND NETWORKS CARRIED THE REPORTS LIVE AND REPEATED THEM ON TAPE. NEWSPAPERS AND MAGAZINES GAVE THEM HEADLINES GALORE. IN THE UNITED STATES, CABLE NETWORK MSNBC CARRIED THE CONTACTS.

--

BEFORE TAKING OFF ON HIS SPACE FLIGHT, FOR WHICH HE PAID RUSSIA AN ESTIMATED $20 MILLION, SHUTTLEWORTH TOLD REPORTERS THAT HIS LIVE COMMUNICATION REPRESENTS A MAJOR TURNING POINT FOR THE IMAGE OF SOUTH AFRICAN EDUCATION. THEN MARK SHUTTLEWORTH ADDED "THIS PUTS A GROUP OF OUR SCHOOL LEARNERS UNIQUELY INTO THE GLOBAL SPOTLIGHT OF SPACE EXPLORATION."

AND THAT'S JUST WHAT HE DID, HOLDING CONVERSATIONS WITH STUDENTS WHO WON THE RIGHT TO ASK THEIR QUESTIONS IN A NATIONAL COMPETITION.
(STUDENT QUESTION AND SHUTTLEWORTH RESPONSE)
--
SPACE TRAVEL HAS BEEN A LIFELONG DREAM FOR MARK SHUTTLEWORTH. HE HAS SHARED IT WITH A VERY GRATEFUL SOUTH AFRICA AND IN THE PROCESS HAS GIVEN AMATEUR RADIO A MAGNIFICENT SHOWCASE TO THE WORLD.

FOR THE AMATEUR RADIO NEWSLINE, RN, K6DUE.

The crew's primary mission was to deliver a fresh Soyuz spacecraft to the I-S-S. This spacecraft remains available as an emergency escape lifeboat. (ARNewsline(tm))

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: SHUTTLEWORTH MAKES RANDOM CONTACTS

Mark Shuttlesworth was active on voice over North America from the International Space Station making random contacts. He used the standard space communications F-M channel pair 145.800 to transmit while listening on 144.490 MHz. One of those he spoke to was AMSAT North America's Frank Bauer, KA3HDO. Mark's audio was captured by Bruce Paige, KK5DO and posted to his website. Take a listen:

Shuttleworth: "Kilo-Alpha-3-Hotel-Delta-Oscar this is NA1SS. Do you copy us?" (Response)
Shuttleworth: "Thaks very much for your help with the station on the ISS."
--

Shuttleworth was only been heard using NA1SS. That's a call assigned to the ISS. He's not used his honorary South African ZS-RSA callsign. According to Miles Mann, WF1F, Shuttleworth worked many stations as he flew across the United States. This included school amateur radio club KB3BRT in Knoxville Pennsylvania. More next week. (ARNewsline(tm) with audio provided by KK5DO)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: SHUTTLEWORTHS SPECIAL CALL

Before his flight, Mark Shuttleworth was granted a temporary honorary ham radio call to operate from the International Space Station. And while everyone who is assigned to the ISS has some form of ham radio certification, the call, ZS RSA, is a one of a kind. Amateur Radio Newsline's Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ, tells us why:

According to Deon Erwin, ZR1DQ, space visitor Mark Shuttleworth received all the information in Russia's Star City, from the South African Radio League, to study for his ham radio license and he was trying to fit these studies into his busy training schedule. However, there was doubt whether Shuttleworth would actually have the time to complete his ham radio exam due to the eight months it took to learn Russian and simultaneously completing his astronaut training.

So the Oakdale Amateur Radio Club near Cape Town, South Africa, negotiated with the South African licensing authority to grant Shuttleworth an Amateur Radio license in light of the tight schedule before the launch and in anticipation of him writing the test. The authorities agreed and awarded the temporary, honorary and very unique callsign ZS RSA. ZS is the prefix for South Africa' and R S A represents the nations name -- the Republic of South Africa.

Shuttleworth’s callsign is only valid for three months. The licensing authorities did not assign a number to the callsign, as the numerals represent South Africa’s provinces and geographic locations. And in the South African licensing system no separate callsign allocation exists for space communications.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ

The Oakdale Amateur Radio Club is located in Durbanville, a village which is about 30 kilometers North East of Cape Town. Durbanville is Shuttleworth’s home town and where his family still lives. (ARNewsline with information from SAREX remailer)

REPEATER LINKING: IRLP SURPASSES 400

Nate Duehr, WY0X, reports that the Internet Radio Linking Project or I-R-L-P has now exceeded 400 nodes. The latest list shows the number stands at 403 installed.

The Internet Radio Linking Project permits repeaters around the world to interconnect with one another using a Linux based computer and a simple computer to repeater interface. The system is secure against non hams penetrating it because of its propriority hardware and software made available only to licensed radio amateurs. In fact, it is the only Internet ham radio linking system permitted by the Australian government.

More information is on the world wide web at www.irlp.net. Be sure to look at http://status.irlp.net and http://maps.irlp.net to see if there is an I-R-L-P node near you (WY0X)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: AMSAT-NA ANNOUNCES NEW SATELLITE PROJECT

AMSAT North America has started construction of a new low-earth-orbit communications satellite. According to the groups president Robin Haighton, VE3FRH, the satellite will be similar in size to the original AMSAT Microsat design, but will incorporate all new leading edge electronics and RF technology

The new satellite will be code named AMSAT OSCAR E or Echo until launch. It will contain both analog and digital VHF and UHF FM transponders similar to those carried on the UOSAT-OSCAR 14 and AMRAD-OSCAR 27 ham-sats that are currently in orbit. In addition, the new satellite will have the capability to host one or two other experimental payloads.

Haighton discussed the new bird at the organization's Board of Directors meeting held in Washington, DC, on April 20th and 21st. The spacecraft is now slated to be ready for launch in late 2003. AMSAT says that a number of affordable launch opportunities are being actively explored. (ANS)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: KOLIBRI 2000 TO DE-ORBIT

The Kolibri-2000 Russian and Australian School Scientific Research Microsatellite is headed toward a fiery grave. Kolibri-2000, later named RS-21 was launched on March 19th at 22:00 UTC from the International Space Station and has been in orbit for the past 6 weeks. During that time Kolibri's has been sending back telemetry and digital voice recordings.

The low cost RS-21 satellite was designed for this type of short duration mission. Part of its job included analyzing particles using a very sophisticated a flux-gate magnetometer and sending that data back to Earth. But all of this will soon end as Kolibri-2000 will reenter the Earths atmosphere and burn up sometime between May 3rd to the 4th UTC time.

Since the RS-21 has solar panels to recharge it batteries, it should be able to continue to transmit data until re-entry occurs. To hear its last transmissions, keep your radio set to the satellites primary downlink on 435.335 MHz and secondary downlink on 145.825 MHz. Both frequencies operate CW and FSK and you might want to keep a tape recorder running to catch a bit of ham radio space history as the mission of Kolibri-2000 comes to an end. ENFORCEMENT: OWNERS OF BROOKLYN REPEATER DON’T RESPOND TO FCC

The owner operators of a repeater in the New York City area have not yet responded to a letter of inquiry from the FCC and the agency wants to know why. So it has once again written to one of the pair of hams to demand an answer. The person posing the questions is Special Counsel Riley Hollingsworth, K4ZDH:

Hollingsworth: “We warned Thomas Batista, an operator of the KC2DDD and the N2IFU repeater -- the repeater alternately known by both of those call signs -- in Corona New York -- that we had nor gotten a response from him to our letter of February 15th. That letter concerned interference and allegations of no coordination.”
--

In earlier letters to Batista and Gerardo Arias regarding the same repeater, the FCC asked for an explanation of why the system input is on 143.020 MHz. This is a frequency not allocated for use by hams. (FCC)

RADIO RULES: XM & SIRIUS CONCERNED ABOUT OUT-OF-BAND EMISSIONS

The nation's two satellite digital audio radio service providers, XM and Sirius, are concerned that out-of-band signals from a variety of wireless devices. The CGC Communicator reports that the two worry that these services will eventually cause widespread interference to their program services.

Singled out as potential culprits are license-free Part 15 and 18 devices such as ISM, Bluetooth, IEEE 802.11b, home RF wireless devices, RF lighting, ultra-wideband devices and even Family Radio Service transmitters. The fifth harmonics from Channels FRS channels 8 to 14 fall within XM's passband but not Sirius's. More information is found at the FCC website under ET Docket 01-278, RM-9375 and RM-10051. EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: AUTOMATING NEWSLINE

Fred Vobbe of the National Radio Club D-X Audio Service says that he is now playing Amateur Radio Newsline automatically on his repeater. Fred says that he uses Echo Station software to automatically play this newscast every Saturday and Monday night at 7 P-M over his W8HDU repeater.

Fred’s machine operates 443.625 and is located in Allen County Ohio. More on Echo Station automation software is on the word wide web at www dot westmountainradio.com and click the link on the right side of the page that says Amateur Radio soundcard software presentation. (W8HDU)

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: CALL 511 IN UTAH FOR TRAFFIC INFO

Travelers in Utah have a new way to get updates on traffic, and they can do it without having to watch television or listen to the radio. Instead, using a cellular phone, they can dial the nation's first voice-activated 511 travel service line.

Called Tellme, this is one of several free, voice-activated services known as voice portals.' Voice portals use speach recognition software to retrieve and translate information from the Internet. Taking their cues from spoken words, the services can dispense stock quotes, horoscopes, driving directions, sports scores and other widely sought information over any telephone.

Utah was one of six states selected to launch a 511 service after the Federal Communications Commission officially designated 511 as a nationwide number for travel information back in July 2000. Like the emergency number 911, the 511 systems are a public service and free. (Road Routes)

INTERNATIONAL: UK ANNOUNCES INTERMEDIATE LICENSE CLASS PLANS

The United Kingdom’s Radiocommunications Agency has announced details of the qualifications and examinations for the revised licensing structure for that nations Amateur Radio service.

A press release from the Radiocommunications Agency says that a new program of study for the U-K Intermediate license will be introduced early in 2003. This will be based on the current Novice syllabus but will exclude those topics covered in the Foundation License. The Radiocommunications Agency says that it plans to announce the course outline at least three months ahead of its introduction. It will be run initially as a pilot format similar to the Foundation pilot. Once the new syllabus is in force, a pass at Foundation level will be a pre-requisite to sitting the Intermediate Class U-K exam.

The new licensing structure was announced in September 2001. It’s first phase was the introduction of the Foundation License last January. This new ticket has been deemed to be a major success with over 1500 M 3 prefix Foundation Licenses having been issued. (RSGB)

In D-X, what is believed to be the first 2-meter random meteor scatter contact has been made between Australia and New Zealand. Rex Moncur, VK7MO, in Hobart and Bob McQuarrie, ZL3TY, in Greymouth, on the west coast of the south island of New Zealand, made the contact on April 13th over a distance of 1950 kilometres using the W-S-J-T software. (Q-News, RSGB)

A bit lower in frequency, HC8N reports that the new QSL Route to him is Randy Becnel, W5UE, at Post Office Box 170, Kiln, MS 39556-0170 in the United States. Bechnel replaces Derek Wills AA5BT who is stepping down after 10 years of service and 50,000 QSL requests answered. (Various DX publications)

Also, Dennis Hanley, G3YVY, says that he has been informed that his callsign is being used on 20 meters. At present Dennis has no High Frequency equipment and says that has no immediate plans to become active on the H-F bands. (RSGB)

THAT FINAL ITEM: USA ARDF CHAMPIONSHIP WINNERS ANNOUNCED

And finally, who's the best in the country at finding hidden transmitters? Here's Newsline's Joe Moell, K0OV, with the results of a contest to find the answer, and an opportunity for your club to get in on the fun.

USA has just completed its second national championships of on-foot hidden transmitter hunting, also called radio-orienteering and ARDF. The event took place near Pine Mountain, Georgia, hosted by hams in the Georgia Orienteering club. Primary organizers were Laurie Searle KG4FDM and Sam Smith N4MAP. About two dozen of our country's best fox-finders went into the deep woods of Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park, trying to be first to find up to five transmitters and then navigate their way to the finish line. Their rewards: the possibility of a medal and a place on our country's team going to the ARDF World Championships in Slovakia this coming September.

The championships included two complete courses on consecutive days, the first on two meters and the second on 80 meters. Best performance overall was by Gyuri Nagi KF6YKN, who averaged 19 minutes per fox on two meters and an amazing 15 minutes per fox on 80 meters. Gyuri, whose other call is HA3PA, is a part-time US resident who learned the sport in his native Hungary. He competed in M21, the prime age division, requiring him to find five foxes on a six kilometer forest course. Gold medal winning hams in other age and gender divisions were Jerry Boyd WB8WFK, Valerie Meyer KG4QWE, John Munsey KB3GK, Debbie Pendley KD5LOK, Charlie Siler KO4NO, and Jack Stump KD5OEO.

Hidden transmitter hunting is a fast-growing activity in the USA, whether on foot like these championships, or in cars full of direction finding gear and computers. It's time for your club to give it a try. The perfect opportunity is coming May 11 and 12, which will be the fifth annual National Foxhunting Weekend, sponsored by CQ magazine. The May issue of CQ has all the details. On the Web, you can find lots of information on both the National Fox Hunting W and the just-completed national Championships at www.homingin.com. That's homingin -- one word -- homingin.com

From southern California, where every weekend is a transmitter hunting weekend, this is Joe Moell K-zero-Oscar-Victor for Amateur Radio Newsline.

--

The next stop for the winners? Hopefully Slovakia and the world championships this fall. (ARNewsline(tm). K0OV)

Wiseman's lack of response to Nomen Nesco's questions herby noted.
Roger claims to have received a photo of an anonymous woman from an anonymous source. Wiseman posts to 100 or more newsgroups. Yet, he opens a photo attachment from an anonymous source, contrary to good security, then specifically posts that photo to an amateur radio news group.
More facts. Wiseman's hatred for the victimized family of a felony crime is well documented. Moreover, Wiseman's close association and friendship with the alleged perpetrators of the felony crime is also well documented. The photo was the product of a felony crime, perpetrated on a family for whom Wiseman's hatred is well documented.
Why did Wiseman post this felony crime-related photo in an amateur radio news group? Easy. Wiseman knew it would do the most damage there, to the victimized family that he hates so much. Wiseman's knowledge of the significance of this felony crime-related photo is based on his close association with the alleged perpetrators. Do I hear Conspiracy? Maybe, but the forensic analysis being done by officers on the perpetrators' seized computers will be the final determination of any conspiracy charges. And Roger, if or when they find this exact photo on the perpetrators' computers, the link between you and them will grow stronger. It will get stronger yet if they find email that was exchanged between you and the alleged perpetrators. It is my guess that the content of those emails will yield the final determination as to what the authorities decide to do. Curse and swear and call people childish names and rant all you want Wiseman, but you can't change the fact that that photo you posted, and is now archived by Altopia, is part and parcel of a very serious felony crime committed in the state of Georgia. And again Roger, please do spare us your filthy mouth and childish name calling.

Bullshit. The Cobb County Superior Court website has no records of it.
If that's where he's "incarcerated," then that's where the records would be.
Faggot Lee said he was arrested in Cobb County. But, the Court records dont' show it. Must be one of those Roswell-like coverups/conspiracies.

Seems you are the only one who hasn't called. They are there because I have called just to see for myself. The matron said mine was about the 30th call since the arrest and she had the charges and names in her memory because they are so popular. You can deny all you want but if you are a friend of theirs it might be nice if you sent them some money to put on the books so they could buy snacks and stuff instead of arguing a moot point.

Funny how it isn't on the official records. Why would I waste time calling when it isn't in the records of criminal or civil cases, nor is it on the court calendars.
Call in the X files agents before the end of the show in three weeks to

Hi.

I carry a wide range of software's for soundcard use on such modes as PSK31, RTTY, MFSK, SSTV, HELL, THROB, CW etc

Also stock a range of isolated interfaces to use between radio, and pc. These include CAT control versions, and especially suited to Icoms. All units are professionally built and cased. All connector cables are supplied, and simply plug in and play with the software's.These units also work well with the internet linking software EQSO.

Two sites to choose from just in case of slow servers.

But without an ability to use four letter words, ABOMIN8 is completely handicapped on the air. What could he possibly say under those conditions? How would he be able to express himself?

That FCC guy Hollingsworth is a spoil sport, isn't he? :-o

Emergency Situation Report e-mail list for Pennsylvanians

PA-SitRep is a free, 100% non-commercial,
nonprofit, e-mail list and web site.

The PA-SitRep emergency traffic e-mail list is a tool that will enable you to monitor and report on major emergency situations throughout the State of Pennsylvania including weather emergencies, natural disasters, environmental disasters, civil disturbances and threats of terrorism, major fires, and manhunts.

Subscribers are encouraged to utilize their home, work and cell phone e-mail addresses for receiving messages from the PA-SitRep e-mail list.

Because messages posted to the list are limitted to situation reports of MAJOR emergency situations within the State of PA, message volume on PA-SitRep is EXTREMELY low.

PA-SitRep is also building a list of PA-SitRep
Contacts, most of whom are Amateur Radio
Operators (http://www.pa-sitrep.com/contact.htm).

PA-SitRep Contacts monitor our higher volume
SitRep/Discussion mail list and post situation reports ot the discussion list and to the main list.
PA-SitRep Contacts also submit their contact info for our site and may be contacted for a first hand situation report should an emergency situation arise in their area.

Please visit the site to learn more:

Does anyone have a manual for the ICOM 3200 dual band 144/440 mobile radio?
I just aquired one at a yard sale and need the manual to program the bugger, especially the PL tone table.

Scans are ok in JPG, MAX, etc formats are ok.

Thanks in advance.

I have for sale a pair of Yaesu HTs. They are both as new, almost no use and work perfectly.
1. Yaesu FT-11R 2 meter HT, 5 watts with 9.6 battery, 150 memories, wall charger, manual, tones,
New price was $279.99
2. Yaesu FT-41R 70cm/440 HT, 3.5 watts with 9.6 battery, 150 memories, wall charger, manual, tones, original box. This HT has been used about 5 times. Original Price $339.99
These HTs come with the standard accessories. Plus a Comet CH-75 Dual Band Antenna that can be used on either HT. On 440 it provides 3.2db gain. Original Price: $25.95. And a new Speaker Mic that can be used on either HT.
These HTs are small. They were marketed as the "world's smallest HTs with a full sized keypad."
Price for Total Package is: $245 plus shipping from 79602. Thanks, Charlie Hugg, K5MBX

Paul Erickson MOSB [Man of Steel Balls]
R. Don's Show is studly! Here's what some guy sent him!

Steel Balls is on LIVE365 with Date and Mate Talk Show

This is typical of a guy who finally is FED UP with being lonely, horny and desperate.
The good news? He's fed up thus [subconsciously] ready for R. Don Steele's Steel Balls Principles.

The BAD NEWS? He crushes his ego one more TIME. He destroys any remnant of self-confidence he had left. He smashes his self esteem down to "I am an unattractive loser."

This is one of THE most common SELF-DESTRUCTIVE things guys do. The Steel Balls Principle is "Don't keep doing the same things over and over expecting a different result."

David did exactly what Steele did when he got divorced at age 42. He thought women went to clubs and bars to meet men so he went to clubs and bars to meet them. He dressed for success. He wasted 1.5 years of his life and an estimated $20,000 after tax dollars learning that the woman he wants to meet is not in a bar or club. The females in bars and clubs are looking for Mr. Rite or they are there for all of the purposes explained in How to Date Young Women, Volume 1, none of which are productive or effective for find-meet-talk-date-mate.

David made 5 MAJOR MISTAKES beyond going to a club.

STEELE will explain on the www radio show Tuesday from NOON-1PM PACIFIC time.

David's story is below the intructions on how to tune in and call in to the THRUTH IN DATING AND MATING show.

GO TO http://steelballs.com and CLICK ON LISTEN TO DON ON THE RADIO, that takes you to live365 and Steele's station. Click on the yellow speaker THEN follow the prompts and you are WIRED for Steel Balls Truth in Dating and Mating. Past shows play 24/7. If you can hear the previous shows, you're in there! Click PRESET this station Then the next time you go there just click PRESET and your ready to talk with Don LIVE! 562-696-1313 IT ONLY WORKS when he's on the air LIVE.

Don,

Happy Cinco de Mayo!!

I wanted to see if you?d be able to offer me some feedback. Let me start by giving you a brief on me: I?m a month shy of turning a young 41-yrs; been married once before and was divorced after 8-yrs; I comfortably over this former relationship and able to admit my mistakes. I have been solo for 2-yrs. I?ve dated some women, but not many due to my self-indulgence, moving and career-building. I have also been holding out for someone special?yada, yada.

Here?s my story.

I ended up possibly missing out on one to three different opportunities ? all on the same night. I will try and give you the short version.

I went to a live music club dressed nice, but not totally aware of the type of music the band played ? whether it was danceable or not. After one-and-a-half songs, I decided to dance solo ? as many others, of both genders, were. I didn?t concern myself with what others thought, yet at the same time I was probably giving what appeared to be the few single women there a sample of my abilities ? so they?d have reference if I asked them to dance. This very attractive petite blonde came out and danced by herself. I looked at her a couple of times and thought, ??very cute?. She looked at me, but only very briefly. I thought I?d keep an eye on her every so often to watch for signs of interest ? in clusters, mind you. This lady mainly danced by herself throughout the night. She did dance with a couple of girlfriends and with a guy that appeared to be an old friend, but mainly solo. While dancing, she?d dart a glance at me, but look away quickly. Okay, no interest there. I found her attractive and liked watching her move, but was very discreet in my momentary glances at her. On a few occasions, as she moved to where we were face-to-face, I held my gaze on her long enough so if she looked at me I could reveal my interest. She?d look as she would do every once in a while, but eye contact was again brief with a level look away and gave no return smile. I conveyed no interest, turned away and didn?t focus on her. She began moving closer and closer to me while dancing. Still, when our eyes met it was short and no smile. No problem, she wasn?t the only female there. I wrote it off. The closer she moved towards me while dancing had me a little intrigued. She even removed a section of her clothing. She had like a two-piece top that when the outer layer was removed it revealed a backless halter top that was short as well exposing her mid-section ? very sexy! I never let her see me looking at anything other than her face ? as I waited for a return glance. As before, she?d look, but the same story. She would dance within a foot of me, placing her hands on her hip & swaying very provocatively. Several times while her arms swung as she moved she?d graze me with her hand. Seemed like a sign of interest to me. I watched her as she moved around the dance floor and she did not dance this way in as close of proximity to other guys, but still the short eye contact and no smile. The signs were either inconsistent or incomplete. I thought maybe her non-verbal skills are undeveloped. Naw?, she is not interested; I?m kidding myself. Who doesn?t smile or look at someone if they?re interested? I continued to be aloof.

The friend of the blonde was dancing by herself almost as much. I looked her way a couple of times and offered a polite smile. She returned some very warm smiles with the ?longer than socially appropriate? eye contact. I thought, ?Great!? I start something with this lady after confusing the signals from the blonde; she gets mad and says something to this other lady. I looked again at the blonde to offer a chance to give me a definitive sign. She looked a moment longer than before, but pulled eyes away while remaining level. Only difference was an ever-so-slight smile this time ? was she a game player?? The signals were just too weak to be certain; maybe I was expecting too much.

Then I began noticing a third lady ? another brunette, like the friend of the blonde, which is more my preference. She also offered long eye contact and very warm smiles. I thought I was creating an illusion, but then I saw it again.

All three women were petite, shapely and adorable. I felt a bit guilty if I abandoned the blonde because I misread her clusters. All three would dance with someone on an occasion. Sometimes these women would dance with guys, but seemingly unattached. The biggest reason I determined they weren?t their boyfriends was they?d all look over their dance-mates shoulder ? to see if I was looking at them [?]; to convey they?re unattached, the situation was temporary and/or they wanted to indicate they still had interest [?].

I tried thinking of situations from the book ? Body Language Secrets, but could only recall seated or standing examples where the women weren?t constantly sought after like a dance-floor situation. I feel like I choked. And to pour more salt on my wound, I did it three times? all in one night! And another topper, they were all babes. It wouldn?t have been as harsh if they were 4?s or 5?s, but they were easily 8?s or very close and very hot!

Any thoughts or ideas that you could offer would be genuinely appreciated!!

David

Here's how you tune in:

4691. Need help to build VHF/UHF Radio Curcuit

Hi there,

I've been tinkering around with a shortwave radio receiver that can receive SW bands, but I want to modify it so that it can receive a spectrum higher than the typical sw band (3-30 MHz).

I have the radio shack curcuit diagram (Radio Shack # 62-5015) that you can get at any Radio Shack store. I know that the frequency ranges is determined by using coils with different inductance values and connecting them to variable capacitors.

Now when I try to build a frequency range that can reach higher freq's, ie. 300 MHz, 1000 MHz, or more. I want to be able to receive UHf broadcast audio signals (eg. local tv station signals) and higher. And I know the formula for frequencies is X = 1/2*Pi*f C where is X is the capacitor's Reactance in ohms. I know that an inductor connected to a capacitor in series creates an oscillating LC curcuit that creates a resonant frequency, which is then fed through a diode in order to be decoded to a speaker. But my calculations are always limited by the limitations of what is available in capacitor values sold at stores: capacitors' lowest values are always in the pF range, inductors usually have a range of uH values and an inductance reactance of about 1000 -20,000 ohms.

I find then, that my calculations are always limited to producing AM, SW, and FM frequency range signals. Can someone else suggest a receiver curcuit that can reproduce such higher frequencies?

PLEASE REPLY BY E-MAIL TO ME BECAUSE I DO NOT CHECK BACK IN THESE NEWSGROUPS. THANKS.

Most Usenet users consider such a request to be rather rude. If you can take the time out to post the request here, then you should be interested enough to read the answer here.

That having been said, I think that your attempt to modify an HF receiver directly to receive frequencies above 30 MHz is not the best way to go. It is too easy to inadvertently damage or misalign what is a carefully designed instrument (at least if you are not an expert in receiver design). Instead, you may want to consider building a down converter. Popular in earlier decades, down converters (or simply "converters") are external boxes which contain a mixer and one or more low noise amplifier stages. The mixer converts the desired listening range (say, 144 - 148 MHz) to a lower frequency range such as 26 - 30 MHz, and the HF receiver is used to tune that range.

You don't need to modify the receiver in any way, and the converter box is not too difficult for a hobbyist to build inexpensively. In fact, there are some LSI chips which contain all of the necessary active components, and construction projects using them can be found in several places.

The down side is the fact that, as you go to higher frequencies, the range you will want to tune will eventually exceed the entire range of an HF receiver. The 420 - 450 MHz band is already 30 MHz wide, for example.

But as a first project, a converter can be simple and fun to build and it will not compromise performance. Receiver sensitivity and noise factor can be superior to those of the unaided HF receiver that you use to tune the output range.

This time of the year Roger is especially bitter, if that is possible? You see, everyone is planning and talking about where they are going on vacation and what they'll be doing while on summer vacation. But alas, our Curtains Boy has no real job, never has, never will. So Roger does not get a paid vacation every year. Rather, as every year, Roger will take his vacation on Usenet, posting trash from his recycle bin, spewing childish profanity, etc. But, most funny will be watching SLee hit the "Dance Faster Roger Button." If only SLee would share the location of the "Dance Faster Roger Button."

Dance faster Roger, Dance, Dance Faster Roger!!!!!

Yes, you guys sure have Roger on the ropes. The Lavender Lad is upset as evidenced by his outlandish filthy posts. Roger is doing what he does best, i.e. showing his crass ignorance.
Please, please show Roger a bit of pity. He is not what he presents himself to be. Rogie is rather on a loser side but has yet to come to terms with same.
Note that Roger lives in a rather obscure town, has little to claim as his own, and has been extremely frustrated for years...
The poor guy lost his family ages ago and is now relegated to living the life of a frustrated, little hermit.
Put yourself in his shoes if you can. Imagine, if you will, living in a small home that your mommy owns. Imagine being lonely and pushing fifty years of age. Imagine also, if you will, being in Roger's shoes and knowing that he will never, ever again be able to find a woman that will love him.
Rogie is destined to be lonely for many, many years to come. This would eat away at any normal male in his shoes. In short, Roger must be very, very lonely.
Look at him. Analyze him. No female companionship. No real property ownership. No nothing.
Why bother with Roger?

Hi all,
well i just joined this thread half way through so havent got the full story.

To me it doesnt matter whether your on CB or have an A/B or novice ticket. To me its all about having a good chat,passing knowledge and experience around and meeting new people. The medium through which that can be done for me may be over a pint of Guiness,on a cb,on a HF/VHF/UHF tranciever or via the internet.

I really can't understand the rivalry between various factions.

I started as a straight40 am illegal cb'er,i progressed to illegal ssb then a B licence and now have had an A licence for maybe 6 years or so ??. I listen more than talk and only talk/jump into conversations when i have something useful to add. I dont blather on about sig strengths and all that but some do.

In the end its a use it or lose it situation. Id rather have two old duffers going on about sig strengths and quality on 2m fm than have the whole band clear and the DTI's greedy eyes resting upon it!!.

So enough of this rivalry people!

4716. Looking for mini xmit/receive combo

Hi there,

I don't know if I'm in the right forum, but I'm looking for a mini transmit receive combo. The idea is this:

I have a motorcycle helmet that has a built in headset, and an FRS communicator radio attached to the outside of it. The radio has a pass-through for an audio input (cd player, fm radio, mp3, etc). What I want to do is be able to mount my mp3 player to the front of my bike and wirelessly xmit the signal to the frs radio, rather than swing a cord up to my head. In my ideal world, there'd be a small dongle that plugs into the mp3 player mini-jack that transmits to another small dongle that plugs into the communicator on the helmet.

I've seen the Kima Link It unit, but it transmits to an FM radio, meaning I'd have to add an extra layer yet to the mix that I want to avoid.

Anyone have any ideas?

regards,

Paul

The Free SEX movement has gotten the female O'Brine out of TWO (2) jails. Through the hard work(no pun intended) of the FREE SEX group, the female O'brine was released yesterday from Cobb County jail, only to be picked up by the fuzz (no pun intended) for Paulding County. They promptly bailed her out of the crossbar motel in Paulding County last night. Yes friends, FREE SEX in Georgia is alive and well. It's nice to have FREE SEX when you need them. Dimmy and Bubba are still getting along just fine, in jail, where they belong.

Someone said that you used that money to get a lawyer to get out of a jamming

Hi, am thinking of getting into amateur radio.
May I be so bold as to ask for a good, concise book to study from for the liscencing course.

I want it to be concise since I have a BSEE, I am familiar with any of the theoretical issues of radio; just need to learn the specifics for the liscence.

ALso, are the books that radio shack sells on this decent?
(Just wondering since I have a gift certificate there to use up)

thanks in advance for the info.

You really must take a vacation, Lelnad. Such thoughts have an origination point, you may want to seek professional input, as the molestation of children is no joking matter, but anyone that is familiar with you is aware that such ideas from you are nothing new. Hell of an image you present to the public masses for amateur radio..as has been pointed out to you several times by cbers and amateurs alike...you are a part of the cancer that plagues amateur radio...it's a blight to the service that you even post a call next to your demented thoughts concerning children and sex. Couple that with your repeated calls for violence and the emerging image of you is crystal clear....perhaps a long rest is in order.
Now do what you do best, post a forge or 2 (I like the one where you have me talking to little green men) change the topic, and try to save what little face you have left, as your self-respect has left you long ago. Don't bother replying, you have shown your lack of communication skills,, I just wanted to share your unique elmering ways with the real amateur community. Have a good day.

Hoodat = George Ashley W4FQF who was repeatedly told to cease jamming certain frequencies by the FCC. Polly as he liked to be called back then qrm'ed the 20 meter band for over 4 years unidentified.

He was sent letters by the fcc for repeated jamming o 3.901 and other frequencies. He lied his old wrinkled ass off and denied any knowledge. But, since then he hasn't been heard on the airwaves.

His hobby now is cornholing mules. His fellow jammer W4LLI Billy Jack Moore now holds the stool steady so George can mount his mules.......stumpjumpers indeed!!!

Polly also took an early (unplanned) retirement from Sears when he was caught stealing tents.

He is a two faced hypocrite of the highest degree as he is a front row deacon.
Just as soon as church is over, george goes back to being the filthy asshole he has always been.

Polly, George or whatever you wish to be called now, you staarted the name calling, we will finish it. Your grave will be the first piss stop on the B.A.R.F./Stumpjumper grave pissing tour.

I have several HT600's VHF for sale. There is 8 in all. 6 channel 5 watt.
Also I have 4 HT600's UHF 6 Channel 4 Watt units.
These came from working service. There are no batteries or antennas or charges just the radio. Make me an offer.

I'm currently selling what I believe to be a very useful reference resource for folks dxing marine beacons (transmitting in the longwave part of the spectrum): five (out of a total of 7) rather thick volumes of the List of Lights, Radio Aids and Fog Signals. Published by the U.S. government, they provide global coverage and should provide much help with identifying received stations. Please take a peek at http://cgi.ebay.com/ws/eBayISAPI.dll?ViewItem&item=1536175342&r=0&t=0&showTutorial=0&ed=10 21849181&indexURL=0&rd=1.

If you are interested in these volumes but have no money to spare, you'll find them at libraries that collect govenments documents (called "federal depository libraries").

A buddy here in Dallas needs cash fast and is offering me a Kenwood TS-950S with 4 filters for $1,000. I took my test gear over, checked out the rig, and it is in great shape, clean, nonsmoker. Is this a good price? I am not familiar with the market prices on this rig.

I am going to donate it to a totally handicapped ham who was my mentor in computer programming. He is a retired professor. I owe the guy a lot, as I came here not speaking English and now have a very secure job with a high-tech firm.

Thanks,

Polly,

You are one pious bastard aren't you?

You have the nerve to come here and complain about people.

You who jammed 20 meters for almost five years saying "Herbie Baby Number One".....

You and W4LLI and other stumpjumpers (some who are now dead) jammed 3.901, 3.965 and other frequencies for several years, both from your hovel in the less desirable area of Memphis and your "farm". Now that you are in Collierville you have a real piss willy signal and can't jam effectively anymore.

That fact and the letters from Riley Hollingsworth have curtailed your once prevalent jamming techniques.

Now you want to be holier than thou and decry people using the internet to speak out.

You are nothing more than a worn out old hypocrite who is no longer in the limelight and it bothers you.

Get over it asshole.....

Hoping you will join Seymour and other jammers who are definitely SK's.....

Check ebay.com for what that rig fetches in auctions.
But being able to inspect the rig in person removes some risk and would be worth a somewhat higher price.
I paid about $700 for a TS440SAT a few years ago, but that one is less desirable because of a flaky keyboard.

He's been outed before. Let's see if I can recall. There once was a slow-witted fellow who variously called himself rileygotcha, plaintruth, and realdeal, and who spewed regularly here on r.r.a.m., all the while denying that one was the other and neither was Polly (aka w4fqf).

There was a really bright lad who used to make him dance all the time that made the seemingly innocent comment that the odds seemed pretty slim that more than one person would post in both r.r.a.m. and alt.harmonica..

Lo and behold, up pops plaintruth (or rileygotcha or realdeal; can't remember, doesn't matter, they're all the same person) abusing the bright young lad for his work, but also identifying himself (who else would know?) as plaintruth AND rileygotcha AND realdeal. And wouldn't you know it, 'fqf is a well known, if not accomplished, harmonica nut.

Well, boys and girls, guess what? Do a search on hoodat and alt.harmonica and see what you get.

Busted!

He's been outed before. Let's see if I can recall. There once was a slow-witted fellow who variously called himself rileygotcha, plaintruth, and realdeal, and who spewed regularly here on r.r.a.m., all the while denying that one was the other and neither was Polly (aka w4fqf).

ROTFLMAO!!!!!!! You got him, I forgot about the other names he used.

There was a really bright lad who used to make him dance all the time that made the seemingly innocent comment that the odds seemed pretty slim that more than one person would post in both r.r.a.m. and alt.harmonica..

Lo and behold, up pops plaintruth (or rileygotcha or realdeal; can't remember, doesn't matter, they're all the same person) abusing the bright young lad for his work, but also identifying himself (who else would know?) as plaintruth AND rileygotcha AND realdeal. And wouldn't you know it, 'fqf is a well known, if not accomplished, harmonica nut.

Well, boys and girls, guess what? Do a search on hoodat and alt.harmonica and see what you get.

As for Hoodat, it is george ashley, w4fqf who resides in Collierville, TN. which is outside of Memphis, TN. I have a full file on mr. ashley. It appears that he has been caught jamming amateur frequencies for many years. Now he's trying to "jam" the internet with more lies.

Marshall,
This radio makes a poor choice for a Marine Radio and should it be "discovered" during an inspection (Coast Guard or State WLF types) it is hard to explain why you only have a Modified Amateur Radio on board! Best bet is to buy a Marine Radio since it will be "type accepted" for the Marine Service and leave the amateur gear to being for amateur purposes. The Coast Guard is sensitive to this issue and here in the Gulf Coast States, the USCG will note the radio on the inspection report if no Amateur Radio License is forthcoming. Marine Radios are now under 130 Dollars and the HTX 212 isn't quite that cheap.

BTW-One wrong channel programmed into a moded radio can bring you up on the WRONG frequency and VHF Public Service Types aren't friendly.

I have a maxed-out TS-940SAT which is the predecessor of the 950. And before the 940 there was the TS-930 which first hit the shelves in the late 1970s. The whole family of TS-9x0 HF xcvrs all defined the high end of competition-grade HF xcvrs in their times and to this day will still hold their own very well in the contests and pileups.

Roger responds with a lame post as usual. What would one expect?

4781. Is Roger an Accidental Discharge?

There are those in the Glen Dale area who claim to have some background information concerning Roger Wiseman. One of the more informed persons who claims to know about the Wiseman family stated outright that Roger Wiseman walks the mud of West Virginia due to what is commonly known as an "accidental discharge."
The informant claims that Roger's daddy told his soon to be mommy, way back when they were both 14 years of age, that "I'll pull it out."
Well, Roger's daddy didn't "pull it out" and the accidental discharge resulted in the birth of the ogre with the filthy mouth and sloped forehead that we all know and love today.
One has to wonder if a mere split second of withdrawal could have resulted in Roger not being here today.
What a waste of sperm.

it didn't take any time at all. Besides pricking balloons like yours

Emergency Situation Report e-mail list for Pennsylvanians

PA-SitRep is a free, 100% non-commercial,
nonprofit, e-mail list and web site.

The PA-SitRep emergency traffic e-mail list is a tool that will enable you to monitor and report on major emergency situations throughout the State of Pennsylvania including weather emergencies, natural disasters, environmental disasters, civil disturbances and threats of terrorism, major fires,
and manhunts.

Subscribers are encouraged to utilize their home, work and cell phone e-mail addresses for receiving messages from the PA-SitRep e-mail list.

Because messages posted to the list are limitted to situation reports of MAJOR emergency situations within the State of PA, message volume on
PA-SitRep is EXTREMELY low.

PA-SitRep is also building a list of PA-SitRep
Contacts, most of whom are Amateur Radio
Operators (http://www.pa-sitrep.com/contact.htm).

PA-SitRep Contacts monitor our higher volume
SitRep/Discussion mail list and post situation
reports ot the discussion list and to the main list.
PA-SitRep Contacts also submit their contact info

Poor Polly, talking about wacking away to pictures on the wall.

Polly, you have vilified by the amateurs in the Memphis Amateur Radio Club. Nobody up there except for maybe Billy Jack will have anything to do with you. I have several good friends in the Memphis area. They know you and what you are.

"Groupie to a sucessful ham operator"????

Yeah right.....you have to be a sucessful ham operator first! You spend too much time with those mules instead of getting a decent antenna up.

Polly, the wannabe who is dying.....hurry up, the tour buses are waiting. Your grave will be the first piss stop of many. At the rate the stumphumpers are croaking, we will have to have hige amounts of liquid refreshment available on the caravan of tour buses.

Get a life you pious bastard.

One thing is certain, that Hoodat name was picked up when you lived in the Koon area of Memphis. You lived around them for so long, you started talking and thinking like them. Hoodat say hoodat when i says hoodat.....LOL!!!!!! Koons and now mules.....WTIA that's Polly.

W4AMP sends his regrets that he will not be able to attend the Dayton Hamvention this year. He has been unavoidably detained and cannot get free that weekend.
Dimmy said that he is looking forward to next year and has hopes of attending then. He also wants to know if there is a way to slip his ankle bracelet off so as not to alert his parole officer.
Will SEX be at Dayton? There is a certain "gentleman" looking forward to "meating" her. It's an old friend of Dimmy's from Mikes Package store. If anyone else is interested, bring at least 2 bags.

Thanks for visiting my site, Polly. Not only once, but twice. You truly are obsessed with me.

"Megleomaniac?" Is that supposed to be megalomaniac? Do you have any idea what that means? I'll bet you heard that the same place you once heard "callow poltroon." Remember that?

"Melange of pure crap?" Isn't that an oxymoron. I mean, if a melange is a mixture of incongrous elements then it can't be of one pure part. Don't you agree?

"Hobby hose," huh? I'll bet I can imagine what that must be. Do you use it a lot?

I'll give you two hours to lame together a response. That's much longer than you used to take when I pushed your buttons and pulled your strings before, but you're a couple of years older now and a whole lot more feeble.

But you still can't help yourself.

Amateur Radio Newsline™ Report 1291 - May 10th 2002

Amateur Radio Newsline™ report number 1291 with a release date of Friday, May 10th 2002 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T. Mark Shuttleworth returns to Earth after his ham radio odyssey in space. This story is first on Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1291 coming your way right now.

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: MARK SHUTTLEWORTH RETURNS TO EARTH

South African space explorer Mark Shuttleworth was greeted with Easter eggs and cake as he returned to earth on Sunday May 5th, This, after a ten day stay on the International Space Station that he called unforgettable. And ham radio operators around the world will remember his trip for a long time as well. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Roy Neal, K6DUE, has the wrap-up on Mark Shuttleworth’s ham radio space odyssey:

"Every second will be imprinted and will be with me for the rest of my life.”

Those were the words of a happy Mark Shuttleworth as he was carried away from the Russian Soyuz capsule that brought him and two fellow passengers back down to earth in Kazakhstan on Sunday, May 5th at 7:51 a.m. Moscow time. Before his return to Earth, Shuttleworth delighted hams around the world when he showed up on the air and made numerous random contacts. In short order he was working them like a D-Xpedition pro. Listen:

contact audio here

That recording was supplied by Stan Vandiver, W4SV. We compressed it to give you a glimpse of the way Mark Shuttleworth took to ham radio and the way that ham radio welcomed him.

One ham lucky enough to record both sides of his contact with Shuttleworth was Al Lark, KD4SFF. Using the Experimenters Group Amateur Radio Club callsign N4ISS mobile, Lark spoke with Shuttleworth on May 1st at 9:20 A-M Eastern Daylight Time:

Contact audio here
--

According to Lark, that contact was made from his work van during coffee break in downtown Greenville, South Carolina.

Mark Shuttleworth's operation from the International Space Station was made possible by ARISS. Amateur Radio on the International Space Station. Amateurs from nine countries, in the USA, Russia, Japan, Europe and Canada, have set up ARISS, to design, build, maintain and supervise all operations of the amateur radio station aboard the ISS,

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, Roy Neal, K6DUE.

Shuttleworth is the second person to pay Russia for a trip to the I-S-S. The first was U.S. businessman Dennis Tito, KG6FZX, who travelled to and operated from the space station a year ago. (ARNewsline™ with audio supplied by W4SV and KD4SFF)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: THE OTHER HAM IN THE CREW

Almost lost in the shadow of Mark Shuttleworth is Italian Astronaut Roberto Vittori, IZ6ERU. Vittori was a member of the crew that brought a new Russian built Soyuz escape vehicle and explorer Mark Shuttleworth to the ISS. And while on board the space station, Vittori also took to the air in his native Italian using the ARISS station:

Vittori audio here
--

That recording was made by IT9GSV as Vittori was flying over Rome. Among the other contacts Vittori made was one with a school in the town of Malignani on May the third. (Tnx: IT9GSV, IK1SLD via SAREX Remailer)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: TEEN IDOL MAY BE NEXT SPACE TOURIST

The next space tourist to visit the International Space Station could be a teen heart-throb. Lance Bass, one-fifth the teen pop group *NSYNC, says that he has passed his first battery of tests in his effort to fly into space on a Russian spacecraft later this year.

In a recent television interview, Bass said he is attempting to keep time free during the bands current tour so he can participate in additional medical tests in the U.S.. If they go well, Bass says that he will be heading back to Russia to see if he can qualify for a fall mission to the ISS.

Bass was in Russia last March to undergo an initial series of physical tests. The 22-year-old pop singer's is attempting to qualify for a seat on the Russian mission that's set to launch on October 22nd and return to earth on November 1st. If Bass is approved to fly, it is not known if he would have time to study for a United States Amateur Radio license or if he would be interested in using the ham gear on board the ISS.

By the way, the same news report says that Bass' trip to the Star City Cosmonaut Training Center was paid for in part by Radio Shack. Last year Radio Shack filmed a television commercial aboard the international space station. (Published news reports)

RESCUE RADIO: AMATEURS MUSTER FOR WEATHER EMERGENCIES

The ARRL Letter says that Amateur Radio Emergency Service teams activated or stood by to assist as severe weather struck several states in late April. The National Weather Service said storms over the weekend of the 27th and 28th left pockets of devastation from Kentucky to Maryland. Amateur Radio Newsline's David Black, KB4KCH, picks up the story from here:

La Plata, Maryland was hit hard April 28th when an F5 tornado roared through the town's business district. This time, the agencies that normally help during disasters were themselves hit. The local American Red Cross chapter office and a building housing the Charles County Emergency Operations Center were damaged.

Tom Abernethy, W3TOM is ARRL's Maryland Section Manager. He says Michelle Sack, N3YRZ, who was on duty at the LaPlata hospital broke into a SKYWARN net to report a tornado. Sack reported a the massive storm was only one-half mile away to the west and heading directly for her location.

Sack tracked and described the tornado until it struck and then continued to provide on-the-scene assessments. Other amateurs along the storm's track also provided reports on severity and damage.

Mike Tackish, KA3GRW is the county's ARES Emergency Coordinator and RACES officer. He activated the local ARES and RACES team's emergency operations. Hams set up a command and control net on UHF, and used VHF channels to supply communications for the hospital which lost telephone service and internal communications. Hams also helped the Red Cross with communications.

Hams were also busy helping the National Weather Service as the agency conducted a follow-up investigation of the tornado which had winds of around 260 miles an hour.

Also on the same date, hams in Kentucky were busy when severe weather struck that state. Radio amateurs used a wide area repeater net to relay important information to help the Weather Service and the Meade County Emergency Management Agency.

Weather service forecasters wound up issuing a Tornado Warning based on reports from radio amateurs. One person died, with homes in the Irvington area being damaged or destroyed. Nearly a dozen hams assisted with communications.

In Erie, Pennsylvania, hams were providing communications for a March of Dimes 9-mile walk April 28th, when severe weather prompted them to activate a Skywarn Net. Buildings were damaged at Erie International Airport--trees and power lines were knocked down, but no injuries were reported.

For the Amateur Radio Nrewsline, I’m David Black, KB4KCH.

Thats not the end of it. On April 24th, tornadoes struck Butler, Carter and Madison counties in south-eastern Missouri. More than 100 homes were damaged or destroyed. ARRL Missouri Section Emergency Coordinator Patrick Boyle, K0JPB, said ARES teams and individual amateurs remained on standby to assist if needed during the recovery effort. (ARRL Letter)

RESCUE RADIO: HAMS ASSIST IN NEW MEXICO FIRE COMMS

Amateur radio played a significant communications role in fighting the New Mexico wildfires. According to Jay Miller, WA5WHN, both Otero and Lincoln Counties were affected. Albuquerque was linked to Benson Ridge neat Alamogordo via the W5BI remote base with support from stations in Roswell and Ruidoso. This in support of the Red Cross and other agencies. Also, the 146.74 and 145.23 MHz repeaters plus 3.939 MHz Lower Sideband were in use.

The Red Cross had set up a shelter in the city of Cloudcroft. During the blaze several hams were forced to out of the area because they were in the path of the fire. They were located in a recreational vehicle in a near-by campground. (WA5WHN, ARNewsline™)

RESCUE RADIO: PHONES FAIL IN UK AND HAMS CALLED OUT

The United States is not the only place where radio amateurs have been busy. Ham radio operators who belong to the emergency service group Raynet were also called up after the telephone system failed in one area of the United Kingdom. Jeramy Boot, G4NJH, in Nottingham has more.

A major failure of the telephone system in south-west Hampshire and part of Wiltshire occurred during the evening of the 25th of April. At 2030, Bob, G4VWP, received a call from the Duty Emergency Planning Officer for Hampshire, requesting that Raynet be put on standby, ready for callout should the need arise. Later another call was received asking that, if required, Raynet should set up a VHF communications link between the police Command and Control Center at Netley and police HQ in Winchester.

Thirty-four members from four groups indicated that they were available for callout. The Forward Control Land Rover and 60-foot mobile tower were collected from storage and a portable mast, radio, power supply and associated equipment were made ready to take to the police headquarters.

The callout was led by Clive McCloud, G4EFB, Roger Davies, G8SXC, John Witts, G6BBW, Ian Duffy, G7GMN, and Dave Minett, G6DJA.

Jeramy Boot, G4NJH in Nottingham.

Eventually it was found that ham radio assistance would not be needed. Raynet members were dismissed at 23:10 UTC. (GB2RS)

ENFORCEMENT: FCC DOWNGRADES SIX TECHS

The FCC has notified six Technician class hams that they have been downgraded to no-code Technician status. This, as a result of an audit of a May 2000 ARRL V-E-C administered exam session in Statesboro Georgia. The FCC’s Riley Hollingsworth says that the problem was not the applicants but rather the test itself:

Hollingsworth: “We found that in that session the code exam had also been used in teaching the classes and in the practice exam. The same code exam -- that is. We called in eight for a code retest. Two appeared and passed but six did not show up.”
--

Hollingsworth said that the variances in the exam procedures were not the fault of any of the upgrade applicants and in no way reflect on them. However, they must first pass a valid Morse test before they can be granted the privileges of a Technician class license holder who has passed the code. (FCC, RAIN)

RADIO RULES: FCC CONSIDERS NEW SATELLITE INTERNET ACCESS SERVICE

The FCC says that it will consider rules for a new service capable of providing broadband Internet access via satellite. According to the CGC Communicator the FCC Commissioners will consider issuing a Report and Order and Further Notice of Proposed Rulemaking to implement sharing among multiple licensees in a new service capable of providing broadband access to the Internet using non-geostationary satellites operating in the KU band. (CGC Communicator)

RADIO LAW: CALIFORNIA LAWMAKER SEEKS CELL PHONE BAN

A California lawmaker believes that two cellular telephone related car accidents may bring attention to his efforts to ban drivers use of cellular telephones and other hand held communications devices. Assemblyman Joe Simitian says it is time to ban these apparatus in the name of public safety.

New York State already has made it illegal to use a cellular telephone while driving unless it is attached to a hands free device. Other states are considering similar legislation. In California the idea has been defeated every time it has been brought to a vote, but Simitian believes that the recent series of accidents will bring a vote in favor of his proposed across the board ban. DX

In D-X, word that Arliss Thompson, W7XU, and a few of his ham radio friends will be operating a 6 meter station from St. Paul Island in grid square FN97 from 29 June to 8 July. Thompson says that the group plant itself on 50.157

MHz and remain there for the duration of the DXpedition. Both CW and SSB operations will take place on that frequency although they may run split if they get a very good opening. The station will have a breakable beacon also on 50.157 MHz that will be running during slow times. QSL to W7XU. (W7XU)

Edisher Giorgadze, P5/4L4FN, has returned to North Korea. During a stop-over in Beijing, Edisher collected an Ameritron AL80A amplifier that was donated by Martti Laine, OH2BH, Bernie McClenny, W3UR and Al Baker, W5IZ. In his first contact using the increased power he contacted K4SSU who told him he was S-5 barefoot at 100 watts but an amazing 10 db over s 9 with the AL80A in line. He days that this basically guarantees more QSO's from the skylines of Pyongyang. Especially since he has extended his contract and will be in North Korea through June of 2003. Also, now that his operation is fully accredited by the ARRL a full-color QSLs has been released by his QSL manager, Bruce Paige, KK5DO. (KK5DO)

SUPPORT FUND REPORT WITH ANDY JAREMA N6TCQ

And finally this week, we hear once again to hear from our support fund administrator. Here's Andy Jarema, N6TCQ.

Yes, this is Andy Jarema, N6TCQ, Chief Financial Officer of the not-for-profit organization you know as the Amateur Radio Newsline. And once again, I am using the single word -- HELP! If you value this service, please help.

Let me start by saying that we really appreciate the individuals who give of themselves, but we don't hear from enough clubs. There are literally thousands, perhaps tens of thousands of traditional radio clubs and repeater clubs out there. These are the wonderful folks who re-transmit our broadcasts, bringing your nets increased value, and giving your members the latest in Amateur Radio news and information to enhance their hobby.

But Amateur Radio Newsline cannot continue without the funding needed to pay the monthly bills. And right now, we can't.

In the quarter century that it has existed, no one at the Amateur Radio Newsline has ever taken a salary. We all volunteer our time and talents. But we ARE faced with are monthly expenses for gathering and delivering the news to YOU! We are talking telephone, Internet access and the like. This hasn't changed.

We are also talking about the money we spend each year to help insure the future of Amateur Radio through the Young Ham of the Year award program. Yes, Vertex Standard, C-Q, Dave Bell Associates and Rosewood cover the expenses and gifts for the recipient. They do not cover the administration expenses. That's out part and it ran close to $1200 last year.

The bottom line is this. I am asking that you try to find it within your organization to continue this service. As we have said before, whether Amateur Radio Newsline continues to provide this service or if it disappears is totally your decision. We are here to serve you for as long as you want us. You response the next several weeks will provide the answer.

The address for the Amateur Radio Newsline, Post Office Box 660937, Arcadia California, 91066.

Looking forward to hearing from you really soon, I’m Andy Jarema, N6TCQ.

--

Also, a reminder that the nominating period for the 2002 amateur Radio Newsline Young Ham of the Year award closes May 30th. Less than three weeks from now. Nominees must be 18 or younger. Full rules and an application is on our website at www.arnewsline.org. (ARNewsline™)

Thanks for visiting my site, Polly. Not only once, but twice. You

"Megleomaniac?" Is that supposed to be megalomaniac? Do you have any

"Melange of pure crap?" Isn't that an oxymoron. I mean, if a melange

Don't you agree?

"Hobby hose," huh? I'll bet I can imagine what that must be. Do you

Looking for operator's manual for the "Excalibur SSB" model transciever.
it's 10m and 11m band.

It doesn't have a tuning knob, per se.
It has a channel selector, and the LED goes from channel 1 to channel 40.

Then there's a "band selector" knob, but it only says "A B C D E" and doesn't say what those bands are.

I assume one of A through E is the 11 meter CB band, but I don't know which one. I tried popular CB channels on all settings, but couldn't get anything. So I don't know if the rig is broke, or just no one was transmitting, or I had some other switch or dial set wrong.

My goal in using this is to get on 10 meter CW and 10 meter voice.

If it follows the usual, 'C' is CB. D is the usual CB freqs up 450 kHz, B is down 450, A and E are up and down 900. This is why Channel 19 (27.185) two up becomes 28.085 and why you hear truckers. As it happens, E40 (28.305) is the only phone channel on ten you have available.

There is likely another switch that gets the 5 old RC channels that may be the source of your problem.

Good luck if you are legal. If you are not, I suggest saving your pennies for the citation and not using it on the Interstate because a lot of the cameras are being set up to take nice pictures of transmitters in the ten-meter ham band. A few companies have received pix and we have proven the title of an old book, "Never Trust a Naked Bus Driver".

And when you get it on 10 CW, be sure to tell us how.

Hi, guys and gals.

Got a question/problem. I have a TS-50S, HUSTLER MO-2 and HUSTLER 15M radiator on top of the MO-2. Fantastic ground with Solid Copper bar attached firmly to the chassis. RG-8X at 15' long.

Problem -- Very Hight SWR at just over 2.5:1 with the fancy meter gizmo HRO has. Nothing will get it down, no adjustments longer or shorter.

Antenna is mounted at about 1.5-2" from right rear corner of the vehicle. Vehicle is a 2002 Saturn VUE (SUV). Base of antenna/mount is level with the bottom of the bumper. Radiator connects to the MO-2 at top of vehicle height.

Suggestions? The easier the better. If there's a way to fool it, I'll do it. If it means buying a 'match box' sorry, won't do it. It probably won't hurt the radio, but it ain't right.

Oh, the RG-8X is run along the inside of the vehicle, down the passenger side to the cargo compartment. This is also the same side as the antenna. Also, the RG-8X is run (cargo compartment) from the floor height up about 16" and back down to the bottom of the hatch area before extending from the vehicle just above the antenna mount by about 14".

Thanks, guys and gals. Have a pleasant day,

Move the base of the antenna out away from the vehicle body. I.E. Put a 6" or more piece of metal towards the back of the vehicle off the bumper.
Try that. If that don't work go a bit further.

Probably getting a reflection from the vehicle and getting a 'strange' reading from the SWR meter. Have fun.

What is a MO-2 BTW?

RADIO HABANA CUBA
DXERS UNLIMITED

WEEKEND EDITION
SATURDAY, MAY 4, 2002

By Arnie Coro CO2KK

Send your comments, questions and ideas to: arnie@radiohc.org

Hi, amigos radioaficionados all around the world! You are now listening to the weekend edition of your favorite radio hobby program, this is Dxers Unlimited, and I am Arnie Coro, radio amateur CO2KK, your host here in Havana ready to share with you all about seventeen minutes of all radio hobby related information....

Here is item one: Another upsurge in solar activity, and heliosismic data show that there are lots of sunspots on the farside of the Sun, so amigos, we may be seeing yet another solar rotation with a lot of activity!!!

Item two: Specialized amateur contests that do not disrupt your weekend with the family and friends are becoming more and more popular, for one very good reason: you enjoy the thrills of a real contest for a few hours, and then the rest of the weekend can be spent with your family. Not too long ago, a ham radio friend told me that the four- or six-hour-long contests do require a lot of skill, especially those that let you select the four- or six-hour operating period!!!

Item three: FM band Dxing is becoming more and more difficult all over the world due to the continuos increase of the number of low power local FM broadcast stations that are receiving licenses from the radio regulating authorities. Even a 10 watt local with a 6 dB gain antenna will make DX impossible on its own channel and at least on the first two adjacent channels, that depending on how close to your location the low power FM station is.

Nevertheless, dedicated FM broadcast band Dxers are learning some of the tricks that AM band DXers use, like waiting for off-the-air hours that station engineers need to do equipment maintenance... By the way, the FM broadcast band sporadic E DX season has just started, but so far, the openings are few and far apart from each other.

Item four: Homebrewing your radios is a lot of fun, and there is nothing like listening to DX with your homebuilt receiver, or like working DX with your amateur radio rig which you have just finished building. More about homebrew radios later here at the weekend edition of DXers Unlimited, amigos...

And, as always at the end of the show, be ready to copy Arnie Coro's Dxers Unlimited's exclusive and not copyrighted HF plus 6 meters propagation update and forecast. Margarita

Delgado is my sound engineer and producer at studio 7, this is Radio Havana Cuba....

Amigos, you are listening to the weekend edition of Dxers Unlimited, and here is our main feature for today: Arnie's advice about homebrewing your radio equipment. First things first... so don't attempt to start your homebrewing with a very sophisticated project, or without having the adequate tools at hand including, of course, your digital multi-meter!

You may perhaps want to start learning how to homebrew your radios by building one of the many kits now available, and as a matter of fact, that is an approach that I do recommend, because kits are an excellent way of learning about electronics.... Unfortunately some of the new generation kits are rather difficult to assemble due to the use of very small electronic components placed too tightly together, thus making your job of putting together the kit a lot harder. Here in Cuba, radio amateurs build a lot of their equipment, and something we all have learned is to homebrew our radios without any attempts to make them miniature sets!!!

Leaving enough space between the resistors, capacitors, integrated circuits, transistors, coils, crystals and other components has proven to be a very good idea, because it is a lot easier to put them together into something that will work, and also because when there is a breakdown, your homebrew set is a lot easier to repair...

Some Cuban amateurs have a second transceiver always ready for emergency communications, and that second radio is typically a version of the JAGUEY solid state double sideband transceiver, running anywhere from 3 to 10 watts, enough to communicate using a Near Vertical Incidence Skywave antenna system on the 80 and 40 meter bands... The homebrew JAGUEY is a quite straightforward design that allows you to upgrade the transceiver to a single side band set if you are able to obtain a single side band filter at a later date...

As a good friend likes to say, when you use a low power double sideband transceiver, no one realizes that you are also transmitting the unwanted sideband, as the other station's radio provides the filtering to pick up just the sideband in use on that specific band... In other words, if I am operating CO2KK with my JAGUEY on 40 meters, other stations using Single Side Band rigs will only pick up my lower sideband, as their transceivers will just chop away the upper side band when receiving....

Well, as you may realize, homebrewing a low cost double side band transceiver is not only a perfectly feasible project, but also one that will make your station ready to deal with communications emergencies, due to the fact that the JAGUEY needs just 12 volts from a battery to operate, and it draws very little current, even when transmitting. More about the JAGUEY and its most recent improvements in a few seconds, when Dxers Unlimited's weekend edition continues...

You are listening to Radio Havana Cuba, and amigos, if you happen to own a receiver capable of receiving single side band signals, try listening to our 11705 kiloHertz SSB broadcasts in English that start at 0100 UTC and last until 0500 UTC. Again our 11705 kiloHertz SSB is operating using upper sideband at reduced carrier, so that you can zero beat to the residual carrier for perfect reception... For those technically minded, we are running around 20 kiloWatts Peak Envelope Power, or PEP, with -12 dB carrier level, and the antenna is an array of dipoles beaming exactly North of Havana...

And now more about the JAGUEY double side band and CW single amateur band transceiver and its latest version... Among the most recent upgrades are the use of a triple tuned bandpass input filter and attenuator, which makes reception a lot better... Receiver incremental tuning, or RIT, was also added to the basic JAGUEY design, and the CW keying was improved by using a PNP transistor with wave shaping to key the rig...

Also, the NEW JAGUEY has an optional pair of audio filters, one for SSB and the other one for CW, so that the operator may switch from one to the other as required. The NEW JAGUEY also uses a simple but effective transmitter audio compressor that improves the punch of the signal quite a bit. And last but not least, some of the local enthusiasts have now built a very low-cost linear amplifier that uses recycled vacuum tubes to increase the output power of the JAGUEY to anywhere between 20 and 50 Watts...

One very interesting feature of the NEW JAGUEY is that once the newcomer to the amateur radio hobby finds a single sideband filter, the NEW JAGUEY can be readily adapted to be the "tail end" of a single sideband transceiver, so not even one component is lost from the original project. AH, and before I forget, the NEW JAGUEY is a very, very, flexible design because, for example, the receiver audio can be implemented with no less than three different circuits, a straightforward three transistor single ended audio amplifier, a more sophisticated push pull design using discrete components as the first one just mentioned, and the classic JAGUEY receiver audio module that uses a low noise audio transistor coupled to an integrated circuit audio amplifier, the TBA810 or A210 that happens to be plentiful here in Cuba...

Si amigos, yes my friends, oui mes amis... Homebrewing your radio gear is a lot of fun, and when propagation conditions are not good, then you just plug in the soldering iron, and start building your next project... By the way, I am working now on the NEW JAGUEY PROJECT circuit diagram and operating manual, and as soon as they are both ready, they will be posted at our Dxers Unlimited website for you to download....

One of the outstading features of this unique radio amateur transceiver is the fact that I have included a complete list of parts with sets of values that can be used without the circuit suffering from any degradation.... In other words, you may find right next to each component -- be it a resistor, capacitor, transistor or IC -- a number of options that you can use, making construction a lot easier... As many of you who already have built electronic equipment know very well, the lack of a specific value resistor, for example, can bring the whole project to a standstill, so is was why I spend a lot of time testing each NEW JAGUEY module to learn how the parts values could be changed around without degrading the performance of the transceiver!!!

The NEW JAGUEY receiver chain uses a switched three, four or five position RF input attenuator, followed by a two or three tuned circuit band pass filter, feeding a grounded base or grounded gate RF amplifier stage, that delivers its signal to a double balanced mixer acting as a product detector... audio from the product detector is fed to a low noise audio preamplifier that in turn feeds one of the two audio filters, which in turn feed the audio power amplifier module... The VFO is a very straightforward three transistor module, of which there are three different versions that you can choose from, depending on the parts that you have available. As a matter of fact, newcomers to the amateur radio hobby may build just the receiver part of the NEW JAGUEY and start listening to the 80 or 40 meter bands to pick up CW practice, and then after they obtain their license, they can build the transmitter module!

I'll tell you more about the NEW JAGUEY in our upcoming mid-week edition of Dxers Unlimited next Tuesday and Wednesday UTC days, when I will describe the transmitter chain of the NEW JAGUEY, the Cuban-designed, low-cost double sideband and CW transceiver....

And now, amigos, as always at the end of the show, here is Arnie Coro's Dxers Unlimited's HF plus 6 meters propagation update and forecast:

Solar activity is MOVING UP AGAIN, and both the number of sunspots and solar microwave flux are increasing... Heliosismic data show that we will have from a week to ten more days of higher activity, and don't be surprised if yet another big solar flare erupts during the next few days.

We all hope that the summer sporadic E season will finally take off, too. The best band for amateur radio Dxing during the local daylight hours should be 15 meters, while nightime DX on 20 meters is going to be plentiful for the rest of the summer...

Send your comments, questions and ideas to: arnie@radiohc.org

Hi, amigos radioaficionados around the world! Nice to have you all listening to radio hobby program coming to you from Havana. I am Arnie Coro, radio amateur CO2KK, and as always it is my pleasure to share with you about seventeen minutes of all radio hobby related information!

Item one: Solar update: After a very active last week, now the sun seems to be taking a rest, and the daily sunspot numbers and solar flux have taken a nose dive. At the same time we are enjoying a period of very quiet geomagnetic activity, quite a change from the past two weeks...

Item two: One of the most fascinating ways of enjoying our wonderful hobby is .... YES, one of the most wonderful way of playing with our radios is to organize a DX expedition... go to a remote location, install your radio equipment, have yourself a nice time and make a lot of ham radio operators around the world very happy too when you give them the opportunity to work a new country, or in the case of VHF-UHF and Microwaves a new Grid Square...

Today I have here with me at RHC studio 7 an amateur radio operator from the United States, his name is Frank Smith and the world knows him for organizing some very interesting amateur radio DX expeditions...

Frank will answer my questions about this very interesting topic so that many of you will perhaps start thinking about organizing your own Dx expedition soon!!! And as always, at the end of the show, I will provide you with the most up to date HF plus 6 meters propagation forecast... Margarita Delgado is my sound engineer and producer, I am Arnie Coro in Havana back with you all in a few seconds....

You are tuned to Radio Havana Cuba, and this is Dxers Unlimited's weekend edition... today with a special interview to Frank Smith, an American radio amateur visiting Cuba... Frank, let's start talking amigo...

4810. AMP reflects on incarceration

In my many years of existence I have seen a lot. A lot of drug abuse, a lot of crime, a lot of incarcerations and much drug treatment. From my experiences I have formed some opinions of my own about how drug addicts should be helped.

I definitely don't believe that locking people away from society is the answer. Something like over 80% of people incarcerated in county jails are there for drug-related charges. Only a few of us are there for Felony Stalking. These charges usually consist of minor offenses such as violations of probation, dirty urine, simple possession and small-scale larceny. Recidivism is very high for us addicts, meaning we go out and do the same kind of crimes most of which don't endanger anyone directly and end up back in jail. I am aware that drugs are illegal and I won't go into whether I think they should be or not, I just don't believe that someone who is in jail for giving a dirty urine should get the same sentence as someone who commits "real" crimes. I don't think rotting in jail for taking pictures should be called Stalking, either. Anybody can fake pictures and blame the innocent everyday folks.

Jails don't offer much to help addicts recover. There are some short term groups which basically educate people about addiction and suggest ways to stay away from drugs. They tell you to change just about every aspect of your life: avoid "people, places and things." I really don't think all of that matters as much as what's in your head. I know no matter where I am, no matter who I'm with, if I get the thought in my mind that I am going to go stalk somebody or get high, I'll do it. It's really hard to give up everything you know.

As far as programs like halfway houses go, I have mixed feelings. I've been to six different programs and a couple of them twice. All of them had their own philosophies and rules. Some were very strict and had a lot of structure: lots of groups all day and limited or no freedom to do what you want. I didn't last long in those programs. The longest I made it was about 2 weeks before I either got thrown out or left on my own. They may work for some people but I found the more rules there were the more reasons I had to rebel. I didn't like having to be forced to talk about my feelings, or past; so I made up a lot of lies and fabricated my past. I am not prepared for dealing with the "real world", where there isn't that type of structure, or people to make your decisions.

It's important to ask for help. But again, if you're not ready for a lot of freedom, which can be dangerous, then it's not good. Out of all the programs, I never completed one.

Then there are the programs that fall somewhere in between. I find those to be the best to help you not only stay away from drugs and alcohol, but to transition into society, too. I think that it's important to have a middle ground with structure and freedom.

I&#65533;m not sure if jails or programs can make any difference to people who aren&#65533;t ready to change. I guess it really depends on how desperate a person is and I am pretty desperate.
Tomorrow is another day. Now that I am free for a short while, until my trials at least, I think I may see about looking up some of my old enemies. Looking for a job can wait until I complete my mission. Why bother to get a job when I will only be going back to jail anyway? I'll look into those programs when I get sentenced because I will then have a lot of time on my hands.
Meanwhile I think it is time to take a trip to Mike's Package Store because I have been dry as a bone for 34 days. I need a case of cold ones. I promise that I won't hit my wife with a Pepsi bottle, either. Maybe later, but for now first things first.

they?
Where can I send this radio to get it 'tuned-up' and do all the necessary modifications to make it a better rig?
What are the best modifications this radio needs?
What about filters and accessories?

We cannot join it. In Region 1, the 40m band is only 7000 - 7100 kHz.

> Hi, amigos radioaficionados all around the world! You are now listening to the weekend edition of your favorite radio hobby program, this is Dxers Unlimited, and I am Arnie Coro, radio amateur CO2KK, your host here in Havana ready to share with you all about seventeen minutes of all radio hobby related information....
>
> Here is item one: Another upsurge in solar activity, and heliosismic data show that there are lots of sunspots on the farside of the Sun, so amigos, we may be seeing yet another solar rotation with a lot of activity!!!
>
> Item two: Specialized amateur contests that do not disrupt your weekend with the family and friends are becoming more and more popular, for one very good reason: you enjoy the thrills of a real contest for a few hours, and then the rest of the weekend can be spent with your family. Not too long ago, a ham radio friend told me that the four- or six-hour-long contests do require a lot of skill, especially those that let you select the four- or six-hour operating period!!!
>
> Item three: FM band Dxing is becoming more and more difficult all over the world due to the continuos increase of the number of low power local FM broadcast stations that are receiving licenses from the radio regulating authorities. Even a 10 watt local with a 6 dB gain antenna will make DX impossible on its own channel and at least on the first two adjacent channels, that depending on how close to your location the low power FM station is.
>
> Nevertheless, dedicated FM broadcast band Dxers are learning some of the tricks that AM band DXers use, like waiting for off-the-air hours that station engineers need to do equipment maintenance... By the way, the FM broadcast band sporadic E DX season has just started, but so far, the openings are few and far apart from each other.

> Item four: Homebrewing your radios is a lot of fun, and there is nothing like listening to DX with your homebuilt receiver, or like working DX with your amateur radio rig which you have just finished building. More about homebrew radios later here at the weekend edition of DXers Unlimited, amigos...
> And, as always at the end of the show, be ready to copy Arnie Coro's Dxers Unlimited's exclusive and not copyrighted HF plus 6 meters propagation update and forecast. Margarita Delgado is my sound engineer and producer at studio 7, this is Radio Havana Cuba....
>
> Amigos, you are listening to the weekend edition of Dxers Unlimited, and here is our main feature for today: Arnie's advice about homebrewing your radio equipment. First things first... so don't attempt to start your homebrewing with a very sophisticated project, or without having the adequate tools at hand including, of course, your digital multi-meter!
> You may perhaps want to start learning how to homebrew your radios by building one of the many kits now available, and as a matter of fact, that is an approach that I do recommend, because kits are an excellent way of learning about electronics.... Unfortunately some of the new generation kits are rather difficult to assemble due to the use of very small electronic components placed too tightly together, thus making your job of putting together the kit a lot harder. Here in Cuba, radio amateurs build a lot of their equipment, and something we all have learned is to homebrew our radios without any attempts to make them miniature sets!!!
> Leaving enough space between the resistors, capacitors, integrated circuits, transistors, coils, crystals and other components has proven to be a very good idea, because it is a lot easier to put them together into something that will work, and also because when there is a breakdown, your homebrew set is a lot easier to repair...
>
> Some Cuban amateurs have a second transceiver always ready for emergency communications, and that second radio is typically a version of the JAGUEY solid state double sideband transceiver, running anywhere from 3 to 10 watts, enough to communicate using a Near Vertical Incidence Skywave antenna system on the 80 and 40 meter bands... The homebrew JAGUEY is a quite straightforward design that allows you to upgrade the transceiver to a single side band set if you are able to obtain a single side band filter at a later date...
> As a good friend likes to say, when you use a low power double sideband transceiver, no one realizes that you are also transmitting the unwanted sideband, as the other station's radio provides the filtering to pick up just the sideband in use on that specific band... In other words, if I am operating CO2KK with my JAGUEY on 40 meters, other stations using Single

Side Band rigs will only pick up my lower sideband, as their transceivers will just chop away the upper side band when receiving....
>
> Well, as you may realize, homebrewing a low cost double side band transceiver is not only a perfectly feasible project, but also one that will make your station ready to deal with communications emergencies, due to the fact that the JAGUEY needs just 12 volts from a battery to operate, and it draws very little current, even when transmitting. More about the JAGUEY and its most recent improvements in a few seconds, when Dxers Unlimited's weekend edition continues...
> You are listening to Radio Havana Cuba, and amigos, if you happen to own a receiver capable of receiving single side band signals, try listening to our 11705 kiloHertz SSB broadcasts in English that start at 0100 UTC and last until 0500 UTC. Again our 11705 kiloHertz SSB is operating using upper sideband at reduced carrier, so that you can zero beat to the residual carrier for perfect reception... For those technically minded, we are running around 20 kiloWatts Peak Envelope Power, or PEP, with -12 dB carrier level, and the antenna is an array of dipoles beaming exactly North of Havana...
> And now more about the JAGUEY double side band and CW single amateur band transceiver and its latest version... Among the most recent upgrades are the use of a triple tuned bandpass input filter and attenuator, which makes reception a lot better... Receiver incremental tuning, or RIT, was also added to the basic JAGUEY design, and the CW keying was improved by using a PNP transistor with wave shaping to key the rig...
> Also, the NEW JAGUEY has an optional pair of audio filters, one for SSB and the other one for CW, so that the operator may switch from one to the other as required. The NEW JAGUEY also uses a simple but effective transmitter audio compressor that improves the punch of the signal quite a bit. And last but not least, some of the local enthusiasts have now built a very low-cost linear amplifier that uses recycled vacuum tubes to increase the output power of the JAGUEY to anywhere between 20 and 50 Watts...
> One very interesting feature of the NEW JAGUEY is that once the newcomer to the amateur radio hobby finds a single sideband filter, the NEW JAGUEY can be readily adapted to be the "tail end" of a single sideband transceiver, so not even one component is lost from the original project. AH, and before I forget, the NEW JAGUEY is a very, very, flexible design because, for example, the receiver audio can be implemented with no less than three different circuits, a straightforward three transistor single ended audio amplifier, a more sophisticated push pull design using discrete components as the first one just mentioned, and the classic JAGUEY receiver audio module that uses a low noise audio transistor coupled to an integrated circuit audio amplifier, the TBA810 or A210 that happens to be plentiful here in Cuba...
> Si amigos, yes my friends, oui mes amis... Homebrewing your radio gear is a lot of fun, and when propagation conditions are not good, then you just plug in the soldering iron, and start building your next project... By the way, I am working now on the NEW JAGUEY PROJECT circuit diagram and operating manual, and as soon as they are both ready, they will be posted at our Dxers Unlimited website for you to download....

> One of the outstading features of this unique radio amateur transceiver is the fact that I have included a complete list of parts with sets of values that can be used without the circuit suffering from any degradation.... In other words, you may find right next to each component -- be it a resistor, capacitor, transistor or IC -- a number of options that you can use, making construction a lot easier... As many of you who already have built electronic equipment know very well, the lack of a specific value resistor, for example, can bring the whole project to a standstill, so is was why I spend a lot of time testing each NEW JAGUEY module to learn how the parts values could be changed around without degrading the performance of the transceiver!!!
> The NEW JAGUEY receiver chain uses a switched three, four or five position RF input attenuator, followed by a two or three tuned circuit band pass filter, feeding a grounded base or grounded gate RF amplifier stage, that delivers its signal to a double balanced mixer acting as a product detector... audio from the product detector is fed to a low noise audio preamplifier that in turn feeds one of the two audio filters, which in turn feed the audio power amplifier module... The VFO is a very straightforward three transistor module, of which there are three different versions that you can choose from, depending on the parts that you have available. As a matter of fact, newcomers to the amateur radio hobby may build just the receiver part of the NEW JAGUEY and start listening to the 80 or 40 meter bands to pick up CW practice, and then after they obtain their license, they can build the transmitter module!
> I'll tell you more about the NEW JAGUEY in our upcoming mid-week edition of Dxers Unlimited next Tuesday and Wednesday UTC days, when I will describe the transmitter chain of the NEW JAGUEY, the Cuban-designed, low-cost double sideband and CW transceiver....
>
> And now, amigos, as always at the end of the show, here is Arnie Coro's Dxers Unlimited's HF plus 6 meters propagation update and forecast:
>
> Solar activity is MOVING UP AGAIN, and both the number of sunspots and solar microwave flux are increasing... Heliosismic data show that we will have from a week to ten more days of higher activity, and don't be surprised if yet another big solar flare erupts during the next few days.
> We all hope that the summer sporadic E season will finally take off, too. The best band for amateur radio Dxing during the local daylight hours should be 15 meters, while nightime DX on 20 meters is going to be plentiful for the rest of the summer...

Hello Walt,

We have been trying to get the Net Control Stations to listen down, but they frequently forget since most of our contacts are US.
I have been trying to get our Nets to consider DX Stations.
Thanks for your comment.

Hi, guys and gals.

Got a question/problem. I have a TS-50S, HUSTLER MO-2 and HUSTLER 15M radiator on top of the MO-2. Fantastic ground with Solid Copper bar attached firmly to the chassis. RG-8X at 15' long.

Problem -- Very Hight SWR at just over 2.5:1 with the fancy meter gizmo HRO has. Nothing will get it down, no adjustments longer or shorter.

Antenna is mounted at about 1.5-2" from right rear corner of the vehicle. Vehicle is a 2002 Saturn VUE (SUV). Base of antenna/mount is level with the bottom of the bumper. Radiator connects to the MO-2 at top of vehicle height.

Suggestions? The easier the better. If there's a way to fool it, I'll do it. If it means buying a 'match box' sorry, won't do it. It probably won't hurt the radio, but it ain't right.

Oh, the RG-8X is run along the inside of the vehicle, down the passenger side to the cargo compartment. This is also the same side as the antenna. Also, the RG-8X is run (cargo compartment) from the floor height up about 16" and back down to the bottom of the hatch area before extending from the vehicle just above the antenna mount by about 14".

Thanks, guys and gals. Have a pleasant day,

V/R

Well Paypal has done it again to me.They are taking money from my account for no reason as I don't use it since they screwed me out of $400.00.Now I got a thing on my account saying they deducted from my account for update charges.
I have emailed them several time with no results except for a automated response to email them if I have a problem.So I do and get the same response over and over again.
As of now I have closed my account and reopened a new one so they won't screw me for more.
WATCH OUT FOR PAYPAL !! They will get you for sure.

Well your not alone. Do a google search on 'paypal screwing me" .
I recently signed up for their "services" and have one successful transaction to date but its probably a matter of time before I get screwed also.
When you consider its a free service and,at least in concept,very convinient,you have to wonder hmmm these guys must make money somehow.And that somehow is apparently by screwing people over.
It seems to me they are a scandal waiting to happen,and until a class action lawsuit is files it'll probably get worse before it gets ant better.

The rig is basically a rebadged Ham International Jumbo. Sold under many different names. Look for the "Cybernet Export Manual" in your local CB shop. Radio you want is same as Jumbo and internally same as Concorde 2 and many many other 11m SSB sets.

The porno boys are still at it on this forum. talking about sex is their favorite pastime... real sickos they are. Lets have a ham radio forum , not a haven for perverts who want to talk so nasty.. Zitchey Zitchey, Hoodat, Rileygotcha, Plaintruth etc., etc.

Polly, when are you going to grow up?

You have been outed, so you refuse to answer and refute the charges.....instead you select another subject and ramble about porno.

What a half wit you are.........It's no wonder that you were dismissed from the B.A.R.F. and the Stumpjumpers disbanded.

Where are your friends?? heh.....heh....

Yep, they abonded you and Billy Jack (Clay)Moore........what a duo..LOL!!!!

Just because this "Polly" W4FQF you speak of, bitch slapped you boys around daily four years ago, while making a monkey out of all of you , (which was not hard to do), there is no reason to hold a grudge. How long will you keep crying about this. Four years ago was a long time. I know the slapping was severe, but life continues .. Youve made a legend out of this great amateur W4FQF.. Get over it.... grown men crying..

Just because this "Polly" W4FQF you speak of is a pervert, qrm'ed several frequencies, sodomized mules, stole from his employer, was chastised by the local amateur radio club, dismissed from the B.A.R.F., ignored by the stumpjumpers, received two letters from the F.C.C. and is an all around ne'er do well, is that a reason to chastise me?

Actually, it is ILLEGAL in many states (New York for one) to impose a charge for credit card use (on the buyer that is), so the payee can never be charged, at least in this State.

PayPal is a business,and if you allow them to verify your Bank Account, you are asking for trouble. The competition for Paypal is Billpoint, which is used mostly for eBay sales, but can be used very much like PayPal, there is however a very large difference.
Billpoint is partially owned, and is operated by Wells Fargo Bank, Legally it part of Wells Fargo Bank, which means it is subject to all the rules, regulations and supervision of a Bank. PayPal is NOT a bank, or are the subject to banking rules, regulations or supervision.

As for being free,it is free only if you don't use it much. if you do it not only isn't free, it is downright expensive. The recipient of the funds pays the bills, and they average about 4%.

It also violates California Law, and in general the merchant agreements for Visa and Mastercharge in the USA prohibit it.

True that. I had to sign up in a hurry to make good on an e-dept. Since then,I've read the TOS and,as one might expect,it has more loopholes than you can shake a stick at.
I still haven't seen a thing about those on the receiving end having to pay a fee - though if thats the case it must be somewhere in their FAQS .
I was under the impression that,besides scamming,they make their money by 1)Their 'premium'/business' accounts and 2)By drawing interest on the e-cash that people have floating on their paypal accounts.
But yes indeed people need to start reading before signing.

PayPal ISN'T free.. they take a percentage of all money that you recieve in your account. Sending money is free however. Since the money is transfered to another PayPal account, PayPal still gets their money. I've had over 30 dealings with them and NEVER had a problem.
It's the best way to send and receive money for auction items in my opinion.

Please explain a little further how they screwed you out of your money.
Was it really PayPal or was it the other person you were dealing with?
Or a combination of both? Did either one violate any laws?

PayPal only look out for their best interests. The so-called "verified ID" only so that they can have a legitimate way to freeze your account and take money away from you without recourse. Try C2IT or BidPay. Much better way to go. - NA1A

Dont know what to tell you - i have heard many complaints about them, yet i would assume there are hundreds of thousands - maybe millions of other people that never had a problem with them . I have never used them so i dont have to worry about it. How did they manage to screw you out of $400 actually - details would help - did they just decide one day to deduct $400 out of your bank account for apsolutely no reason at all - or did you buy something that you ended up getting ripped off from off of e-bay or something - and then wanted you money back ? If that was the case - i cant really put the blame on paypal. My guess is that most complaints about paypal are really just people getting ripped off at auctions - and expect paypal to re-imburse them as if its their fault. However if this is not the case and they for whatever reason felt they should deduct $400 out of your checking account for no reason at all , then i would be so pissed i would hire a lawyer - or at the very least file a complaint with the Better Business Bureau. Depending where you live - alot of local TV news stations also have "crack downs" on scams - tell them your story - maybe they can help. Either way if everyone that claims that they have got ripped off from them did their part to expose them - they would be out of business by now.

According to the BBB - it says
"Based on BBB files, this company responds to all complaints brought to its attention by the Bureau. PayPal meets regularly with the Bureau to evaluate complaints that have been received and to increase customer service satisfaction."

Hope this helps anyone that has gotten ripped off by them !

Well, I have been using paypal for about 4 months now, and I haven't had any problems with them yet. As a matter of fact, someone somehow got my account info and pulled money from my paypal($53) and put it in his paypal, and I complained to paypal via email and phone. Within a week the money was reinstated to my account. The only problem I see with Paypal is that they do charge a healthy amount to the recipient for their services, but hey, it's a business, and nobody goes into business to LOSE money, right? I have made about 60 transactions on eBay, and I have used Paypal for about 50 of those, and I have never had a problem with them, besides the money that was stolen from me, and they corrected that very quickly. Their customer support people on the phone were very curteous and friendly.

If you idiots read all the post,you can see that I reopened another account at my bank so that Paypal cannot take anymore from me.I have check on my statements from my bank showing where they have taken money from my account and I DON'T USE PAYPAL FOR OVER A YEAR BECAUSE OF THEM RIPPING ME OFF.They will not stop a payment or even try to help you if you make a mistake on sending your money to someone.If you put down a wrong email address,that party can end up with your payment that was ment for another.I sent out exactly $396.50 for an item that was bought on the NG.The monies was not received by the party it was ment for.I asked to cancel the tranaction and was told by Paypal there is nothing they can do about it and they are not involved in disputes.Well this went on and on and till this day I have not got my money back and noone can or wants to persue it.It goes even more into it.

But they don't charge more for using a card: they give a discount for using cash.

The effect is the same, but apparently it gets them off the hook from the legal standpoint.

Instead of arguing among each other sit back and read what you wrote.

Then, take this complaint to the FBI Internet Fraud Division. You can file your complaint on line.

I had a problem with paypal and ebay, my credit card company along with the FBI cleaned things up and my money was returned.

Name calling is childish.

Your legal recourse is to sue the person the money was actually sent to.
If PayPal followed your instructions, they are not responsible, IMO.

If you mailed an envelope of cash to someone and you mis-addressed the envelope, does that make the Postal Service responsible? Of course not.
They were just following your instructions. Does the Postal Service have an obligation to get your money back? Of course not. The mistake was yours and yours alone. The Postal Service did not rip you off and neither did PayPal.

It would be nice if PayPal could help you recover the money, but I don't see any obligation to.

True. I know if I had subscribed to the Sprint newsgroup before i signed up with them I probably never would have signed up in the first place - as it stands I haven't had a problem with the service in over 2 years. Same with comcast,though I'm coming to the conclusion that they truly are a messed up outfit.
In this case,after seeing his explanation on how exactly he was screwed,I think there can be little doubt that it was his fault and that paypal has their butts well covered.
The person he mistakenly sent the money to must have had a paypal account I'm guessing,or else the transaction would have failed.
And the 1 transaction I had with them I know paypal sends a receipt of sorts that says the money was sent to so and so. At that point your relying on the good will of the recipient to follow through on the deal,as you would be if you sent a money order or whatever..
If your reading this N1,did you try to straighten this out directly with the person involved ?

You idiots are not getting the point.Ok I lost the money,but what gives Paypal the right to keep going into your account and take what is not theirs.I have not dealt with them in over a year.
As for you idiots that only read part of what is said,I have closed my account with MY BANK AND REOPENED A NEW ONE SO THAT i HAVE A NEW CARD AND ACCOUNT NUMBER.The reason is not to let PAYPAL take anymore from me.
CHECK OUT YOUR STATEMENTS IF YOU KNOW HOW! Maybe they got you to.
And for those who are emailing me saying it has happened to them also,POST

Hello Dan,

The 3905 Century Club Nets are welcome to Everyone !
The logistics of listening to 40M DX Stations has been a real challenge, but we welcome everyone including DX.

We are currently having some discussions on the 3905 Century Club Chat Reflector to remedy the problem.

Thanks,
Keith

I have never had a problem, although problems may exist. My Paypal debit card says mastercard on it. Seems like mastercard's rules and regulations might apply??
Also, when I receive money into my Paypal account a transfer it out.
That way they can't take it. This works for me so far.

Actually PayPal is NOT downright expensive. I run several websites and use PayPal for my customers orders. I average about $30,000 per month in PayPal recipts. You are charged $.30 plus 2.2%. On a $20.00 purchase that would be a fee of $0.70 or only 3.5% which is pretty darn cheap. BILL POINT IS MORE EXPENSIVE! The same transaction on BillPoint would cost me $.85 in fees ($0.15 MORE) And there are many other services much like PayPal however they all change MORE! Example, CCNOW charges 9%!

If you want to "badmouth" PayPal that is your right, however when doing so at least get the varifiable facts straight! In an average month I save $225.00 in pure profit by using PayPal .vs. BillPoint.

I've been using PayPal for 2+ years, over $700,000 in total transactions and have yet to have a problem. However if you are a high volume PayPal user one smart piece of advice, clean out your PayPal account daily. I've heard of people having $1000's frozen which is totally stupid, if people doing that high volume would simply do a withdraw to their bank account one a day they wouldn't have that much money frozen.

Sorry but in the last two years I've had more problem with my "real" bank then with PayPal! That would be First Union.....

hi,

my friend accidentally programmed a Motorola GP300 VHF fullkeypad 5tone with a codeplug of a GP300 VHF PL :-(

When I turn on the GP300, only an orange led blinks near the volume knob.

However, when I connect the GP300 to the ribbox, I can read the radio and extract the codeplug, see the frequencies etc.

What can I do to bring the GP300 back to life? Do you have a codeplug for a Motorola GP300 VHF full keypad 5tone? Is that an adequate solution?

Any help is highly appreciated.

Please post in this newsgroup and send CC to scanweb@planet.nl

thanks and kind regards,

Someone loan Dimmy and wife a computer to refute all these wild claims posted in this group. The cops confiscated theirs. They were framed, like Roger Rabbit, (no pun intended) and they need a computer to print letters to pass out in the neighborhood of the framer. They want to FIX those framers so bad, but can't do it without a computer. They haven't been in jail, Dimmy took his lovely? wife to the Bahamas for 5 weeks. Nice of him, after hitting her in the face with a Pepsi bottle, doncha tink?

4888. Why do US Radio stations start with K or W ??

This is probably a simple question to anyone living in the US, but I'm from the UK and have always wondered why all US radio stations have 4 (or 3?) letter codes always beginning with either the letter K or the letter W?

Do the K and W have some meaning? Do the rest of the letters mean anything? Who chose K and W, and why?
Do other countries have similar systems?

For explanation, in the UK our radio stations have names not letters, such as Radio London, Capital Radio, Talk-Sport etc, so we don't have the same system over here.

All countries have Call sign prefixes. In the US we also have radio stations known as Talk-Radio, etc. However they also have call signs.

Actually, you probably DO have a 'call letter' designation. It may just be that they don't announce them and use them the way US stations do. There was a treaty years ago that set the 'prefix' areas up. MOST of your HAM calls will follow the same scheme, so if you go to any place that has a map of what prefixes are where, you can get an idea of how it's set up.

In the US, "W" was east of the Mississippi, and K was west, but that's not been followed strictly over the years.

Somewhere in this era, an informal system of prefixes evolved and Amateurs used A for Australia, B for Belgium, C for Canada, etc. This single-letter system worked until Amateur Radio spread around the world and there were too many countries for the system to accommodate. Thus, in 1912 or so, a new system took effect using two-letters with the first letter indicating the continent (E for Europe, A for Asia, N for North America, F for Africa, etc.) and the second letter indicating the country. Stations in the 48 United States used an NU call. These were called "Intermediate Prefixes".

With the advent of the Radio Act of 1912 7, the first Amateur Radio License is issued. The call letters assigned to the United States were NAA -NZZ, WAA - WZZ, and KDA to KZZ (KAA-KCZ was assigned to Germany and was not given to the United States until 1929). The somewhat puzzling Amateur calls like 1AW, 6OI, 2MN, etc. is explained by the fact that Amateur stations did not qualify for international call signs. At that time, the USA was divided into nine Radio Districts so Amateurs were granted calls consisting of their district number followed by letters, the first letter was from A through W, for example, 1AW, 1TS. Recognition was given to certain land stations, X as the first letter for Experimental licenses (e.g. 1XE), Y for School licenses (e.g. 9YY), and Z for Special Amateur licenses (e.g. 8ZZ). 1x3 calls (like 1AAA) was issued to Amateurs beginning in 1914. For a list of early X, Y, Z callsign issues -- see U.S. Special Land Stations: 1913-1921.4 It was not until October 1, 1928, that the W and K prefixes were assigned to Amateurs.

Having grown up in the UK but lived in many other countries (now in the USA), I have wondered about the apparent lack of callsigns for UK radio stations. Perhaps they do have callsigns officially although they never use them publicly. "Radio One" (for example -- is it still called that?) is broadcast on different frequencies in different parts of the UK, but each transmitter must have its own offical designation; perhaps callsigns are used behind the scenes to refer to those individual transmitters.

BTW: Australian radio stations use what I would call "abbreviated callsigns," e.g., 2SM, 3LO, 4KQ, 4MBS (the numeral indicating the State) -- where the preceding "VL" (I think they are all "VL") is simply assumed and not announced.

I have for sale a mint condition Ranger 2950DX, new in the box. This radio was used in my car for a couple of months but removed daily. It will transmitt from 26 to 32 Mhz all modes (SSB, CW, AM, FM). Comes with box, manual, U/D Mic, mobile mounting bracket and all hardware. I just bought a new Yaesu FT100D and don't need this radio. Looking for a good home for it! Want $220 plus $15 shipping. Will ship only to the US!
This little radio works great and will not be DOA. I made contacts all over the US on the 10m band also Japan.
Contact me at keith@tnmail.com or call 425-442-1011
I am good in the callbook site www.qrz.com.

May God Bless!

Tom: The current issue of SmartMoney magazine has an article that rips Paypal, in effect saying some of the things that have been reported here. I know that Paypal has a lot of satisfied customers but where there is smoke there is fire and I believe a sufficient amount of smoke is being raised concerning Paypal that a person should exercise great caution in dealing with them.

As you have been told the alphabet has been cut up among the countries of the world. A lot of it came from Morse: the US prefixes are A di-dah and N dah-dit and we added a dah to both for W and K. Great Britain got dah-dah M dah-dah-dit G dah-dah-di-dit Z and V because it was available. Germany used D, France F, Italy I, Japan J, China B and lesser countries got parts of letters, a lot having to do with what they called themselves.

The same system applies to aircraft BTW so it is fun to watch helicopters in an action scene supposedly taking place in ZingaZulaLand have Canadian prefixs.

When empires split and new countries emerged, some silly things were done by the lipdomats.
We gave up part of A to Pakistan but several other countries including India got a piece, Germany having lost the war got to donate to the Phillipines and South Korea and Japan similarly to Trans-Jordan and Mongolia. Israel (4X, 4Z) is still running on a UN allocation that in a mighty blast of cutesy-poo is now 4U.

So all the nations, aircraft, and radio stations have unique callsigns. It is only really where there are international implications that they really must be used and it is country-option beyond that. I would suggest that geography and the development of broadcast radio had a lot to do with it.

Geography because it was necessary to coordinate with most of Europe to avoid interference to begin with and because language pretty well determined where a signal came from. North America is one whole lot bigger and identifying a transmitter is of some interest to regulators and the public alike or at least was in the 20s and 30s when the die was cast.

The other is the general development of radio. It was common in Europe for governments to get involved, primarily at the behest of their national champion electronic manufacturer. That the Dutch went big time was more because of Phillips than any particular desire to get into broadcasting; similarly with DW and Siemens, the Beeb and Plessy, etc. Broadcasting in the US developed in fits and starts with stations owned by manufacturers (Westinghouse's KDKA was the first station licensed after radio was wrested from the Navy in the early 20s although it is far from the oldest US station), newspapers, life insurance companies, music stores, universities, and a host of oddities. Ronald Reagan's first employer was a station owned by a chiropractic college and several stations in my area date from a major pissing contest between two flower and vegetable seed companies which intermarriage finally brought to an end. And all of their callsigns were indicative of the owner.

WOW in Omaha was Woodmen of the World, a fraternal life insuror, KOWH was the Omaha World-Herald, and the Chicago Trib owned WGN - the World's Greatest Newspaper. As has been noted, the K/W line moved from the Mississippi to the Rockies and back and some old K calls were left in the East. It got started and then, like Topsy, just growed.

When you live in a country 3,000 miles wide DX on medium wave is a normal and to some a thrilling state of affairs especially when is something exotic like a CK or CL Canadian or Mexican XE comes thru.

Sorry to tell you more than you really wanted to know. Short answer: tradition and people liked it that way.

That assumes PayPal will give you a merchant account. PayPal has consistently declined to give me one, although I have one from Billpoint, and as a result of Billpoint is a lot less expensive for me.

It also take PayPal at least 2 days longer to get the funds in your account. I pay Billpoint 1.75% plus 35cents (on transactions below $15, I pay 35 cents period. For that, the funds are in my account at the bank the following business day.

Have you ever been able to speak to a real human being at PayPal? I haven't. Have you ever read how many if, ands and buts there are in their chargeback protection scheme?

Have you ever tried to get them involved in a suspected fraud? By the time they read the email, the perp's had the merchandise for two weeks! Billpoint doesn't make it easy to call the, but if you'd like Janet Crane's phone number (she runs Billpoint), I can give it to you.
It wasn't easy to find, but it is publicly available. Try that with PayPal.

Thats funny, because of my volume PayPal forced me to go from a reg.
account to a merchant account about 2 years ago.

Everytime I dial their toll free phone number. One time I did have to wait 15 minutes on hold however the other times I've called I was talking with a human in just a matter of minutes.

Maybe, Roger...maybe if Dimmy and his wife wouldn't have been so fixated on a couple of other Hams as you say, "24/7" they wouldn't have spent the last 30 plus days in jail. Maybe, Roger...maybe if they had not been so fixated and had not stalked these people "24/7" as they did, and had minded their own tawdry business, then neither of them would be looking forward to two trials EACH that will result in hefty fines and jail time. Maybe instead of wasting their time making late night phone calls or blowing their money on postage to send anonymous letters, send anonymous subscriptions, driving across town to take photos of the persons they stalked, well, maybe, just maybe they could have made something of themselves. Now they are in the arears for back rent, utility bills, have had to put up over $3,500 cash for bail for the two of them and who knows how much more they owe? Was it worth it? (bet they'll leave their creditors high and dry, too.)
It seems that if anybody needs to examine their lives, it is the Dimmys. Of course, soon they will both have ample time to examine their lives "24/7". For all the good it will do.

This is the 6 M AM transceiver spotlighted by the IA QRP club a year or so ago. This is a rig designed by Rick Littlefield originally called the Nor'easter and published in Communications Quarterly. I have the board, the pots, a used CB modulation transformer, the modulator chip, the crystal filter (the good one), and the coil form. I am also including all documentation, addendums (some items in color), and a copy of the original article. I'll sell it for $20 shipped priority mail (lower 48). This is a really neat project. I've just never had the gumption to get it finished.

Jim,

The letters K and W originated early in the 20th century as part of a worldwide index of ship radio stations. K stood for ships on the East coast, W for ships in the Pacific. For some reason, when the letters were extended to land-based stations, they were reversed, with the Mississippi River eventually adopted as the dividing line. Ever since 1923, stations west of the river start with a K, those east of it start with a W.

4909. Antenna MADE for AO-40!!!

I got tired of straining to hear signals from AO-40 with my barbecue grill dish and developed a circular polarized antenna that WORKS! I talked a manufacturer into producing a small amount of specialized waterproof helical feeds and I am now making this antenna available to the amateur radio community. Available in two sizes, 2 foot and 3 foot with TRUE circular gain. Easily connected to a crossboom, it is an offset parabolic and there is NO aperture blockage of the incoming signal. Plus, you can connect your downconverter or preamp directly to the feed with no signal loss. I have current stock and have mastered my shipping methods. Please visit my web site and look my antenna over. These antennas may be available only for a limited time due to the difficulty in ordering small quantities, international shipping, and the limited time I have to spend on this project. Any comments are welcomed.

Hmmm. I see name calling, non-amateur radio talk, and immature obsession about someone else's life. So how does that jibe with what you wrote last week? See below:

Hello. I am interested in APRS. I've been to aprs.org and other sites, but still can't find many details about it. So what would I need to put a setup in my car? A GPS and radio? A computer, too? I can't find this information (frustrating...).

Anyway, I was interested in this 'MIM Module' I've read about, I think this could help me somehow, but of course the MIM Module link on aprs.org is broken.

So can anyone offer any pointers? I am interested in a low budget setup.

Also what would I need on the receiving side to track the system's location?

How can/does APRS interface with the internet? I have a direct internet connection at home.

Thanks for any help.

Because those are the letters assigned to the U.S. by international agreement.
As for K being in the west and W in the east, that's what the FCC decided.

Yes. For commercial broadcasts, you will find "C" for Canada (for example).

I bet that you do. There may be rules differences that indicate that they don't have to identify by callsign (in a publically readable signal), but they still have them. Satellites have transmitter ID's in morse code (25+ wpm) on subcarriers.

Actually, that's not quite true. A couple of years ago when I had some time to kill, I had him dancing like a puppet. He'd make some ignorant post, I'd show him what a stupid post it was, then give him a little tweak that he couldn't resist, and voila! 20 minutes later he was in with another post crawfishing and backpedalling like there was no tomorrow. He never did get over his goat being gotten. It's there on Google for all to see.

What's really funny is the callsign in question has never been on HF. I've been in a condo since I got it. That was a really funny, but pathetic, try. But that's what one would expect from him; pathetic and funny.

Note that Roger skirted the "Dimmy is Free" post. No comment, eh Roger? That has to be a first for you! This is because my post hit the nail on the head. If the duo had not stalked 24/7, they'd not be looking at Felony charges and upcoming trials. Of course old Roger was right in there with them until they got caught, and he is leery of making any statement that would associate him with this felonious duo. Roger has also deleted the photos these stalkers sent him, save for a couple or three he kept on a floppy disk which he keeps hidden.
Rogie...story is that the Cobb Criminals could use a little extra spending cash to pay some long overdue bills. Why don't you send them a stipend? Cash only. Better yet, why not get them a gift certificate from Mike's Package Store? I KNOW they'd appreciate that! After all, Dimmy has nothing to do all day and a gift cert. for a case of Old Milwaukee would be highly welcomed. It may be his last hurrah for a long time.

Here's another site to check http://www.nwaprs.org

You do not need a computer in the car, all you need is a GPS, TNC or Tiny Trak (from http://www.byonics.com/) and radio. OR one of the new Kenwood rigs. If your on packet, you already have everything you need for APRS in the shack. You just need the software. There are links to all the software sites at the NWAPRS site. If your on a budget, take a look at UI-View. It's the only freeware aprs software out there. If you don't have a tnc, you can use your sound card.

Another site you might want to check is http://web.usna.navy.mil/~bruninga/aprs.html
Good Luck!

CERTIFIED MAIL-RETURN RECEIPT REQUESTED

Mr. George A. Ashley
1138 Collierville Arlington Road

Collierville, TN 38017

Subject: Warning Notice: Amateur Radio Station W4FQF

Dear Mr. Ashely:

Information before the Commission indicates that you have engaged in deliberate interference on the 75 Meter Amateur Band (3.901 MHz) at various times since October 2000. Some of the interference included tape recordings. We note that on January 7, 1999 you were warned about such activities on the 20- Meter Amateur Band.

This constitutes a second warning that any further incidents of such operation will result in enforcement action being taken against you, including license revocation, monetary forfeiture, or both.

Section 308(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, 18 U.S.C. Section 308(b), gives the Commission the authority to obtain information from licensees about the operation of their station. Pursuant to Section 308(b), you are requested to respond to this letter within 20 days of the above date. You are also requested to furnish the following information.
1. Describe the radio transmitting equipment, including antennas, you have at the 1138 Collierville Arlington Road Address. State the manufacturer, model and serial number of each item. If any items were constructed or modified by you, describe the item in detail.
2. Describe any radio transmitting equipment, including antennas, you have at any other address in Tennessee. State the manufacturer, model and serial number of each item. If any items were constructed or modified by you, describe the item in detail.

Please be advised that Congress has made punishable a willfully false response to a letter of this type. See 18 U.S.C. Section 1001.

Sincerely,

W. Riley Hollingsworth

You may as well give it up, Polly. You couldn't win before, you can't win now. You are in so far over your head you're embarrassing yourself.

But I'm done leading you around by the nose. I'm sure you'll keep trying. You can't help yourself. You'll be along with another lame within an hour.

Quick question: what's the mess with 40 meters? I've been hamming for about 5 years and I still can't get a real clear picture. Well, I've never bothered to investigate really but... :)

What's the allowed range in the US? In Europe? Why the differences?

I, Stagger Milhaus Romain Fentworth Lee, do hereby declare victory and all of the spoils appertaining thereto in the great "gay and loging it" final post contest.

WHEREAS, groups.google.com is the one unimpeachable archiver of all Usenet posts, and

WHEREAS, the original 214 post "gay and loging it" thread as recorded by google has Message-ID: <3CDD6618.50A30CED@houston-hunks.com> officially recorded as the final post in the thread,

I DO HEREBY CLAIM VICTORY, and declare the contest forever closed. Posts entered subsequent to the date and time of this declaration will be regarded as clear attempts at cheating and will therefore be null and void.

IN CELEBRATION OF this momentous event, the City of Glen Dale, WV has passed a resolution declaring Saturday June 1, 2002 to be Stagger Lee Day. In observance thereof, Roger Wiseman and his Greyhound Men's Room Band will give a free concert at the bus station. His Holiness Raoul Xemblinosky will be the master of ceremonies.

SO DECLARED this seventeenth day of May in the year two thousand and two.

Allan Weiner just reported on his Program that "Brother" RG Stair was supposedly arrested yesterday by South Carolina authorities, on suspicion of sexual misconduct.

The basis for this seems to be allegations made by several former associates from his Walterboro SC religious commune, and have been posted on the URL www.thenetteam.com and spoken about on the Wed night "Table of Truth Program" on 7.415 shortwave.
Anyone have any more info on this breaking news?

The Overcommer Broadcast has allegedly been suspended from WBCQ at this time, any word on WWCR?

Finally, can someone please tell me just why is it these Southern bumpkin preachers seem to always get caught with their hands either in the cash till, or in some bimbo's panties, or both at once..???

(Guess ole Bro Stair should have stuck with crankin the handle on those cheap chinese-made Luke crank-up shortwave Baygen knockoff radios instead of allegedly "something else".....??! (grin)

I have a Garmin basis eTrex GPS unit connected to a KPC3+ packet TNC being used in "tracker" mode and that is now connected to an FT-1500 2 meter rig set on 144.390. All you have to do is configure the TNC as per some instructions on the web and your on!

http://map.findu.com/wb8nut-12 will show you my location. At the house I am running UI-View and it operates as a digi on the east side of Cincinnati and gates all local traffic to the internet.

Let me know what you want to do and I will try to help.

Rick Wiles (American Freedom News - 9:00 pm EDT 5.070 MHz & 9:00 AM EDT 12.160 MHz) told about 9:20 EDT (? 1:20 UT Saturday) that Stair was DENIED BAIL! I guess he'll spend several days in the slammer. Charged with two counts of rape and misc. financial charges. Rick is supposed to have a guest on his program Monday night @ 9:00 ET (01:00 UT Tue.) discussing this. I think it is the lady who did the investigative reporting on the situation from the Walterboro paper. Might be interesting.

I think he might still be on WWCR as he had one transmitter all to himself. Don't know if he's on the other WWCR transmitters that he has time on, but my guess is if he pays his bill he stays. ;-(You can ask wwcr at askwwcr@wwcr.com and it may be addressed on one of their broadcasts called ASK WWCR. If you want a reply write wwcr@wwcr.com or adam@wwcr.com.

Several of his former followers have predicted he'll come down THIS YEAR!

At long last Roger's secret is out in the open. While we cannot disclose it, Roger is poised to make a highly personal "confession" concerning his sexual perferances.
Roger admits that it may take " a bit of my private time" to come to grips with his sexuality, and even more time for him to admit to it, but Roger assures us that he will be forthcoming in due time.
Just what is Roger's sexual preference? Nobody seems to know for sure.
You be the judge of that. You decide, you make the call.
But be careful!! Do not accuse Roger of being Homosexual. Do not accuse him of Pedophelia! Accusatory statements of this nature could be illegal.
Of course if one were to accuse Roger of being a Twink the burden of proof would be on Roger to disprove it in a court of law. He would have to initiate a lawsuit to disclaim the allegations.
Perhaps Roger and Dimmy could go "halves" on the attorney fees...eh?
Speaking of Dimmy, how goes the Felony Stalking charges? It must be difficult to have a one to five year prison sentence hanging over your head.
Of course it is well deserved.
Bye bye, James Vincent O'Brien! See you when you get out in a couple of years. Nobody is likely to miss you.

I saw them in the Universal Radio online catalog:

http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/parts/power.html

"DC Plug Kenwood/Icom" Order #1451 $4.95.

The path header that I posted was EMAILED to Altopia, you lying low life. That means that the coward who sent the anonymous email to Altopia obtained the post he included from the Altopia servers.

Scramble-brained idiot. It is you who, even after years of being on Usenet, still can't read headers.

The coward (you) also post-edited the portion containing the AB8MQ post so that the claim that Altopia would soon cough up their user's identities was conveniently omitted. I guess you didn't want Altopia to see that lie, although you forgot to post-edit the Path header, and that tripped you up.

That's your style, window licker. I don't need to post any additional proof to know that you are a sniveling net cop who hides behind anonymous remailers to attempt his dirty work.

O'Brien has taught you well, oh ye of the weak mind. I laugh at your pathetic flailings in the sure and certain knowledge that you too will have your ways catch up with you.

I beleive the Democrats have got egg on there face now that it was revealed that the Clinton (Democratic) administration commissioned a study which resulted in findings that terrorist could hijack planes to "crash land" into the White House and the Pentagon.

Hope this teaches the Democrats not to be so politically exploitive of the 9/11 attacks. They really turned me off by their over-reaching in trying to blame of Bush for failure to prevent the 9/11 attacks based merely on an intel briefing that stated terrorist could hijack aircraft - w/o any mention of using the aircraft as weapons.

Maybe it's time we put that SX-28 back in the Presidential credenza, as a general reminder that the Domestic Agenda may be a good thing, but there's a World beyond the border that's not happy.

I could stand to see a Wellbrook in the Rose Garden on my tax.

Wiseman seems to think that, the greater volume of trash he posts, the more veracity it must have.

What he really believes is that the reader is too stupid to see through his replies, and that enough FUD will completely snow you, Dear Reader.

I had chopped the post off for brevity, but here's the complete email which Altopia forwarded to me. Not everything is there, of course, because the "include original message in reply" button was hit. But enough is there in the emailed Stagger Lee post to see that the Path header clearly shows that the post was picked up from Altopia. That is, the anonymous emailer was an Altopia customer.

Furthermore, the editing of the quoted AB8MQ post also shows that the emailer didn't want Altopia to see the original comments in the post, because they made a false claim. I've included the original AB8MQ post for side by side comparison, and I've referenced the message ID so that any interested party can look up the post on Google.

First of all, here's the forwarded anonymous email:

BWAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA!
====(end original post)====

Can you see the difference? The "by Altopia real soon ..." part of the AB8MQ quote was neatly clipped out before it was emailed to Altopia. The message immediately above doesn't have a Path header because it was archived locally. However, it is accurate, as can be seen by looking up message-id <abtim7ond3@dosa.alt.net> on groups.google.com.

So there you have it: An emailed Usenet post whose Path header clearly shows that it came from Altopia's servers, and an email which contains a post-edited AB8MQ quote. The post editing would clearly serve to protect Wiseman from having to explain his claims to Chris Caputo.

That's way more than I intended to say, but it should be sufficient for any rational human being.

Wiseman is not a rational human being, so I don't expect him to do anything other than continue to blow smoke.

There will be no further replies to Wiseman from me IN THIS THREAD (got it clearly, Wiseman?), because nothing more needs to be said.

What warnings? He had a report that terrorist could hijack aircraft - period. No dates or anything. We've known that terrorists hijack planes for decades.

During the Clinton administration, there was the finding of a study - (and not intel) - that the terrorist could use the planes as weapons to "crash land" into the Pentagon or the White House.

Why was nothing done?

This is all a bit like the warnings at the time of the airline hijacks in the 60's to Cuba. There was an awareness that hijackings could happen at any time, but short of grounding all planes, there was no way to do much of anything about the situation. I was on a flight that was hijacked to Cuba just a week before a plane of the same airline on the same route did the same thing... despite what for the time was high security.

The CIA gets dozens of "terrorist alerts" a day. Most have very limited credibility. When I lived in South America the local US Embassy got at least a threat a week of armed attack, etc., and could do nothing except keep the Marine Guards awake and alert at all times.

There is where you are wrong. These guys get their hands in the cash drawer
AND in the ladies' panties -- some of them at the same time. After all, Pat Robertson's first child was born 5 months after he and his wife were married -- after Robertson avoided combat in Korea thanks to his father the senator.

Roger likes to make comments about "Orass" in his posts. Roger must be referring to Oris, a Ham op from Georgia that Dimmy O'Brien has taunted and harassed for years. W4AMP often made reference to Oris' two daughters and it seems that Roger is taking up the quest during Dimmy's involuntary absence. Of course Roger is using information that W4AMP supplied him. This further cements the collusion between AMP and Roger. It is sickening that O'Brien would attack these two innocent girls for no reason but to make Oris angry, and it is doubly sickening that Roger would follow suit. This speaks volumes of Roger's childish mindset.

Rogie...for your information Oris does not post to the news groups and has not done so for over a year. You seem to go merrily about your business of second-guessing who is posting what while never having so much as a clue as to who is who. Maybe you should Net Cop me, too, sniveling, slinking coward that you are. Chris would love to hear from you again.

Mr. O'Brien was extremely jealous of Oris and probably still is. Oris has a his shortcomings, but being a criminal was never one of them. Oris has a beautiful wife and kids and he is gainfully employed. Dimmy has none of the aforementioned qualities. Never will.

The next time you submit your crapola, Roger, consider your source. Convicted felons are usually not known for their veracity. You, Roger, are known by the company you keep. You should look into changing your acquaintances, bud. If you roll around with the pigs long enough, pretty soon you will end up smelling like one yourself. But ,alas, it is too late for you.

Stagger Lee is making Roger dance, backpedal, dance, backpedal, and dance....and the little marionette Wiseman has not figured it out. Stagger controls the strings and Roger dances to Stagger's tune.
Stagger Lee posts, and Roger posts six, seven or eight rebuttals within

Don't you have something to do, Roger? You know, something like in real

But tell me something, I don't believe for a second that Roger is actually

I would like to apply for a vanity call. Checking with the directions found on the ARRL (American Relay Relay League) web page, I head over to the FCC (Federal Communications System) webpage and find the ULS (Universal Licensing System), I check to see if my call has been assigned a FRN (FCC Registration Number) ... none found. Back to the ULS and over to CORES (COmmision REgistration System) I apply for a new FRN and password, which I get. Entering into the ULS again, and clicking along, I chose "modification" of my license since it will not expire until 2006. But, alas, my call does not appear so that it can be picked, nor am I able to type in my call, the box is only wide enough for one letter, and it doesn't accept anything anyway.

What did I do wrong, or what do I do next?

July 11, 2000

Mr. Roger L. Wiseman

610 Glen Haven Avenue

Glendale, WV 26038-1302

SUBJECT: Amateur Radio license KC8JBO

Dear Mr. Wiseman:

Pursuant to Section 97.519(d)(2) of the Commission's Rules, 47 C.F.R.
Section 97.519(d)(2), the Commission has the authority to re-administer any examination element previously administered by Volunteer Examiners (VE's).
The Commission may either administer the examination itself, or under the supervision of a Volunteer Examiner Coordinator (VEC) or VE designated by the Commission.

Accordingly, we are requiring you to re-take the General Class Amateur Examination, (Elements 2, 3(A) and 3(B)) under the supervision of an American Radio Relay League Volunteer Examiner Coordinator. This examination must be completed on or before September 11, 2000. The required code speed that you must demonstrate is 5 words per minute.

Please be prepared to verify your current address and to present a photo identification. Pursuant to Commission rules, your license will be cancelled if you do not appear for re-examination. You will be granted an Amateur Radio license consistent with the elements you pass upon re-examination.

Sincerely,

W. Riley Hollingsworth

Special Counsel, Amateur Radio

Enforcement Bureau

Where does it say I'm being retested for interference? Now tell us why Riley told you he wouldn't renew your license Ed-dildo?

How, and please be specific, can somebody "sexually harass" on usenet.
Usenet, has no sex. A man can post with a woman's name, a woman can post pretending she is a man, anybody can be anything they want. In the group I frequent, (alt.2600) we have a crustacean that regularly posts, we have a millipede, as far as I can see there has also been a "Dragon Lady" (whatever that is), and a "moist creme filled cake" has been seen recently.
Lets see KC8JBO sexually harass one of those characters if he or she can
share a joke, to learn about the life experiences of others or to share your own. But it certainly is NOT REAL. There is nothing legally binding about anything anybody says. It's just for fun, you take it far too seriously.

It appears here that you are saying that if one allows people to exercise freedom of speech, one must be stopped. Perhaps a move to Afghanistan will help change your mind and also teach you what REAL sexual harassment is.

I was unable to attend this year due to military duties.
What are the reports from Dayton?

Other than rain, what was the big news?

Any good deals like we had last year?
New equipment? (the VX-7R was selling for about $379).

CERTIFIED MAIL - RETURN RECEIPT REQUESTED

Roger L. Wiseman

[address]

Subject: Warning Notice: Amateur Radio License: KC8JBO

Dear Mr. Wiseman:

The Commission has monitoring evidence that you have been deliberately and maliciously interfering with the radio operations of other licensed Amateurs on the 14 MHz Amateur band. This interference has occurred at various times in the last several months and includes broadcasting music and other unidentified transmissions.

The Commission generally relies upon the Amateur Radio Service to be self-policing. Operation of the type described above is contrary to the basis and purpose of Amateur Radio and degrades the service for legitimate users. This serves as a Warning Notice that such operation will not be tolerated. Additional incidents of operation of the type described above will result in a monetary fine being levied against you and in revocation proceedings before an Administrative Law Judge.

You are requested to contact me at 717-338-2502 to discuss this matter.

Sincerely,

W. Riley Hollingsworth
Special Counsel, Amateur Radio Service
Enforcement Bureau

Dimmy must have hit bottom. I replied to his ad in QTH.com, selling a Palomar CB amp, and asked if he needed bail or bond money. He hasn't answered but apparently has a computer again. I'd help the jailbird if he asked. I sure wouldn't want him to get in trouble with Riley for selling CB amplifiers.

Dayton was, as usual, outstanding.

The Hamvention was less well attended than those that used to occur at the end of April, but that is a _good_ thing - for us. I'm sure its not making as much money for DARA as those former Hamventions, but the lower attendance meant you could get close to things and see stuff. You could actually get to touch the radios in the big-3 manufacturer's booths without elbowing people or standing in a line for 15 minutes.

I saw maybe 60 % of the flea market by about noon on Friday. Then I came inside and stayed, since I was looking for stuff in there, and then it started raining so going outside would not have been productive - the vendors generally shut down during the rain except those with tents. It was a really cold rain, too, so unless you brought real good raingear and an array of cold weather clothing, you wouldn't have been comfortable.

On-site tickets were $22. Not too bad for 3 days, but much grumbling was heard about 3 things:

1) The programs don't come with the ticket any more - that essentially raises the price of the Hamvention to $27 unless you downloaded all the interesting forum info and vendor map info from the web site (not sure if the vendor map was available on the web).

2) The buses from the mall were $2 instead of free. Lotsa grumbling.

3) The private-owned parking across from the Hamvention went from $5 to $8 a day this year.

Other downers: The big tent at the corner of the flea market was replaced with several smaller tents. These smaller tents didn't have all that the big tent used to - Radio Shack, for instance.

A possible contributing reason for the lower participation - there was hype of extrordinary security measures - "no knives", "bomb sniffing dogs", etc. (I don't go places like that myself - too much hassle, as I routinely carry a pocket knife - and I think such measures are nonsense since many other things can be made into effective weapons) - but then remembered that stuff like that is _sold_ there, so such measures would be impossible - like "no guns" at a gun show... is a 1 1/4" combination wrench a weapon? Sure it is - and of course there was no such extensive security, although there were officers with dogs - they just were never seen sniffing anything. Probably ordinary K-9 units.

The common reason for less attendence that was heard was "ebay".

My take on that is that you aren't going to get a new radio that goes for $899 at the Milwaukee AES for $699 from AES on ebay like you can at the Hamvention. That was an example heard via "on the road" chatter as I was driving back to Virginia.

Conclusion: Dayton is still "The Big One" and is a more user-friendly Hamvention than ones of old that drew 37,000 people. Those were impossibly crowded.

If you're talking about E. Hernandez the ham radio op, you better check your info sources partner! You are very misinformed. Ed is down in Dallas and runs a successful computer and data consulting firm that has a big contract with the University of Texas. He also guest lectures at UT and was recently recognized by the TexMex community for outstanding contributions to the Hispanic community. Also has received awards from the Dallas Chamber of Commerce.

Public information on a public state run website, and viewable by anyone.
Why is this so difficult for you to understand, Wiseman? It sucks to be a convicted felon, but that's Geno's problem, not mine. The phone number was for his parole officer, not someone I was flaming.

The fact remains that you post phone numbers, addresses, and employer information of people that you're directly involved with in flame wars, in a feeble attempt to shut them up.

Now, how about posting a message ID for the following lie, you

If you look up your call sign in ULS, you will probably find that your call has been assigned a different FRN than the one you are using. The FCC had assigned you a FRN before you did your own, but you were not aware of it (at least, that is what happened to me). The problem is, they do not send you the password.

You will have to call the FCC and explain this to them; then they will correct it.

Good Luck.

Interesting.

The guy who had the goat-cam last year traded his goat in for a rooster. Since our tailgate was adjacent to his, we got to make fun of it too.

I purchased one of the first of the new Kanga KK7B R2Pro kits. I'm well aware that although a couple of prototypes of this kit have been successfully built, I'm mostly a guinea pig... I plan to get started on it this week and I'll let y'all know what I think of it.

Fun stuff that lots of folks pointed at: a 25 watt Copper Vapor Laser. No I'd never heard of one before either. I don't have the slightest idea what it's good for except that it was very large and very heavy (large and heavy enough that even a full sized pickup couldn't get it home without a good sized trailer).

For those of you who want to own the ultimate surveillance receiver: AOR was showing their AOR-ONE. It covers 10 kHz to 3.3 GHz multi-mode in 1 Hz steps. They're asking for something like $4k for this beauty. No, it's not blocked for cellular. No, it's not for sale in the USA (wince), without authorization.

I got a kick out of Yaesu's display of the VX-5R --underwater and working! Personally, I'd have added a few goldfish to the tank just for fun...

Lots more to report. Those are just a few hints of the insanity.

Greetings people of the Earth.

I am Profit Nutsak, an ambassador from the planet Nutsack. I am on a mission of cultural conquest. We have been here for many years. We recruited the man known as "Brother Stair" for one of our cultural missions. Seeing that religion is a driving force among the people of the Earth, we thought that Stair would be a excellent "soldier" But we did not account for his human desires. We also took advantage of Stair's farm. We used some of the farmland to use as space dock area. Remember the ship Fury? That was one of our subspace relays. We used Stair's uses of the ship as a cover-up. When it was raided by your FCC, we used our teleported to send us and the equipment to an undisclosed location. Stair and his people took the rap. We encouraged Stair to make "false predictions" about your government and religious happenings. We would give him equipment and supplies for his farm. When Stair began "selling" the short-wave radios, we installed a transponder in ALL of them. So when we begin our "cultural conquest" we can use our temporal transporter.

About 4 months ago, which was about the time of the 60 men departing the profit, we went to Stair and demanded our stuff back. Stair said no. "Then you will go down like the rest of them" I told him. "You will be destroyed by God almighty" Stair said. "You will see your end" he finished. I then left his "radio-room". You know the rest.

We have the power to raise and bring down men like Stair. Remember Colonel Anderson? We brought him down too. You cross us and you will be utterly ruined. Hal Turner and his radio show are on the line too. Remember people like WB2OTK, KV4FZ and others? They would not do our bidding and so we brought them down.

I will bring you another message later.....

Yeah, I accidentally left my VX-5R sitting on the car yesterday during a surprise rain shower. Today I worked 2 UO-14 satellite passes with it. It works fine.

It's a shame that Stair couldn't have been in jail with Dimmy O'Brine for 5 weeks. He might have gotten Dimmy on the straight and narrow. Dimmy could sure use Jesus in his life. Hopefully Dimmy will get mental help when he goes back to jail for a couple years. I wonder if TWO (2) felony convictions will be enough to get Dimmy's ham ticket? Let's hope so!!!

I also enjoyed Hamvention again this year (last year was my first), but....what I found most dissappointing was the apparent lack of interest in scanning/swl. The listener's forum on Sunday AM (not exactly the best schedule slot) had at most about 30 people attend. Out of all those thousands??? The Mobile HF forum, ATV forum, etc were packed.

Are we really such a small group of folks? Also disappointing was the very few used scanners, decoders, etc to be found out in the flea market. Yes, the deals and availability of new, current equipment were good, but where are all the killer deals on older equipment? Scanner Master, Radio Stop, Computer Int, and CAT were present as was Pop Comm. But where was Grove Enterprises, Ham Station, or any of the other great scanner dealers? I would think Monitoring Times could add to their subscription list and so could Scanning USA?

Is there no world class event for listeners?

RV (KD5LJK)

PS: Correction to some of the other posts - the underwater radios were the VX-7R - neat looking rig.

I bet those radios weren't in the water. i remember a display for water resistant watches and saw the man pull them out of a dry tank behind the water. either way, they are supposedly water proof radios and my friend got one there for about 250.00,
I got several good deals, must have brought in 500 bucks worth of stuff for 300 bucks... The best two days I ever spent as far back as I can remember, except for when some idiot tried to lift my wallet...several radios were stolen and some vendors inside had their setup to where they couldnt watch there stuff well and I saw a couple of walk off's there... every crowd has them...

John Shitball <johnkimb@hotmail.com>, lying hypocrite, blubbers out of the other side of his ass how he's never posted information in

"But not by LJB, Campbell, or me for that matter. Yet you've posted

What's even worse is that you constantly point out where Chason works in some pathetic weaselish attempt to get him fired, you fucking pussy."

Yet Shitball posts Pussy Paris' Parole Oficer's name, e-mail, phone and other assorted info in Oops - my mistake - I was too cheap to buy a program so I didn't have a definitive list of dealers - just what I saw or recognized from walking around.

I also failed to mention Universal Radio who I believe show up every year.

Yes you do, or forever be known to be an ignorant fuckhead.

Where in the above letter does it say I had to retest for causing interference?

Yep, he's been a consultant for us too, and is quite an expert on pipelined, asynchronous, multiprocessing architecture. He's also quite popular with the ladies, contrary to the usual stereotype for a computer geek, and has been seen in the company of Texas' own Sandra Bullock in recent months.

I heard Yaesu equipment was selling at rediculously low prices, (FT817 $499. FT100D $540?). Yaesu also showed off a new portable/base radio, the FT897. Looked real nice.

I love Dayton, and living in Cincinnati makes it real easy. I was disappointed. One, I'm getting real tired of the rain and cold. Weather was better when they held it a few weeks earlier at the very end of April.

Ticket prices are too high. No program anymore and increase in parking. No wonder attendance was down. Why charge for the program when the ads they sell are paying for the darn thing to be printed? Next year I wonder what manufacturer is going to pay to run an ad that most people won't see because they are going to fork out money to buy it!

I noticed that the Cincinnati Hamfest has reduced their ticket prices to get people to attend this coming year. They really screwed up moving it from its old location years ago. Used to be well attended. They kept moving it around town so it lost its identity. Nothing like it used to be. I hope the Hamvention folks don't screw up what they built.

Even with the bad weather, flea market prices are too high and the fools won't really negotiate down to reasonable prices for used gear. In some cases it's actually cheaper to buy new.

A lot of vendors that normally attend were missing or hiding real well. No Universal. No Jun's (Ham City) and a few others that usually attend were no where to be found.

The VX7R's were in water. The mics were actually connected and went right into the water so you could use the handhelds if you wanted. Oh, and R&L was selling them for $339.

One reason I think attendance is down is the lack of innovation in products. Much of the stuff is the same old thing with different packaging. I have to commend Yaesu for at least trying and every year they seem to have something new. Icom is talking about some new digital stuff, but I'm sure it is a ways off.

The Ten Tec Orion is nice, but the price is out of sight. Their new long awaited QRP rig started at $595, then went to $695 and now they are taking orders for an August delivery at $795! Too much money, not enough rig.

SGC used to have a good rig with the 2020, but I noticed they screwed that up and changed the fixed SO239 on the back of the rig to a pigtail. Another component to fail. Also they took away the power plug and now have a pigtail for the power lead. Yikes, on an HF rig?

APRS is really growing in popularity and there was a really nice APRS exhibit. People think it is only for tracking but there are a number of capabilities that make it very useful, fun and interesting.

Special note to the vendors. Try to look excited about your products when folks stop by to check out your products. I have a fortune in Kantronics gear so I stopped bu to chat. Early on Friday so they could not have been that tired yet...well I asked about intelligent tracking (APRS) for the KPC3+. Got a ho-hum answer that they're not going to do anything.

Hats off to the Yaesu gentleman (Japanese) that greated me when I went to get my free hat. I was carrying the FT-1500 box in my hand as I went through the line. He looked at the box and said "thank you very much" with a smile on his face. Now there is a man that made me feel good about buying his product.

One last gripe...get rid of the non-ham, non-computer vendors...are you guys that desperate for money? Just how many sunglass vendors do you need at a radio/electronics/computer show? And enough of the trinket vendors.

I just wish the Dayton folks and the vendors will sit down and talk about improving this event before is declines to the point where they can't get their audience back.

Of course many of the ills can be cured with more hams.

The rumors that a certain Ham was behind bars for five weeks are simply not true. I want to set the record straight.
The Ham in question is a very highly trained Navy Seal, Seabee, Demolitions Expert, Parachutist, Expert Rifleman, decorated Combat Infantryman, Bronze Star winner, and Commando. He has more credentials than a pickup truck load of illegal Mexicans.
This Ham was not a ward of the county as is being said. He was on a covert mission for his country, having been called away in the middle of the night for a mission so secret and sensitive that he is not allowed to talk about it. He knew he could get called back to duty any time and he did as he was commanded.
His commanding officers personally escorted him from his house under cover of darkness and transported him to a destination of highest secrecy. The man then donned his "uniform" while away from the eyes of the public and proceeded to do his duty and serve his country for five weeks.
This Commando returned home just last week, comfortable in knowing that he had answered the duties set upon him by his superior officers. He knows that he may be called up again in the near future, and that he may have to go on yet another covert mission that could last for a year or two. He is only doing that which he is called upon and commanded to do. The man is a true Patriot and he lives on the brink each and every day, knowing that he could be called away at the drop of a hat.
Now you know the rest of the story.

Amp Supply Co. LA-1000 HF Amp. 160-10m

Have for sale or trade an Amp Supply Co. LA-1000 HF amplifier. Late 80's model, with Ameritron serial placard. Manual states 500-600w output. Tubes (4 ea. 6lq6) are doing about 450 on 80m. Amp is in good shape and working perfectly but has a few scratches. Power switch has been replaced with incorrect but heavy-duty switch.
Interested in trading for a quality BASE scanner/recvr, unblocked, etc. Not interested in handhelds. Looking for something like a BC9000XLT or ?, something with alpha display, blocked, unblocked, what have you, or other per below.
Will only consider Icom, Kenwood and Yaesu mobile ham radios depending on mod availability.
Will also consider only Motorola/Radius handhelds or mobiles (Max, GM, M1225, etc, as well. Jedi, Radius or Pro series.) Prefer VHF. U-ship, (will average $20-$35 CONUS), or I ship depending on deal.
Thanks and please reply direct,

I don't know if anyone has seen the website I'm looking for (I hope they have), but I've lost the link so I cant give it to anyone either.
Hoping someone can help me with the web address.

The website is about a bloke in America (maybe Canada I can't remember). He is an amateur that lives in a zone where the power delivery isn't fantastic. To combat this he set up a car battery in a battery box with a volt meter and a cigarette lighter socket built in (as well as big posts for his radio equipment). Apparently this wasn't good enough so he linked up a solar system to it as well. There were a couple of other attachments also.

Hoping someone can help me out with the address for it.

Thanks in advance,

Brian.

Brian, you would be better off using a battery made for supplying a relatively small amount of current for a longer time. A car battery is optimized to supply a huge amount of current (100 to 200 amps) for a short time in order to turn the starter motor. When the car is running, its electrical needs are supplied by the alternator powered by the engine. Gel cells are really what you want. They are sold for computer room uninterruptable power supplies (UPS) and camper vehicle use. Perhaps you can get them from a computer service company or just buy a couple of new ones. The gel cell have a charging power requirement similar to Nimh batteries and the charge control chips for Nimhs work well for gel cells. Do a web search for "gel cells" and you will get all you need! Also, do a web search for "Luke Enriquez". He is an Australian ham and engineer who has a nice design for a gel cell maintenance system.

What all you forget to remember is that the Dayton Hamfest in the last few years is all about MONEY MONEY MONEY and nothing else.
Ham radio comes in a very very distance second.
I've been going for 25 years but this is my last. $22 for tickets and $5 for a program is BS.
$49 for me and my wife for a few hours of walking around is ridicules.
Remember, Dayton = MONEY in somebodys pocket. So get use to it.
Did you ever wonder where all that money goes. Be interestering to see there books :)

Im a graduate student at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor and am a citizen of India. I would like to obtain a amateur radio license.
Could somebody tell me where i could get info regarding this and also what it involves. In india we needed to pass a Morse Code TX/RX test. I hear this is not required in the US. Any information would be much appreciated.

http://www.fcc.gov is where you have to look for more information on obtaining a licence in the US.
For India you will have to contact the part of the government that is regulating the teleommunications in India. I don't have more info on Being an Indian citizen makes no difference unless you are somehow an Indian Government agent.

US Amateur testing consists of 4 parts, a 5wpm Morse test (Element 1) and three writtens. These yield 4, closer really to 3 1/2, classes of license with progressively higher privleges.

Technician Element 2 All privleges above 50 MHz

Tech with Code Elements 1 and 2 Adds phone 28.3 and above plus some Morse frequencies. This is under review as we speak. The Geneva (International Telecommunications Union) treaties require Morse for privleges under 30 MHz which may also change next year.

General Elements 1-3 All but some segments in four bands.

Extra Elements 1-4 All Amateur privleges.

Exams are taken locally from volunteer examiners.

For further information:

http://www.arrl.org which is the amateur organization and contains most of what you will need including clubs in your area.

http://www.qrz.com for a good set of sample exams http://ah0a.org to download Morse Academy, an ancient and honorable code program which comes out of the box at exam speeds so long as you are not running Windows XP. The ARRL code CDs are also quite good.

http://www.hvcn.org/info/arrow which is the local club in Ann Arbor.

I would expect a campus like U of M to have a club and more than likely a station. Say hello to Professor Vinovskis in Sociology for me, we went to high school together.

Good Luck. It is really not all that hard.

Don't they have gennies down there? I live in a part of the third world called New Jersey and our electric company, once known as General Public Utilities (aka three mile island) is notable for outages. Some joke on us, they got taken over by First Energy which discovered holes in the Davis Besse nuclear reactor (used to be Cleveland Electric). Ergo hoc, propter hoc I have two generators for power outages.

Disagree. Been going since early 70's. I got rained on a _lot_, and it was almost never a warm rain.

Try going to Kings Island if you think this is high, and the Hamvention is better.

I noticed a lot _less_ ads in it. Mfgr attendance was somewhat less, too, so there were fewer of those to place the ads. CATS, the guy that repairs the rotators wasn't there. The guys from Indy selling software weren't there, either. The big Radio Shack salespoint in the big tent in the flea market wasn't there, and neither was the tent.

>Next year I wonder what Fewer. Charging for the program _is_ a mistake, I think, but not a deterrence to me. Heck, I drove 1100 miles round trip for this - an extra $5 doesn't even show on my radar screen.

Ebay is said to be screwing up the Hamvention the most, and probably the Cincinnati event as well.

I saw a real nice roller inductor go for $20, after the guy had wanted $30. I got an LS-120 superdisk drive for my computer for $35 in the flea market. 6 split nuts to hook up ground wire for $0.25 a pair - try to find those at Lowes or Home Depot for that price - forget it.
Flea market is OK by me. You may have run into a few people with gold fever...

Universal was there - the store and the tower manufacturer - store had

I think the attendance was probably less than 20,000. You need more than that to draw the smaller players.

Yes, even I noticed APRS this time. First time I found out that you don't need a computer in the car to use it. Any explanation of APRS you read starts out with mapping software, etc. which leads one to believe you need a computer in the car. For that reason, I wasn't interested. Now, however, I'm thinking my old HT would make a good APRS xcvr. Just wonder how I can carry on a regular 2 m QSO with that thing also blatting in the near vicinity. Duplexer?

Well, I'll take _any_ income to the Hamvention that supports it. We could lose it, ya know! Hara Arena can't be cheap to rent. The flea market _wasn't_ sold out from what I could see, and the inside had space too. If you didn't have the sunglasses bunch there, then you'd have bare pavement not contributing anything, and the ticket price to get in would likely go up some more.

>I just wish the Dayton folks and the vendors will sit down and talk about >improving this event before is declines to the point where they can't get >their audience back.

I can't see anything they've done that could be construed as a fault. I believe that all the higher prices are likely necessary to keep the show going at all. I think that they should maybe have tacked on $2 or so to the ticket price and gave a free program with it instead of what they did - that would have eliminated the loud and obnoxious, in 1 case at least, people selling the programs, as well as the unlikelyhood that those sellers were doing it for free. They probably got $1 or so out of each one.

Probably so, but a car battery will run the station for an awfully long time. Out here in the wilds of Michigan it's fairly common practice to use a car battery and a trickle charger. Combined they cost less than a "proper" supply, and even the worst ice storm rarely takes out the power long enough to drain the battery.

Maybe the way around it is to have some e-bay auctions on site. Bidders could view the stuff, then run back to their laptops (or nearby computer kiosks) and put in a bid. The auctions could run 2 to 48 hours.

Laugh about it, but time will come when you will get outbid by somebody using a PDA and Bluetooth standing right behind you. The dealers would love it.

Don't know the site but all you need you will find in yachts chandlery catalogues. We live permanently on 12 v batteries. Solar / wind / additional engine alternator / towed rotator if we could get 12v from rubbing two sticks togethere we would do it.

Spoke with Eduardo Hernandez, Sr. this past weekend. He was quite surprised to learn he is the subject of a hate vendetta by a West Virginia ham operator. Eventually, we both realized it can't be him that the West Va. operator detests so much. It has to be Eduardo Hernandez the third, who lives in Michigan. Ed Hernandez III, no relation to Eduardo Hernandez, Sr., is a traveling minstrel who has been know to perform in West Virginia, and that apparently is the connection to the West Va.
amateur who posts all the filthy obscene language in this news group. Ed Hernandez III also administers ham radio exams on an itinerant basis and has been known to do same in West Va. If that wasn't confusing enough, it was later learned that an Eduardo Hernandez, Jr. is computer consultant living in Florida and is in fact possibly related to Ed Hernandez, Sr. who lives in Texas. Both the Hernandez's are anxious to get this problem cleared up and to get the West Va. ham op to stop making up stories about the Hernandez's.

Originally the designation was to depict stations east/west location;
Stations east of the great Mississippi river would be designated as W*, such as WBBM in Chicago.
The "K" designation was meant for the stations west of the Mississippi.
This does not explain KDKA, the first commercial broadcast station, it was on the east coast and would seem to go against that rule.
The "K" and "W" designation are also considered country codes by the world radio congress.
Canadian station use "C", such as CKVB, Mexico uses the "X" designation.

Hi all.
I'd like to get some info on where I can send a Kenwood TH-79A for service.
The radio works well but I can't see and characters displayed on the LCD.
Seems like the LCD either does not receive enough power or the circuitry controlling it is on the fritz.
any suggestions?
BTW; Anyone know where I can find a replacement LCD for an Icom IC2-SRA?

Thanks.

long as he didn't violate the TOS of cotse, he would be allowed to express himself from there. And you DID complain to cotse, as Steve had mentioned a number of the complaints in various posts, after you admitted making complaints.

I mentioned that some of the stuff KC8JBO wrote was funny, profane, but funny. Maybe I am guilty of encouraging him, but so what?"

So you admit being a troll? And it truly is YOUR version of the truth, but certainly not the truth.

You still don't understand do you? Nobody is defending KC8JBO. They defend his ability to remain anonymous by posting through cotse, just as they would defend you to do the same. If you want to post inflammatory statements criticizing members of this group, fine go ahead, but for the most part they will never see them because they know how to use a killfile, and will quickly tire of your obsession with KC8JBO, and your obsession with trying to limit freedom of speech.

You know that is not true, as, according to your own posts, they were complaining about the state of the group 6 years ago, so I would conclude the group is exactly the same now as it was then. Only the names have changed. You can still get great information here, and most regulars are willing to answer intelligent questions with intelligent answers. There is plenty of discussion about "hacking" related materials, some of it interesting, some of it less so.

It's interesting to see how your are now trying to ingratiate yourself to the regulars in the group now, after some of the things you have said about them in the past."

Mr. George A. Ashley
1138 Collierville Arlington Road
Collierville, TN 38017

Subject: Warning Notice: Amateur Radio Station W4FQF

Dear Mr. Ashely:

Information before the Commission indicates that you have engaged in deliberate interference on the 75 Meter Amateur Band (3.901 MHz) at various times since October 2000. Some of the interference included tape recordings.
We note that on January 7, 1999 you were warned about such activities on the 20- Meter Amateur Band.

This constitutes a second warning that any further incidents of such operation will result in enforcement action being taken against you, including license revocation, monetary forfeiture, or both.

Section 308(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, 18 U.S.C.
Section 308(b), gives the Commission the authority to obtain information from licensees about the operation of their station. Pursuant to Section 308(b), you are requested to respond to this letter within 20 days of the above date. You are also requested to furnish the following information.
1. Describe the radio transmitting equipment, including antennas, you have at the 1138 Collierville Arlington Road Address. State the manufacturer, model and serial number of each item. If any items were constructed or modified by you, describe the item in detail.
2. Describe any radio transmitting equipment, including antennas, you have at any other address in Tennessee. State the manufacturer, model and serial number of each item. If any items were constructed or modified by you, describe the item in detail.

Please be advised that Congress has made punishable a willfully false response to a letter of this type. See 18 U.S.C. Section 1001.

Sincerely,

W. Riley Hollingsworth

I'd never buy radio gear on E-Bay.
All E-Bay represents is a "feeding frenzie" type market for ham gear. What I see people paying for ham gear on E-Bay leads me to belive that there's an awful lot "shill bidding" going on. Something that I would not put past some of the so-called "private dealers" that I used to see travelling to all the hamfests like gypsy traders. You know, the guys that buy up all the honest bargans offered for new hams by the old-timers, that show up an hour later on their table or on E-Bay for double the price or more. Buy used ham radio equipment on E-Bay...?? Anyone who does so should have their head examined.

Yes I hope they are. I went up to the DARA booth and asked where the booth was for the scooters and they told me they didn't know. Didn't they put the show together? Then when you asked anybody else they tried to sell you a program for $5. Very Sad. I hope they learned something this year. Maybe the big companies should find a new place to have the ham fest. Somewhere that it will be about getting hams together to buy and sell radios, and share ideas and not about how much money they can make putting on the fest. To bad it has become only a money making project for them.
Atleast people like Icom and Yeasu were having some good sells. I too was getting tired of people saying I can get more then that on Ebay. Maybe those sellers should stay home and hide behind their computers because I'm not going to pay Ebays high prices.

Sorry just my 2 cents worth

Never ceases to amaze me how cheap some hams are. Who gives a rodents behind about a program? Besides if you paid to get there and got a room what's a few more bucks for a program. I wonder how many get tossed or end up on the ground when they were free? Its called capitalism, and maybe with more and more gray hair in amateur radio, DARA had to do something to recoup their losses. I noticed the crowds to be WAY DOWN. AES had great deals, I bought two VX-1R's, they were $99 each!!! Just hope that we have bands to use all this gear on in a few more years. I have been to Dayton several times, and don't worry about the weather either. Be smart and bring the right clothes. Obviously there were several gonads who walked around with shorts on and tee shirts, probablly in the hospital now. They looked real cool!!! Didn't see the chicken cam, but did see the goofball with the tower on his head!! Always fun to people watch, can't wait to bring my newly licensed wife, she will be laughing all weekend next year!! Still the best hobby on earth...

This was my 1st hamvention and I had a blast! I've heard that attendance is down this year, but I think there was just enough people... enough to talk to, buy from, work on the air, etc. but enough that it's not a gigantic mob of screaming operators. :) I liked the Yaesu VX-7 display even though I only half-believed that they were actually submersed. They WERE actual radios though, I believe they were on weather frequencies. It was great to be able to actually use the radios on display, I've heard that at previous 'fests, you had to wait to use them. I got to sit and look at / use the PROII (I think that's what it was) for about two minutes! :) I didn't buy a program though, it looked like it was mainly sold as a souvinir (did I spell that right??). The crystal scanner, three business band HTs (one convertable to 2m), and two FRS radios are souvinirs enough. :) Plus, forum lists and maps of the arena (which were actually MORE ACCURATE than the ones in the programs) were available for free to those who asked nicely. There were a few good scanner dealers there. I stopped at Bearcat Radio Club and another scanner mag (which one?). Bob Grove planned to be there but had a family emergency :(Too bad, because I was looking forward to listening to him at the Teachers forum. One thing I noticed was that there's a LONG hallway that goes around all the arenas. Very handy once I found out about it. Also, did anyone else see the 25kw dummy load out in the flea market? Wow.. that's one big dummy load.

> they are going to fork out money to buy it!

Agreed. One of the Cardinal Rules of marketing is never to let your potential customers know that they are paying you a percentage of the advertising budget! This is a faster turn off than paying retail.
People "like to" or "need to" think that they are paying ONLY for the product they want to purchase. This makes them think their getting a bargain deal, except for big ticket items like Cars and Homes where it's a given..

Unfortunatly The Hamvention people seem to have not lost their appetite for profits at any expense and knowing how traditionally cheap ham radio op's are this is not a good publicity move. (the only exception being the cost of soda/pretzels/burgers which can be priced as expensive as those at the dog racing track and they'll still buy the greasy/carbohydrate packed stuff)

Look at similar examples like Radio Shack charging for their formerly free catalog (unless you buy something) and the numerous sites on the Internet that used to carry live streaming audio feeds for free, which have now dissappeared or you are charged a listeners fee for. Radio Shack has since resigned to giving catalogues away for free again, if you wait around till March, and dot.coms who charge pay-per-view/pay-per-listen are just about all gone to byte-heaven, except of course for the porno and bizzare sex video on demand websites ;) [and most of this "pay-per-view" stuff you can now download from www.kazaa.com for free! Kazaa is the new Napster folks - check it out!)

The general public is tight enough when it comes to trying to get a dollar out from their wallet for some things, but just try the same with white male middle-aged ham radio op's?! You'd have better luck trying to wrench a canned-ham bone from the jaws of a junkyard dog. :) :) :)

I've been to the old Cincy-hamfest of years past, darn shame as it was almost as big as the original Gaithersburg Md hamfest.
Same thing happened to the hamfest up in Hamburg NY when it used to be held at the County fairgrounds. They moved it, now it's a mere shell of it's former self last I heard. Many more have just dissappeared without a trace.

You can thank E-Bay for that JDB!
Without a doubt the world biggest 24-hour online sucker-hamfest.

Perhaps I'm wrong, but it seems to me that more than a few of these "professional ham equipment dealers" I see with E-Bay item sales and feedback counts in the 100's - and a few in the 1000's) seem to network amongst themselves to drive up the base auction prices on ham gear(??) A bit of "shill-bidding" here and there...perhaps..??

Cute gimick, but Motorola or Cobra has had a pair of waterproof "sport" FRS radios out for close to a Year now for $59.95 in a hanging blister-pack at WalMart last I looked.

I agree with you 100% on the re-packaging of gear.
I'm one to peek "under the hood" of new radio gear myself. What's "behind" that graphics-filled LCD?

Yaesu does seem to be the leader in innovation and I would put Alinco in as a close second. Kenwood and Icom...?...booring! Just expensive bells and whistle gadgets in cheap sheet steel boxes. Looking at the electronics inside of your average Icom and kenwood reminds me of the insides of a Korean VCR that you can get for $65.00 at Circuit City. (and they REALLY pay 2-3 grand for some of this stuff...??!! rotflmao!)
Yaesu and Alinco are mostly newer design SMT with clean layouts and by far a better value - Alinco I feel has the best dollar per radio value going.

Sad news on Ten-Tec. The Orion shoud be called the Onion.
Looks like it came off the prototype workbench in the Engineering lab - with all the bugs still inside. (?)
Iam afraid Ten-Tec will be gone by this time next year.
They used to build great rigs in the late 70's and 80's.
Easy to work on with readily available replacement parts you could get from Digi-key and Mouser electronics if needs be. Now their overpricing themselves out of the market. What Ten-Tec needs to do is return to their roots and build rigs like the Triton and Omni-D series again.

Functional and utilitiarian radio gear that is easy to operate, maintain, and has minimal gimicky bells and whistles. Stop trying to mimic the Japs, dump all this digital pushbutton crap, except for the freq display, and put more single-function standard type controls. The Omni-D (..of which I own 2 of) are a great example. The Paragon was perhaps the best radio to ever come out of Tenn.

Agree again, not a good idea to put a mid-power level RF connector or high current power receptacle on a pigtail. Anchor female receptacles to the chassis with bolts and do it the right way. (I hope they never get the idea to put a spring-loaded cable retractor/pull reel like what's the power cord of the XLY's Electrolux vaccum cleaner...oy! I heard one engineer from Cubic or Azden talking about that for a DC cigarette adapter power cord many years ago at Dayton and nearly got sick...)

I could not agree with you more strongly on the "trinket vendors"!
If I am going to PAY an admission fee to a flea market (which is what Hamvention really is folks!) then I had better see stuff for sale that I DO NOT SEE at the local every-weekend flea market just down the road, where the admission and parking is free!!

Case in point, for years this one guy would show up at all the Eastern hamfests selling new cheap import luggage and gym bags. No ham stuff period.
Next year he was joined with some other guy selling clothing and other crap in another section of the flea market.
Again no ham related items whatsoever for sale between them.
I've never been back to the hamfests that let these turkeys into their flea market and I never will.

I could not make Dayton, and I really hope that it is not turning into another consumer products junk market dumping ground! It's bad enough with all the computer related crap.
All that needs to happen is for somebody in an overloaded mini-van to show up and be allowed to start selling cheap imported wristwatches on rubber banded styrofoam display cases, and you can then kiss the Hamvention goodbye. (please someone tell me these wristwatch-dealers did not show up and were allowed to set up and sell like they did someplace in NC last year!)

In defense of the sale. That was no ordinary 101e. A mint condition Model T Ford brings a little more than the original price too. They aren't very good cars, no A/C, no cruise, no stereo, etc.

I agree that $5 isn't going to bankrupt anyone at the Hamvention, but there is also a matter of principle involved. I'm sure there are tough pricing decisions that the DARA people had to make, but I found this one particularly onerous, and made more so by DARA neglecting to inform people of their decision beforehand. I was frankly offended, as much as I would be if a restaurant I frequent suddenly decided to impose a surcharge but neglected to mention the fact before presenting the bill.

The decision to ding people for a program is simply a bad one and we should be unequivocable about letting the people who run the Hamvention know that.

I'm currently researching the idea of using deep-cycle marine batteries.
A huge battery is cheaper than the stupid little 12V 7AH battery my UPS needs.

No, I won't be using the huge one with the teensy UPS. I have a pair of huge old Elgars I got because the charging circuit was overcharging and ruining the 4 12V 15AH batteries inside. I'm thinking of either repairing and beefing up the charging circuitry or removing it entirely and kludging in a real battery charger with some beef to it.

I could get four of the marine deep-cycle batteries cheaper than one of the 12V 15AH batteries.

Hi,

I'm getting a little more interested in APRS after finding out you _don't_ need a computer in the car to be able to use it. I've got a GPS, an _old_ TNC, and an old handheld 2M xcvr I'm not using. Spells possiblities to me.

My question is, with the APRS 2m radio blatting away on 144.39, do people successfully carry on conversations on repeaters on, say, 145.25 mhz? If so, is it done by making the APRS a very low power station, or some other means? I'm sure no one is hauling around cavities to filter this, but how do you do it?

TIA,

I keep my ARES Packet Node on a "deep cycle" battery like Russell describes but got a wet cell intended for electric outboard motors vs a gel-cel cuz its mucho cheaper (<$50) than gel-cels of the same rating. I "float" it at 13.8V using a charger made for that purpose so, when (not if) the AC power fails the station doesn't even notice for at least 24 hours. IIRC the charger was well under $100US and has yet to over-charge the battery enough to require water.

The "house" batteries in our motorhome use the same system.

Also, just bought a smaller portable wet cell intended for lawn tractors from Walmart for $15! Figured the portability was worth that small price.

What you have is exactly what I am running.

I have a Garmin eTrex Camo GPS receiver, AEA PK-12 TNC, Yaesu FT-470 handheld. Everything except the GPS rcvr is stuffed into a plastic box that I shove under the front seat. The GPS rcvr sits on the dash where it can see the sky; power cables and antenna run into the plastic box.

I run a Yaesu FT-5200 dual-bander on 2 and 450. I have two antennas: thru-the-glass on the rear window for the APRS tracker and dual-bander mounted in the center of the roof for the mobile rig.

Go to this URL for photos and a description:

I'm not sure what you have in mind. Do you want a solar powered battery?
or just a way to have a back up 12v supply?

Astron Power Supply makes a few of thier power supplies with a special circuit (the -BB option) to attach a 12v battery. This turns the Astron into a sort of 12v uniteruptable power supply. During 'normal' times the power supply charges the battery, but if commercial power should fail the battery takes over powering the equipment.

I have this setup running my APRS WX station. The BB option is a special order from most retailers however (they usually don't stock them) As I understand it, the special circuit not only charges the battery, but protects the power supply when commercial power fails and power is drawn from the battery. NOTE: I found out the hard way I had to reduce the voltage on my Astron to keep from over charging my battery.

For information on solar (and all types of re-newable) energy check out Home Power Magazine.

The latest MURS rules changes now simply limit transmitter power output to 2W, and remove the old 2W ERP restriction:

http://hraunfoss.fcc.gov/edocs_public/attachmatch/FCC-02-139A1.doc

This effectively raises the ERP limit to about 10W for omni base stations, and about 50W with a directional beam antenna.

With licenseless services like MURS beginning to flourish, Amateur Radio just keeps getting less relevant.

This is great news... I'm getting closer...

One question: The AX.25 packets should have your call in them, right?
How do you program the TNC to put out your call so you're not transmitting without IDing? Did you have to burn a prom, or wire some jumpers, or is that particular TNC's memory non-volatile, or what? I think my TNC doesn't have non-volatile memory. Might still have to get one that does have. Its been almost 10 years, I think, since I worked with that TNC - don't remember much about it (except that it is old).

If your TNC is ten years old, it likely does not have the GPS capability. What type is the TNC? You likely will need to upgrade it -- unless it's discontinued the manufacturer will sell you new chips and an updated manual that will have the GPS commands in it.

Once you are certain the TNC will handle GPS command, get the TNC running and access it using any packet software or terminal communications program. Then, you enter your commands. to make it memorize your call, issue the command MYCALL W4HH-9 (or whatever your call is) then hit enter. It will respond MYCALL WAS (whatever the call was) NOW W4HH-9.

There are a few other commands you need to set, depending on the TNC.

Older TNCs had to burn the commands. On my first TNC, after entering the commands, you entered PERM, making the commands permanent (that is, until they were changed again). On newer TNCs this is not necessary.

First thing you need to do, though, is figure out the TNC. Does it have GPS command? Can you communicate with it to set up the commands?

17AH gel cells will barely run an HT. High current drains are impractical because gassing within the cells insulates the plates faster than the gel can absorb and causes the internal resistance to rise out of hand. Current drains should be limited to 20% of AH rating (and with boat batteries too).

Big as you can get (into your tray) Marine/Starting batteries are a pretty good compromise if you have to use it in your car.

Thanks for all the info.

I'm away from home right now, but believe that I have remembered the type of the tnc to be PK-232-MBX. Maybe not really 10 years old, but almost. Don't think I ever saw a GPS port or command or anything.
Will check it out soon when I get back home.

Ed. Tho I have little experience with HF mobile antennas, I have read very good reports about the Outbacker antenna. You might ask for input from someone who has used it. I understand that grounding to the frame of your Land Cruiser is very important as is grounding the hood as well.
Keep me up to date if you will.

In a CA 75m mobile shootout, the Outbacker was 8.5 dB down from well-designed bugcatchers and screwdrivers. For every 7 watts radiated by the bugcatchers and screwdrivers, the Outbacker radiated one watt and dissipated six watts as heat. How can that be called "good"?

Not so! The Ham freqs. WILL continue to be relevant. Look for the CB'ers to get into these five freqs and ruin them. Two watts? Bah! Since when has a CB'er ever played by the rules? Look for them to buy Ham two meter rigs, modify the TX, buy an amplifier with five watts in, 100 out and modify it, too. They will ruin the MURS frequencies within five years. Mark my words. Remember when CB was licensed and limited to 4 watts? Good concept, but it was doomed for failure from the outset. The MURS frequencies will meet the same fate.
The MURS frequencies will soon be yet another cluster f*ck akin to the eleven meter band, and the FCC will have not the resources to police the miscreants. It will be interesting to see how much interference these "new" CB freqs. cause to the nationwide cable TV system, too.
It will only get worse as power contests, filthy language, arguments, malicious interference and general eleven meter intellect creates havoc on these five frequencies. Ol' Bubba with a cheap, ungrounded station and a gut full of Old Milwaukee is gonna have a ball!
Once the radio mfgrs. get up and running (making $$$) all Hell will break loose. I give it five years, tops, before the rabble rousers ruin it for all.
Gee...yet another FCC idea gone bad.
And the FCC wants to usurp some of OUR bands for commercial interests? This makes you wonder who the Hell is watching the store, eh?

You fail to mention that FCC degraded MURS from Part 90 to the Part 95 (CB) category, removed some previously allowed modes, and specifically requires that the radios be certificated, thus blowing away your outlaw chant about using Yaesu VX-5R.

Bottom line, it's a 2W CB service, good for not much more than a local intercom service. Fine for some limited requirements, but hardly competition to the worldwide capabilities of even a very modest Amateur Radio station.

If anyone can help me I would definately appreciate it. I have a Yaesu FT-11R that has somehow lost it's programming. No big deal, except that I do not have my book with me and I am a paramedic away at work right now. I have to program some of my basic channels back in using the keypad and cannot remember how. If someone could steer me in the direction of online manuals or a summary of how to do it again I would be extremely greatful. Thanks.

I'm not all that sure that they will; retail price for a decent VHF FM
HT, allowing for a reasonable profit, probably bottoms out around $30.
Retail for an FRS is around $30. Retail for a low-end CB is around $50. Which will people want: 14 channels of burping cussing and farty noises, 40 channels of burping cussing and farty noises, or 5 channels of burping cussing and farty noises with the occasional Taco Cabana drive-thru order on one of them?

are you trying to start an arguement? ive see this happen on lots of other groups or sites.

how come those who have the morse endorsement scoff at tech class as cb'ers, and i guess cb'ers scoff at hams in the same light when they say "certain things over the air" we can not.

even though i am just a technician class, i am active on almost every band 50mhz and above and still manage world wide contacts. i like to further the hobby, in stead of keeping it down. im all for morse code but as more and more services drop it we will almost be like the dinosaurs morse should be kept but more questions in licensing should be geared towards newer digital modes and how to put together such stations.

i dont want to incite a riot im just putting my 2 cents in, besides some people dont care for HF operation or have the time or space for it. dont treat them as 2nd class amateur operators, i bet those HF afficionados can learn some things about vhf/uhf/shf ops.

well thats it and hope to hear everyone on 2m SSB or on AO-14 (6m will be open as well)!!!!!!!!!!!

Handheld scanner;

I've gotten my moneys worth out of my BC 200 XLT. Our town has gone to trunked. I'm not sure what type. I'd like to get another scanner for commercial band services, aircraft and 2mt HAM band since I'm a HAM.
I noticed that Uniden does not sell all the units on their web site that are for sale at other places. So I'm thinking that maybe they are just selling the latest models or the models they plan on keeping in production. I guess I would also like all the channel storage possible as long as it doesn't shorten battery time. Our local city services are at 866-868 MHz so I will need UHF. And I also need 144 - 148 MHz for late night HAM listening.
Of course I've been looking at the Uniden BC245XLT. But I've heard there are 1000 channel models out (RS I guess) and I think the digital ones are for sale or near FCC type acceptance.
So how about some suggestions. I got lots of hours of monitoring from my 200XLT. Thats cheap entertainment. It's been so long I can't remember when I bought it. It was a real work horse. Please pass along any "lemons" you know of. You can email me anonymous lee@texw.com I don't want to get anyone upset about their radios.

Many-Many Thanks, Lee

The PK-232-MBX has GPS capability depending on the software version. Go to the Timewave web site and read their material on the PK-232 http://www.timewave.com/ Somewhere on the site is a chart showing the various software versions. As I recall, you need something like version 9.0 or 9.1 to get the GPS capability, although my memory my be wrong. Open the case and look at the EPROM -- there should be a sticker on it with the version number.

By the way, I have corrected the file name for the article with the photos of my stand-alone tracker. The corrected URL is: http://www.schlatter.org/aprsmobile.htm

What voltage setting did you end up using? I spent $toomany on a

It was so long ago I forget. I contacted the manufacturer of my "deep cycle / marine" battery and asked them for the long term float voltage and set it to that.

I still have to monitor the liquid level, but it does not disapear anywhere near as fast now.

Frankly, I think you're rant lacks basis. Kenwood, Yaesu, and Icom have been leapfrogging each others achievements for years. To say that the other's stuff is suddenly "boring" says very little about what's coming.

In my personal opinion, they're all garbage next to the likes of the Elecraft K2. That's a REAL radio.

I have one of those "great rigs" from Ten Tec and the 1970s. The dynamic range was awful, the packaging was flimsy, and the radio itself was hardly a model of stability. This digital push button stuff is the future for mass produced radios. It's cheaper, more stable, and it frankly performs better than most mass produced analog gear.

Yes, you could build an analog radio with better overall performance than a lot of this new digital stuff. But you'd have to invest a lot of careful component selection and tweaking to get it running. And that would cost more, much more than you'd be willing to pay.

While criticism of a radio's performance/price ratio is valid, your notions of what's a good construction technique or design choices is pointless. Try building a few radios of your own before spewing this nonsense about other manufacturer's choices.

Then don't spend any time or money on them. They'll get the idea and not return. The problem I have with your approach is that determining this sort of thing up front is fraught with problems and potential law suits. Your definition of what a "trinket vendor" is happens to be a judgement call.

What's it to you? If you're offended, don't go. Did you buy any antique radio gear? Were you offended that they were there, even though we're talking about old radios which were left over consumer items from the 1920s and 1930s? Get over it.

If you don't support a hamfest by attending one, then, well, there's always E-Bay. Don't like them? Gee, Mr. Grouch, what do you like? This rant is like cursing at the weather. Grow up.

The odd/even frequency issue is the USA/Euro difference. USA = odd freqs, Euro = even freqs.

On my Panasonic there is a system reset button on the back that you can press that resets the memory and you toggle between Euro, which is even FM freqs and 9 KHz steps on the AM dial, or USA, which is odd FM freqs and 10 KHz steps on the AM dial.

RTM to see if your unit has a similar setting option.

Industry standard float voltage is 2.3 volts per cell.
That's 13.8 volts for a twelve-volt lead-acid battery.
We use 54.something volts for a 48 volt string in telecom.

However, the restrictions on what types of pre-5/2002 Part 90 certificated radios will be allowed on MURS has been greatly reduced.
Now, most any 2W-under Part 90 radio will be allowed. Along with the 2W Transmitter Output clarification, this was the most important part of the ruling, as there was great confusion as to what was legal.

The capabilities of a well built MURS station can now compete with those of a Technician Class station. Furthermore, MURS users have certain privileges that Amateurs don't... for example, MURS users can do business, or download short e-mails of any type of content to their Mobile PDAs from Internet gateways.

The fact stands - MURS has been made a more capable service, and now offers capabilities and privileges on the order of those of the Amateur Technician Class license.

Not even close to being comparable.

MURS -- 5 specific frequencies, less than 100 Kilohertz of total bandwidth.
Tech -- Millions of frequencies 23,962,000 Kilohertz of total bandwidth.
Advantage Tech 239,620-to-1

MURS -- One band
Tech -- Seventeen bands
Advantage Tech 17-to-1

MURS -- 2W output
Tech -- 1500W output
Advantage Tech 750-to-1

MURS -- Antenna height 20'
Tech -- No antenna height restriction.
Advantage -- Tech

MURS -- FCC certificated radios only. Modifications illegal.
Tech -- Free to use any purchased, homebrewed, or modified radio without FCC certification.
Advantage -- Tech

MURS -- Operation restricted by US borders.
Tech -- Reciprocal operating agreements with nations all around the globe.
Advantage -- Tech

I could go on and on, but I'm sure you're getting the picture!

Comparing MURS to even the lowest privileged Amateur Radio license is like comparing a tricycle to a Lamborghini, and the comparison suffers even worse when you compare MURS to a General or Extra class Amateur Radio license.

That is an over statement if I ever saw one. MURS can no way compete with any part of ham radio, even Tech class stations.

Big deal, there are cell phones for business and internet for e-mails.

Really, how many frequencies for MURS as compared to those available for Tech class licensees? Compare the power levels allowed by MURS as allowed for Tech Class. You must be dreaming.

True if all you want to do is this one thing. But what other license is there that lets you use various different modes in various different kinds of bands? I could drive home with the 2m rig in the car, and once I'm home I can work some DX on HF with CW or SSB or amtor or such.

This is the same old argument that we've been hearing for years... FRS will become just like 11m(with illegal amplifiers), or MURS will become just like 11m... of course it has been proved completely wrong. The reason that folks on 11m went to amplifiers was because it actually helps them increase their communications range - the fact that they interfere with others when the skip is out is simply a side-effect. With no skip, there is no incentive to go with exceedingly higher power in the first place, because it serves virtually no useful purpose on VHF/UHF.

So - you're going to have to come up with a better argument, this one just doesn't wash any longer. Thankfully the FCC has figured this out... too bad many hams haven't.

There's the "no business" rule for ham radio. Which is actually an advantage for hams in that we don't get invaded with business comms eating up all or bandwidth. Lawsuits over QRM, etc.....

Heheheh ... sure .... <chuckle chuckle>
Um, what makes you think one can't do e-mail with amateur radio?
Of course, there is fast-scan television (regular tv) as well as slow scan tv. Uhhhh ... I sometimes take my HT (walkie talkie) to work to use during lunch. I've chatted with Australia, England, and other parts of the world ... no, not using internet linking - all rf path. This was with 6 double a alkaline batteries on FM (voice). I've had folks argue that one can't cut through one of those alleged 70,000 watt shoot-out stations. Can't fight the carrier. Hmmmm ... only need to be a short way off the carrier. There are modes that can be copied some 30 dB BELOW the noise level. 50 Hz bandwidths and less (another 20 dB gain). Actually, it should be possible to cut throught that 70,000 watt am signal with 100 watts (properly done, of course). Oh .. internet .. yep, can do that too ... but tell me how you work Australia all rf path on 6 double a alkalines ... with a walkie-talkie .... running all of 4 watts .... into a whip ... and that only requires a tech license. What happens if you have your extra?

BWAaaaaHAHAHAHAHA

try again from Rochester, NY

ps although business use is not what amateur radio is all about, what is it that makes me think that business use is not at all on your mind?

Ed-dildo, doesn't it just gall you that you have to work that pizza delivery job, knowing how unskilled and unemployable a product of two drug addicts like you are?

Besides, the last mobile antenna you "acquired" was from you stealing it off another ham's car.

Perhaps if you had some balls, and posted under your real name, you might have some credibility. Does your fat hog wife still work a the cosmetics counter, she does look like Fat "Mimi" from the "Drew Carey Show."

You're right on the money! I said this long ago. The MURS will be adopted by the truckers and you can bet your bottom dollar that all 5

I have a 96. This truck was made for dual airbag "option" but the passenger side was never there. If you pull out the snap in dash panel above the glove box, there is room for a radio. I have a dual band TM Kenwood with the remote head above the rear view mirror. With a magmount, you never know its there.

Not really...it means we can get rid of those that want to order a pizza via the autopatch, those that have no idea at all what ham radio is supposed to be, and maybe we could use some thinning out and getting back to basic. Then maybe the un-informed crabbing about what the 'service' is all about will stop because those that are left will actually have read part 97.

All this talk about MURS, like it has anything to do with what most people consider amateur radio! Amateur radio is much more than simply transmitting and receiving. Heavens!

If I need convenient, reliable communications with other people, I use a cell phone. Sure, under extraordinary circumstances, amateur radio may be more reliable, but 99.9% of the time, I'm way better off with my cell phone than my ham radio.

With the standards Hans used, MURS even is disavantaged as compared to CB class D (27MHz)! However, for that mode, the only advantage is more latitude on signal content (digital is allowed).

Now that we've established that it's worse than CB, you really need to go back to that dream you call life and tell yourself that everything will be OK, even after the labatomy.

[This doesn't really belong in "rec.radio.amateur.misc". Also, questions posted to newsgroups are answered in newsgroups.]

Channel spacing plans for the FM broadcast band may be different in Europe from North America. The AM band uses 10kHz spacing in North America and 9kHz spacing in Europe (as an example). Also, in the US, all FM stations are on odd 10th's of a megahertz ONLY.

That's a load of horseshit that a vulture wouldn't touch. You can't work what you can't hear, and the only way to find a signal near the noise floor is to improve your antenna. Even if the "other guy" gets a linear, you still have limited range because of the crappy propagation of the band. The only reason people buy linears is because of the king-of-the-hill mentality that most of us abandoned after grade school.

Amps interfere with others, skip or not. Part of the "skip" they complain about is bleeding from overmodulated radios and crappy amps, and part of it is the normal increase in the noise floor from local signals as the band use increases in the daytime hours. Anyone with a scanner knows the latter is true because the exact same thing happens with the cordless phone channels. So considering both those problems, I can just about guarantee you that the same thing is going to happen on FRS and MURS as it happened on the CB. And they will use the same lame arguments to justify the use of amps, and for freebanding on nearby freqs.

>So - you're going to have to come up with a better argument, this one >just doesn't wash any longer. Thankfully the FCC has figured this >out... too bad many hams haven't.

The FCC wears blinders to both reality and criticizm. When the abuses with CB became excessive they ignored the problem and dropped the license requirement. Their current reasoning for FRS is that they implemented manufacturing requirements that would prevent abuse, but they totally ignore the resourcefulness and determination of the pirates, as well as the historically high profits from illegal radio equipment. The existence of any band with little or no enforcement is just asking for trouble, and the abuses will continue until the Commission pulls their heads out of [the sand].

For the most part, there is very little action on any VHF/UHF band other than 2m.

> MURS -- 2W output
> Tech -- 1500W output
> Advantage Tech 750-to-1

Unless your doing something bizarre, like EME, anything over 5W is basically overkill. 2W TPO is decent, if you've got a good antenna.

And even 2m has gone dormant in recent years. Other than a few high-level repeaters, the band is virtually unused.

Tuned in to WBCQ 7.415 (20:00z) today to catch Radio Caroline. Caught just part of some parody of Brother Stair and others just before RC. Wished I was two minutes earlier, and set up the PC at home to record it. Wonder if it was in the can, or they just work fast.

Come to think of it, when the bible wars flared a few months back, Weiner was defending Brother Stair. Of course, he said that he & WBCQ were in the middle of a bunch of FCC garbage initiated by the Religious Broadcasting (or is that "Begging") Community, and not to mention, his customers, themselves...

And to think of all the fun that I was missing by not listening to these religious broadcasters. "put it on a plate dear, it will taste better".

Most people nowadays go on the Internet when they get home, and can reliably talk just about anywhere in the world for free.

But, in any event, I'm basically comparing MURS to Amateur Technician 2m... there is now very little difference between the two. Hams have repeaters, but most of them go unused these days, and any of the good ones cost you money - so you might as well get a cell phone.

The biggest kicker is that, with ham radio, you can't even talk to your friends, family members, and co-workers. This is why I've continued to push for re-opening up the Novice Class as a no-code VHF/UHF-only license - at least you would have somebody to talk to on VHF/UHF.

I disagree, for the average Tech with a 2m handheld, a 2.1m hanheld will compete quite nicely.

Anything over 5W is overkill for anything other than bizarre applications like EME... 2W is plenty with a couple of good antennas at each end of the link.

This statement strikes me as rather ignorant of reality.
If you're having fun using MURS, knock yourself out. If MURS is as good as ham radio for you, that's your thing.
It just doesn't seem to make much sense for most of the people I know in ham radio.

FOR FREE? If you mean via the computer, there's still the ISP monthly charge or its equvalent (the DSL line, cable modem, T1, or whatever). Who provides that for free? If you meant free = "no additional charge", you failed to account for the hidden monthly charges I just stated. Then, there's the indirect charges, such as the electric bill (most people pay a power company, or for gas for their generator, etc....).

Maybe they only go unused when you're around because no one wants to talk to you, or like the people on this group, they've already "heard it all" from you!

Absolutely. What is wrong with that? Again, do you have some kind of point? I suppose not... and it seems that is the underlying problem these days with Amateur Radio - it is basically pointless.

Moonbounce? Have you completely lost all touch with reality? The fact that is basically all Amateur Radio seems to have to offer on VHF/UHF for a Technician operator PROOVES how irrelevant ham radio is becoming

Repeaters, maybe... but moonbounce? Give me a break.

Stewart - N0MHS

P.S. You can already do repeaters on GMRS, and I suspect that MURS will eventually be expanded to allow low-level repeaters on certain new frequencies... I'm been pushing the idea of a crossband VHF/UHF repeater capability, so Joe Average homeowner can set up a repeater site inexpensively.

Aren't you forgetting the "All above 300GHz," which technically means that Techs have an infinite amount of bandwidth? (Though building those 300nm yagis can be a pain in the ass)

Also don't forget the little bonuses like IRLP, other link systems, and in general, the ease of finding repeaters on 2m and 70cm. Even if they allow repeaters on MURS, you won't be able to find enough of them to give reliable comms over more than a couple of miles.

Nope, it just hasn't had time yet. There are still way too many people out there that aren't familiar with FRS. Once they start Recommendations vary among battery manufacturers and even for models made by the same manufacturer. Get their specifications and follow them.

Remember that float voltage is temperature dependent, and the specified voltage usually is at 25 degrees C. For other temperatures, compensate according to the manufacturer's spec (-3mV to -5mV per cell, per degree C). If you see a lot of temperture variation, consider getting a temperature-corrected charger. Your batteries will last longer!

Hello,
I have recently acquired a Kenwood TH-205AT HT.
And I have a few questions about it. I did not get a manual so I am not sure of a few things.

1. Can I use the keypad to enter a frequency? I can't seem to figure that out. I can use the up and down aarows to slowly scan to a frequency.

2. Does this have tone capability built in? It has a tone button, but how would I set what tone I am sending?

3. What do the a,b,c,d buttons do? I can't seem to figure out what they do at all.

4. I will assume just the 3 memories (yes I know it is old, but the price was right)

Any other pointers would be great. Thanks

Check the manufacturer to see if you can get a modification kit or something.

I'm sure they sell the same type of radio in Europe, but under a different model number and designed to adapt to European frequencies.

I have a Sangean ATS-803 receiver and has a switch inside where the batteries are that will switch between European tuning vs. American tuning.

The fact stands - the only reason that there is a "MURS" is that folks went to the nearest CostCo or BestBuy and bought the JobComm or Color-Dot radios which were intended for small business use WITH A LICENSE and then started using them without benefit of same. This is criminal behavior no better than the ham-band "bootlegger" or the broadcast "pirate".

The Commish'- to my deep disgust - was more interested in getting more economists and phone-company=merger specialists on board - folks who had no concept of what radio regulation was all about or should be - than in putting more law enforcement agents on the streets to clean up the mess, and the rest is history.

Two methods of Rules changes - go through the procedures starting with a Petition for Rulemaking, or just go ahead and do what the law does not allow you to do and if enough people do it the gov'mint will turn chicken and leave you alone.

The second method makes me sick.

On HF, the best approach is to use the same amount of power as the station you're trying to communicate with, and use the best antenna possible. The same hold true on VHF, except that at a certain point, increasing power will do you no good, because the other station is out of LOS.

The point is - Amps are more useful on HF because of beyond LOS propagation - therefore they exist... it really does no good to use amps on VHF - their are of course a number of ways to increase LOS comm range, increasing Tx power is one of the least efficient(and ineffective after a certain point). I've written a web page about the whole deal:

http://www.geocities.com/horseshoe7/repeat.html

So please, do try to feed me a bunch of happy horsecrap about using amps on VHF/UHF - it is VIRTUALLY USELESS. You tried to apply my statement in the wrong context, and got yourself 360 degrees turned around - you tried to argue with me, but just ended up agreeing with me.

I think it depends on which lobbyist carries the most cash. A harsh

I have been going to the Dayton HV for 22 years now and I have seen allot in those years, but Ebay is ruining ALL hamfests. A couple of years ago a person with a very pronounced New York or Bronxish accent came to our local Cincinnati hamfest and bought everything in site that was reasonably priced. It didn't matter what it was. While at a table I overheard this conversation. Bronx "How much is this?" Seller "$50.00." Bronx "Not worth it. I'll give you $30.00" Seller "Wellllllll OK." The seller proceeds to bag the item. Bronx to friend while still in easy earshot of seller "I'll get $125.00 for this one at least on Ebay!" Resellers like this one are truly what is killing Hamfests. If I was the seller and heard this, why would I bother taking an item to any fest? I'd sell it on Ebay and pocket the $$$ instead of making someone else rich.

Are you kidding me? I've put out some WHOPPERS over the years on rrap. See below for an example of one: "synthetic ionization of the ionosphere".

But, I do think that the VHF/UHF ham frequencies are being wasted, and we need to reinvoke NOVICE class as a no-code VHF/UHF only license... or, simply expand services like FRS and MURS. 11m CB is a red-herring and has virtually nothing to do with VHF/UHF.

Tech advances force FCC to consider Ham HF freq auction:

WASHINGTON (AP) - Spurred by the many recent advancements in the Laser ionization technology field, the ITI Corporation (Ionization Technologies, Inc. - Fairfax, VA) has proven that it is now economically feasible to synthetically ionize specific areas of the ionosphere, opening up new many new reliable and low-cost telecommunications applications.

The best frequencies for utilizing this technology lie in the HF portion of the electromagnetic spectrum. While the HF portion of the frequency spectrum has long since been allocated to specific purposes; there are many HF frequencies which could be re-allocated to better serve the nation. The Federal Communication Commission(FCC) is considering re-allocating at least half of the Amateur Radio Service's current HF frequency spectrum to the newly proposed ISS(Ionization Skip Service), where it can better serve the public's telecommunications needs.

Stewart Robertson, President of ITI, says; "The older naturally-induced HF skip communication techniques essentially waste 99.9% of the HF bandwidth, and communications are generally of very poor quality, very unreliable, and end up causing wide-spread interference. Using the new synthetic ionization techniques, we can specifically direct RF energy over great distances, wherever we want it, anytime we want it. Communications are no longer predicated on solar activity - we can now directly and safely control ionization evels in specific areas of the ionosphere, opening up all kinds of new possibilites in reliable long-range communications applications."

Maybe you are not familiar with the mentality of these idiots. Regarding amps, the most important thing is "swang", referring to needle movement. They start by modifying their radios. The modulation limiter is disabled so they can sound "louder", irrespective of splatter and harmonics. Then they run the output to a Class C driver with the intention of re-modulating the carrier just to get the peak power higher. Then it gets sent to the final amp, which is usually just a box filled with push-pull power transistors and wired in parallel. These amps are not designed for linearity, but for raw power. They are not intended for communication, but for "stepping power". Have you ever attended a "keydown"? It is a contest to see which amp is louder, and intelligibility of the audio is almost irrelevant: Two mobiles are set up on a line, they rev the motors and key away at the same time. The winner is the one that is heard above the other. Forget ERP or linearity, it's nothing more than an RF drag race.

Now we all know that ground-wave propogation on 11m sucks almost as bad as VHF and skip is very inconsistent, which is probably why the hams abandoned it years ago. Just like VHF, 11m has a limit as to how much power is practical, yet amps in excess or 1000 watts are commonly used by IOs.

Not only that, but there is a lot of money to be made by making and selling illegal radio equipment. They already know that some people will be violating the laws on the band, so all they need to do is convince them that what they need is a bigger amp. That's not hard to do, even if a bigger amp provides no practial benefit whatsoever, because they will tap the competitive nature of people: "My amp is bigger than YOUR amp!" It works. Just look at how many illegal amps are for sale on the net.

The point is that they don't care about any sort of practical communication, they are only interested in doing whatever gets their rocks off, to the detriment of anyone else using the band, and they will do so while laughing in the face of the US Government. Unless the FCC decides to police the bands, the same thing will happen on MURS and FRS, because that's the way people are.

While I will grant you that the left side is both more natural and civilized, the rule is that islands drive on the left and continental countries drive on the right. So Japan and the UK are the major lefties and Australia while in theory a continent drives on the left.
Once-British South Asia may as well however I have never seen evidence that either side is preferable. Europe in general drives on the same side as we do.

Sweden some years ago drove on the left with LH drive cars but switched to the right on New Year's Eve. Mindless European bureaucracy it would seem is not limited to the environs of Brussels.

I once stayed in a B&B not far from London where the landlady, admittedly far more decorative than useful, had managed to total a rental car without ever getting it off the airport grounds in Sydney by flaming off down the right side of the road. At the same B&B we encountered Hermann the German who was so obnoxious we almost staged a Bon Voyage party for him as he roared toward Wales in his LH drive Audi; but we knew he was about to get his.

I've found that, for reasons that I don't understand, amateurs call all sealed lead-acid batteries "gel cells". All the sealed lead-acid batteries I've seen, with the exception of cylindrical Gates cells, have liquid electrolyte. Sealed lead-acid batteries with gelled electrolyte do exist, but they're relatively rare. So without other information, I'd assume that the Mendelsons "gel cells" have liquid electrolyte, not gelled.

I agree with a lot of what you are saying. I just don't think the amplifier issue can be extended to MURS/FRS/GMRS - the fact is, we just aren't seeing it happening.

If I see this kind of nonsense on MURS, I'll DF the fool, and turn 'em in.

Now, I'll have to admit, I live in San Diego, and what I have seen are some Mexicans running over-amplified setups on 154.600, but I'm not going to go down to Mexico with DF-equipment - the TJ cops would just end up busting me down there.

Not here - 2m is highly used both for voice and for data (packet) and 440 MHz is not far behind.

The metro area is not one of the country's mega-centers but we do have lots of active hams.

The FRS freqs in our area are not overly busy, but what is heard on them is a precursor of what is to come. Cussing, arguing, name-calling, et al are already happening. It will only grow worse and MURS will soon follow suit.
To believe otherwise is foolish and myopic.

Sure; But those are same guys that would buy up everything at opening first day and move it to their table and mark up 200%. And sellers like that either are motivated to sell or unaware of what they have to sell. Nothing has changed at all.

It's been around for quite a long time(1996?) - pretty much EVERYONE has one of these little radios now - there aren't folks with amplifiers abusing these frequencies. If it hasn't happened by now - it NEVER is gonna happen.

The argument was that people would use AMPLIFIERS on FRS and MURS - this is absolutely wrong... you KNOW IT, and are trying to CHANGE THE SUBJECT.

Amplifiers are not being used on FRS, GMRS or MURS.

Tell me why 'Joe Average' would even think about setting up a repeater, or cross banding VHF/UHF. Seems like a very silly idea to me. Would that repeater system be private, or public for a fee perhaps?
MURS could fill a need, but please don't tout it as a viable replacement for amateur radio, it isn't and will never be such.

PS - Posting to multiple groups is as moronic as the other idea.

Does anybody know first hand if truckers are presently or going to use MURS or FRS?

Are you CB/Hamster dealers persuing this avenue and presenting it to truckers?

If there's more than just a handfull of same company truckers using it, I would also use it.

Personally, I've always liked the idea of a few fm channels in the VHF/UHF regions just for truckers.

If there's a migration to MURS by truckers in general, it will be to escape the present CH19 blatherings of hi power idiots and base stations whose sole function in life is to cause interference just for the sake of it. I agree that if it becomes more than a fad, the MURS ch.'s will most likely end up sounding like the present CB 19 but it should be a long while before that happens.

I have a really nice 110w high-split low-band Motorola Mitrek that I would love to convert to six-meters. If anyone could point me in the right direction of how to retune the unit and for a source of 52.525 channel elements, I would greatly appreciate it. thanks!

As soon as somebody comes up with a way to make money out of some or

No matter what you post, no matter your arguments, the simple unalterable fact remains that the low life
CBers will soon ruin the MURS frequencies. Common sense and reality will , despite the claims of the self-professed intelligentia, eventually rule.
I tend to scoff at those who claim to hold themselves aloof from us commoners. These self-proclaimed phonies most usually live in a fantasy world bordered by fantasy and Harry Potter books.

Roger, you have been told before. You have me cofused with someone live such a miserable life, but your random attacks on successful people will do nothing to help you with your mental problems.

I actually did work at a pizza delivery job when I was in graduate

Not even close to being comparable. Amateur Technician has incredible advantages over MURS. (By the way, there is no Technician license limited to just 2M, so don't try to drag out that red-herring.)

MURS -- 5 specific frequencies, less than 100 Kilohertz of total bandwidth.
Tech -- Millions of frequencies 23,962,000 Kilohertz of total bandwidth.
Advantage Tech 239,620-to-1

MURS -- One band
Tech -- Seventeen bands
Advantage Tech 17-to-1

MURS -- 2W output
Tech -- 1500W output
Advantage Tech 750-to-1

MURS -- Antenna height 20'
Tech -- No antenna height restriction.
Advantage -- Tech

Comparing MURS to even the lowest privileged Amateur Radio license is like comparing a tricycle to a Lamborghini, and the comparison suffers even worse
when you compare MURS to a General or Extra class Amateur Radio license.

I love it when you talk LOUD to try to overcome your lack of rational persuasion.

Speaking of loud, in the case of MURS (with only 5 channels) the old notion of 'capture effect' will ensure that I can get through all the other weak signals on channel. 'Capture effect' is done with power.

Can you say "amplifier"?

I knew you could!

Wait until a couple of good ol' boys get frustrated with the congestion on History is on the side of the latter example. Consider:

In the 1970s, we had problems with unlicensed CBers. The FCC's "solution" was to eliminate the license requirement.

In the 1990s, we had problems with unlicensed operators on the VHF marine channels. The FCC's "solution" was to eliminate the license requirement.

Recently, we had problems with unlicensed users on the 151-154Mhz VHF business frequencies. The FCC's "solution" was to eliminate the license requirement and create MURS.

Currently, we have a growing problem with "bubble pack" GMRS radios being mass-marketed as FRS radios. The users are largely unlicensed. What do you think the FCC's "solution" will be?

It's already a daily occurance on FRS, so what makes you think MURS is any different?

Put the FRS frequencies in your scanner (or better yet, get a Talkabout and put it into 'scan' mode.) Drive around for a few days. What do you hear? Profanity, sickos attempting to pick up young children, unlicensed GMRS radios, music, etc. Also quite a few folks now using modified 70cm ham or UHF business band gear illegally on the FRS channels.

Again, what makes you think MURS is going to be any different?

Amplifiers and/or modified ham and commercial radios most certainly are being used on FRS. Take a listen!

If you have a good ear, you can tell the audio difference, due to the stricter deviation requirements of FRS.

I've got a whiz-bang dual bander in my car with enough memory slots to plug in -every- 2m frequency pair and simplex frequencies. And they are programmed in. Then I have a handheld scanner with the same frequencies programmed in. At home I have another scanner with the "popular" repeater and simplex frequencies programmed in.

With all that said, there is very little 2M FM activity in the central Ohio area. Compared to Omaha NE is the mid-late 80's, its dead.

in Cincinnati, Ohio. 800-237-9654 They are a clearing house for trading used channel elements. They test and warrenty every element they ship.
The other choice is to send elements to a crystal manufacture and have them re-cystalled. Someone like International Crystal Manufacturing 800-725-1426. This take longer and is more expensive.

With the disclaimer that I have only returned 2 meter and 440 Mitreks, when I looked into it, it appeared you could simply follow the

Don't even bother!!
I WAS at Dayton, and those "new" batteries had not been charged for 4 YEARS(at least that was what I was told by a Mendelson employee).
So new, means NOS, but with SLA batteries, if you don't charge them once in a while, they lose much of their capacity.

No. The key pad is only for generating touchtone for accessing frequency.

Tone encode was an extra cost option, and needed an accessory tone board that was installed into the base of the rig. Tone selection was via dip switches. The "tone" button on the top switched power to the accessory board.

Just four more touch-tone keys, thats all. The "A-D" tones were normally Relevance???? I have a ham license, I am working on a 2.4ghz antenna, and a 160m antenna. I will look at and try if possible any new technology on one end and restore/use BA gear on the other. I love telecommunications. My ham ticket is relevant to me because I am an experimenter and an operator. I use 802.11b for home networking, just another technology. MURS is interesting. Do I see it as a threat to HR? No....Cynics who want to prophesize the demise of HR are the real threat. Do something, contribute to the science of radio, teach others.

If the AR service is irrelevant to you......quit.

LOL!! You got me!! I was just sipping my iced tea, and shot it out my nose. I talked to one of our customers (I do ISP tech support), and his web site is having problems, and so I tried to get into it. There, in a huge font:

"Genuine Silver Colloid Now Available!!!"

Then I happened to say something like "Oh, you sell Silver Colloid, Huh??" Oh no, I knew that was a mistake!!

And the flood gates of kookiness opened up!!! He went into a long monolouge about, AIDS, Clinton (Of course), Chemtrails, Enron, and some other compnay I never heard of, and he finished off with Clinton again. I just kind of sat there and said "uh-huh!" when he paused. After I hung up with him, I checked around his site, and it's a treasure trove of right wing Kookiness! I can't say the address here, but it comes right up when you search for silver colloid. Some of the sites that the links are for are pretty scary...

Thanks for the laugh!!

Like Bob Dole, as he exited public life, sponsored a bill allowing 100% of the radio/tv media in any metropolitan area to be owned by one person.

Why would he do that?

Simple, they offer a service. Like a real estate broker, or a check cashing service.

You send them $100. They forward $99 to the person you owe. They make $1.

Their asset is the "goodwill" of their customers. Apparently that goodwill is not universal.

Horseshoe, you're going to have to help us here.

We need you to explain the difference between useful ERP and "virtually useless' ERP.

On one hand you say higher ERP is VIRTUALLY USELESS ---

> So please, do try to feed me a bunch of happy horsecrap about using amps on > VHF/UHF - it is VIRTUALLY USELESS.

But on another hand you applaud the lifting of ERP limits ---

> This effectively raises the ERP limit to about 10W for omni base > stations, and about 50W with a directional beam antenna.

Which kind of ERP is useful?

I can imagine ol' Billy Bob buying hisself a 14dB gain antenna, string some lowloss coax, and exclaiming "Sheeeett, ah'm putting me an ERP of 50W over toward ol' Ellie Mae's house!."

Then I can imagine Ellie Mae hollerin' back "Yeah, but I called 1-800-HAM-AMPS and got me one of them thar Mirage B-320G bricks, and ah'm puttin' me an ERP of 200W in every durn direction! That be making me about 6dB louder'n ya'll in every direction!"

Well, ol' Billy Bob's mammy din't raise no idjits. He slaps hisself on the forehaid and esclaims "Ah'll jess get me one of them thar bricks too -- lessee, my antenna done gave me 14dB, and that thar brick of Ellie Mae's is givin' 20dB -- that be 'bout 34dB -- holy sheeeeeeeitt, my ERP done be 'bout 5,000W -- hell's bell's -- I OWN them thar MURS channels fer a hunnert miles around old Mount Baldy!"

Just more proof that the cb types are doing the same thing to FRS as they did to 11 meters. They will ruin any radio spectrum they can get access to.

Stewart, you seem to think there isn't a point. The point is about learning. This served the United States very well back in 1968 (I believe it was 1968 - within a year). The Coast Guard lost a big tower on Saipan (did I get this right this time, Hans?). The Navy was having a big problem copying the hams they sent over to get communications back up (the disaster was caused by a typhoon). I was in the shack at KG6AAY on NavCommSta Guam and heard the goings on. I called the signs 'sparkplug, sparkplug1, this is KG6AAY standing by'. The net result was that the AMATEUR RADIO OPERATORS restored communications. For a number of days, we were the ONLY communications to that island. Hans was one of the guys that went over to Saipan. This has happened countless times, you simply may not have heard about it. One does not learn simply by talking on the radio. The hobby is much richer than you can ever imagine (and far bigger than I know about as well). It is a valuable resource to this country whether you or I believe it or not.

Let me refresh your memory. The discussion was about noise caused from skip, to which you responded:

"...not all DX is reciprocal inkind or magnitude."

Now what does that mean if not saying that the -reciprocity- of skip is a factor in band noise? I'm sure most will agree that skip causes noise, but how does one-way skip affect the noise level differently than two-way skip? That's what you said, Randy, like it or not. Now quit avoiding the question and answer it.

Patriot Roger at first wanted to join the Navy because he had heard about all the "semen" there. Then he discovered that there was yet another spelling (seamen) that his West Virginia dictionary had typically missed.
He remained undaunted, however, and quickly joined the Air Force because their standards were lower. Roger told the recruiter that he had one desire while in the Air Force, and that was to be the "head man". The Air Force quickly enrolled him in radio school, thus enabling little Roger to polish all the knobs he could get his pudgy little fingers on.

I just got this small digital handheld LCR meter and need some info. Google didn't help. Range is switched with 8 pushbuttons on the side. 200 pF to 200 microF, 20 ohm to 20 Mohm, 2mH to 200H. It has inputs for 3 leads G, Lo, and Hi. I wonder if anyone else has one that can tell me when to use the Hi and when to use the Lo?

It means what it says Aaron/Sparky. How fucking dense are you? It has

Maybe or maybe not. The Ham Fox hunters will have a field day tracking down the bozos, on VHF it is much harder to hide one's activities and location. The real concern is not the running of power, but the fact that the idiots who do the above will find it almost irresistible to dial their modified 2m rigs down to the Ham 2m band to take advantage of the nation wide system of repeaters, some linked in to multistate coverage systems, for a quick QSO with other like minded pirate operators. The reason they would even consider dropping down to the 2m Ham band is due to the fact that many businesses still use the now unlicensed MURS frequencies, and likely will continue to do so. This could make the current problem with intruders on 10m and 12m look small.

Tell that to Mirage amps, RF Concepts, Beko Elektronik,etc. They do a tidy amount of business selling V/UHF amps, and they DO make a difference on those bands with or without skip conditions. You'll be hard pressed to find a serious V/UHF operator that does not own an amplifier. I own and use several myself.

No they don't Randy. They do make dual band 2m, 70cm FM only amps, and only two models at that. The BD-35, which I use for my dual band HT, and the higher power version the BD-38-G. Both amps are for FM use only, and the output drops off real fast outside of the Ham Bands they are tuned to operate on.

I'll ship you all the boat anchors you want - at YOUR EXPENSE... just make a deposit via Paypal for everything you want :)

Let's start with a couple of old, and very large, MOCOM-70s that I converted to run digital on 50.14 in the early 90's, OK? The relays are still good on the beasts. However, you should be aware that they DO have a propensity to set car alarms off when they are in need of a tuneup. I'll throw in the service manual if you buy both. Shipping and Handling charge for each radio - $50.

Stewart - N0MHS

P.S. I hope you have a good Service Monitor - you are going to need it.

I know this seems a little old and is definitely off topic.
However, I have one solution that I know has worked.

if you have to use places like "paypal", then setup a seperate account just for that purpose. This way, the only way they can take money is if there is any to take.

Where do you come up with such NONSENSE - don't you have any concept of reality?

Unless used in conjunction with towers, 100W amps are virtually useless to Joe Average on VHF... and don't start with the tropo ducting, Sporadic-E, and EME crap... try to use your BRAIN, man.

This is why amps are not going to be used on VHF MURS and have never been used on UHF GMRS/FRS - when are you folks going to tune into reality, and quit trying to extrapolate your HATE and knowledge of 11m CB to VHF/UHF services - it is PLAIN IGNORANCE I tell you.

Stewart, let's cut the nonsense and I'll ask a serious question - why do you seem to believe that amateur radio stopped with spark gap in the early 1900's? I've got news for you - the latest and greatest in cb could be cut to ribbons with amateur technology in the 60s - I know, I was there. What is it that you do not understand? My 440 MHz handheld runs only 6 aa alkaline batteries, yet is capable of using (not just opening, USING) repeaters 100 miles away. I've talked with guys on handhelds up in Watertown, NY - a good long ways from here - on the handheld. And this is old technology! You'd best brush up on PSK-31 and other modes before you continue to insert your foot in your mouth. Boat anchors exist everywhere. Get back on subject. Just exactly where do you think that anything without a license (including CB) has more to offer than something with a license? Please be specific.

Thanks & 73 from Rochester, NY
Jim

ps - I talked with Norm, VK2NP, in Brisbane, Australia, many many times using RTTY. Yep, old technology. Did it in the 60s. Go ahead and tell me how fantastic the internet is. I used to type 90 wpm on a 100 wpm machine in the navy and could keep the old 60 wpm machine in the shack going without interruption. Ok, you can cut and paste 3,000 wpm with the internet. How fast can you get information out on your own without simply copying someone else's information?

pps - the amateur scene is considerably faster than you may suspect.

Nobody is using illegal amplifiers on GMRS/FRS - why? Because it makes no pratical sense. If the MURS/FRS/GMRS channels get so crowded that people need to resort to amplifiers for the reason you cited - then it is simply time for the FCC to add more channels to these services... didn't think about that one, did you?

You see, you are still trapped in trying to equate 11m CB with FRS/GMRS/MURS - and it just doesn't work. 11m CB might be "frequency constrained" - but, with channel narrowization, there are PLENTY OF UNUSED FREQUENCIES on VHF/UHF for small footprint public services... besides, if these folks are putting it to such good use, then the hams shouldn't mind giving up a few VHF/UHF frequencies too, right? Try scanning them sometime - they are VIRTUALLY UNUSED.

For crying out loud - this was 35 years ago.

The world has totally changed - everyone has cell phones now(except me). The govt. is far more prepared to handle emergency comms these days. I'm sorry to say, but I think you are living in the past.

But - if you must know, I don't believe ham radio is completely pointless yet... but it is heading in that direction.

You know what - I'm starting to think that's why the FCC goes ahead and simply allows all these CBers to have illegal amps - it is a valuable National Resource :^) Could come in quite useful in an emergency.

Hey Polly, did you really not finish high schol? And by the way you keep briinging up the gopher-faced Turdeater's sister organization, or do you want to be a Pink Lady too? And speaking of ol' gopher face Nadless Ate

You really have to know what you have before you can know how to maintain them, or if they are compatible with your usage.

REAL gel cells are plentiful and available in a variety of AH ratings. And most do not leak at all, even if turned upside down.

Maintenance Free car batteries often use a calcium additive that reduces the electrolyte loss and allows a greater margin for overcharge. This doesn't hurt the ability to supply adequate starting power, but makes for poor deep-cycle performance, and recovery after a deep cycle. They also tend to leak at the post, making them no better than a REAL deep-cycle Marine or Golf cart battery that allows you to add water as needed. BTW I have seen Golf cart batteries on sale at CostCo for a great price.

All I was stating, was that if you were for some reason forced to use a car battery, you would be better off with a Marine/starting or RV battery, than with a stock type car battery.

However, I don't see why anyone would want to use a stock type car battery unless they had a bunch of junk cars in the yard, and a low current drain accessory to run, like an old CB or 8-track stereo, because stock type low-maintenance or maintenance-free car batteries don't keep well in this kind of operation.

Amateur Radio Newsline™ Report 1293 - May 24 2002

This is a special announcement: Attention all listeners. Please be advised that our next newscast, Number 1294, will not be released until Sunday evening June 2nd. This is due to staff travel to an out of town event and will affect only next weeks newscast. ARNewsline newscast number 1295 will return to our normal Friday release on June 7th. Please adjust your release schedule accordingly. Thank you.

Also, once again this weeks Amateur Radio Newsline™ newscast is extremely audio intensive. We believe that it is impossible to really appreciate the words of those quoted without hearing them for yourself. For this reason we suggest that after reading this weeks print edition that you take your web browser to:

http://www.arnewsline.org

Click on the newscast number then download the MP3 audio file. Next sit back and experience a 20 minute "audio picture" of Hamventionr 200 for yourself.

Thank you. End special advisory.

Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1293 with a release date of Friday, May 24th 2002 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T. 2002 turns out to be the year of surprises at Hamvention. This story is first on Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1293 coming your way right now.

(Billboard Cart Here)

DAYTON 2002 - A YEAR OF SURPRISE - PART 1

If nothing else, the 2002 Dayton Hamvention was filled with surprises. Surprises like this:

--
"I just flat do not believe that. What are the odd? The top three prizes and people without calls win them? There's a lot of guys walking out of here with their heart down in their shoe soles."
--

That's right. The top three prizes -- three top line ham radio stations and this year they were won by non hams. And before some of you channel cops start saying that non hams cannot legally win ham gear guess again. The law is on their side. Not only did they win it. They went home with it.

Another surprise? How about business. Business as in what may be a record year for vendors. Why? Because those who came to Hamvention 2002 were armed with cash and ready to buy. Just ask Radio School's Gordon West, WB6NOA:

Gordon West WB6NOA: "Well at he booths I was working to show the Gordon West Radio School products the sales were very, very positive. I mean -- people came here to get equipment and to get back on the air.

Many new hams were going on the air for the first time, yet there were allot of older hams who were sort of not on the air allot trading up to new equipment.

Certainly, I think we are about where we were last year for attendance but enthusiasm in acquiring new equipment? Yes! Much more than last year.

As to the size of the crowd? There is still no official figure. Also, the weather was a bit unpredictable. Friday was wet. Saturday was first clear then wet. Sunday turned out to be the nicest weather of all. CQ Magazine's Rich Moseson, W2VU, was happy either way:

--
Rich Moseson W2VU: "I just love rain. On Friday it rained and everybody was inside and it was very, very busy and we had a great show.

Saturday it was nice outside and the Flea Market people were happier than they were on Friday. Overall, as always. Good show."

Moseson's view was echoed by Chip Margelli of Vertex Standard -- the Yaesu people:

--
Chip Margelli K7JA: "I think Hamvention this year was great. The weather was very cooperative especially on Saturday. This gave us lots of time to talk to customers and describe our products. We think that everybody was in a festive mood and a buying mood and that was good especially with all of the new products we have here. We've had a tremendous time here at Hamvention."
--

In reality, Hamvention 2002 was a buyers market. Dealers kept prices low and lots of major ticket items moved across the sales counters. In fact, it was possible to buy a Yaesu FT-817 for under $500.

As to what was new this year? Listen to what some of the company reps brought with them starting with Vertex Standard's Chip Margelli.

Chip Margelli K7JA: We have introduced new products in every major category. We introduced the Mark V Field high-end HF; the FT-897 second generation `man-pack' portable; the VX7R submersible handheld; the FT-8900 `quad-band' 10 meter, 6 meter, 2 meter and 70 Cm mobile radio and the Wires Internet repeater linking system. So we have had a very busy time."
--

Not to be outdone, Kenwood's Leo Famie, KJ6HI, said that those coming to his booth wanted to see a little HT called the F6:

--
Leo Famie, KJ6HI: F6, our new HT. A tri-band hand-held covering 2 meters, 220 and 440. It has a receiver from about 500 Kilohertz to 1300 MHz but blocks out cellular telephones. But the neat thing about this radio is its all mode receive in the band B. AM, FM, USB, LSB and CW."
--

Famie says that dealers sold well over 300 of these new H-T's making the F6 was a bright star for Kenwood at this years Dayton show.

And what about Icom you ask? We asked Ray Novak, KC7JPA, what was hot and what those coming to the Icom booth wanted to see:

Ray Novak, KC7JPA: 706 Mark 2 G by far. Also allot of interest in a new digital radio that we have that will give you bandwidth for data equivalent to a T-1 line."
--

One guy who always has something new up his sleeve is MFJ's Martin Jue, K5FLU. This year he gave Amateur Radio Newsline a peak at two new goodies. The one that really caught our eye is a high frequency beacon network receiver that is so pretty that it would be as much at home in your livingroom as in your hamshack. Not only that, it lights up a LED on a map to show you what beacon you are actually hearing: Martin gave us a simple explanation of how it works:

--
Martin Jue, K5FLU: "The beacons are precisely timed...so everything is exactly right. What we did was to duplicate that timing sequence in here. And we make sure that it is always right because we have an atomic clock receiver in here."
--

MFJ also showed its new Morse code interface box. Not only does it decode the C-W signal your receiver is hearing. It also lets you plug in a key, paddle or even a keyboard and send Morse like a pro.

But new gear and great prices were not the only surprises at Hamvention 2002 and we will have more later on in this weeks Amateur Radio Newsline report. (ARNewsline™)

RESCUE RADIO: HAM RADIO ASSISTS FOLLOWING UK RAIL ACCIDENT

RAYNET -- the United Kingdom's equivalent of ARES and RACES here in the United States was called out on Friday, May 10th. This, following a railroad crash that occurred in the city of Potters Bar less than one mile from the RSGB Headquarters.

The accident took place at about 1 P-M. G4MWO says that Hertfordshire Raynet County Controller, Trevor Groves, G4KUJ, was contacted at home at 2 P.M. and asked to assist with setting up the local Emergency Control Vehicle. Groves had it operational by 4.20 P.M. He then provided technical and administrative support to the relief administration staff who used it until office accommodations were arranged at about 8 P.M. that evening. (GB2RS)

RADIO LAW: COMMERCE COMMITTEE VOTES TO DELAY SPECTRUM AUCTION

Back on this side of the Atlantic the House Energy and Commerce Committee approved a measure that would delay the government's June 19th sale of spectrum now used by television broadcasters and sought for wireless services. The panel approved the action on a voice vote May 5th. As previously reported, this legislation was sought by a large segment of both the wireless and broadcast industries. The bill now goes to the House floor for consideration. (Published news reports)

SPECTRUM SHARING: MOVE OVER DIRECT TV - YOUR SPECTRUM IS ABOUT TO BE SHARED

The 12 GHz downlink spectrum used by Direct TV and Echostar is about to shared by terrestrial services. The CGC Communicator says that thanks to a creative idea and a multi-year lobbying effort by Northpoint, the 12.2 to 12.7 GHz band will soon be used for new video and broadband communications services, such as local television programming and high-speed Internet access. Technically, the new service is called "MVDDS," short for Multichannel Video Distribution and Data Service. (CGC Communicator)

RADIO ACCIDENT: FIRE ATOP THE KCBD-TV TOWER

The C-G-C Communicator also reports that KCBD-TV, in Lubbock, Texas, recently installed a new Andrew batwing antenna designed to accommodate both its channel 11 NTSC and channel 9 digital transmissions. After only five days of operation with just N-T-S-C power applied, there was an apparent arc-over and the aerial was destroyed by fire. The station resumed NTSC operations using an old Alford antenna located on the same tower. Engineers are trying to determine the cause of the failure. (CGC Communicator)

DAYTON 2002 - A YEAR OF SURPRISE - PART 2

Now, continuing with our coverage of Hamvention 2002, lets look at the forums. Emergency communications was this years Hamvention theme and all of the sessions -- about 50 of them -- were in some way dedicated in some way to it. And while we could not visit every one of session, we do know that for all three days the forum rooms were packed. In fact, many sessions had people lined up against the walls and sitting in the aisles. That included our own Ham Radio Town Meeting that featured Popular Communications Editor Harold Ort, N2RLL as the keynote speaker. His theme: Emergency communications means more than just ham radio:

Harold Ort N2RLL: "I want to say that now is the time to learn to operate with other services in concert and not just with ham radio. That's really my message. And if you are wearing the blinders: If you are wearing the ham radio blinders -- take them off. Please.

I don't have all of the answers but I would like to have folks depart from business as usual. We have allot of smart people out there with specialized know-how.

And that's the beauty of ham radio. We can bring allot of radio users into the emergency communications mix so that we can help to make America safe.

Ladies and gentlemen: If we don't get it after 911, we really never will. Thank you very much. (Applause)
--

Ort's message: Its time to break down the barriers that divide us and work together for the good of our nation and the world. Or as Harold himself said: If we don't get it after 911, we never will.

Another session that drew a stand room only crowd was the FCC forum with Bill Cross, W3TN. That one you can hear right now on the RAIN Report. Its on the web at in streaming audio www.rainreport.com or on the phone at 847-827-7246. (ARNewsline™)

DAYTON 2002 - A YEAR OF SURPRISE - PART 3

The Hamvention Grand Awards banquet was held on Saturday evening. This years recipients included Owen Garriott W5LFL and Tonly England, W0ORE who shared the Special Achievement award:

OwenGarriott W5LFL: "As perhaps you could tell from that brief introduction, hamming has been a part of my life for over 55 years. I started with my father and perhaps you can tell from the sequence of events in my professional career hamming was a very strong influence on the direction. I went to undergraduate school, to college and to a professional career after that.

I know that this story is not unique. In fact it wouldn't surprise me if there were some 10% to 20% of those of you in the audience who could provide a similar story about how hamming has influenced your professional career as well as your past-time in the area of ham radio.

I do want to thank all I the Amateur Radio community for the benefit it has been to me in directing and guiding all of my professional interests over the past 55 years: All of the way back to the time that my father asked me to come along to code school, to theory school and ending up in my getting my first license.

It has been a great career and I owe an awful lot of it to Amateur Radio. Thank you."

Tony England W0ORE: "It was probably in the 9th grade when one of the big blizzards was coming through West Fargo and they sent us home. I remember vividly: My bedroom was up on the 2nd floor. All of the now was blowing by the window and I was playing around with the radio and I was talking to this Pastor at a mission in South America. It was a jungle setting and he was describing what they were doing down there.

And you can imagine what an imagination expanding experience it was for a kid in North Dakota to be able to talk to someone living in the jungle of South America? It was that kind of experience that we were hoping to share when we talked to young peoples groups on Spacelab II through the Amateur Radio system. And it is something that I hope we pass on to other kids.

When maybe one of my granddaughters is a teenager and an Amateur Radio operator I hope that she has the chance to talk to a professional female engineer who is on a spacecraft on its way to one of the moons of Mars. So I hope that all of you keep up this good work and see that this happens. Thank you. (Applause)

Al Waller, K3TKJ, was next. He received this years Technical Excellence award for creating qsl.net:

--
Al Waller K3TKJ: "...With that and the insight of the Dayton Hamvention Awards Committee we have certainly legitimized another mode of communication for ham radio. The Internet is not the enemy of ham radio that I have heard professed so many times. It is just another mode of operation.

Today we have hundreds of thousands of QSL users on the Internet. It is a friendly place. The hobby is better for it and I am honestly proud to be a small part of it."

Then, the man that everyone was waiting to hear from. The 2002 Radio Amateur of the Year, Hap Holly, KC9RP of RAIN. His closeing remarks brought down the house:

--
Hap Holly KC9RP: "In closing, please allow me to borrow from this years Winter Olympics a familiar international theme that sums up my exhilaration at being selected to receive this award. Simply put: `the year 2002 has truly been my Gold Medal year' in the Olympics of Amateur Radio. I am indeed honored to be chosen as Radio Amateur of the Year by the Hamvention, but also to be the first person with disabilities to receive this plaque. Thank you very much. (Applause)
--

But there was another surprise. This one involved KC9RP, a radio and a company known as Alinco and our producer Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF:

--
Bill Pasternak WA6ITF: "Hi Hap. I'm changing my uniform tonight. I was asked by the wonderful folks at Alinco and ATOC Distributing any by Evelyn Garrison to represent them because they are at a business meeting. But Hap, they would like for you to have...your very own -- brand new -- DJ-196 two meter handheld as their token off appreciation for what you have done and for what you and Stephanie both do. Enjoy it my friend." (Applause)

--

But the surprises were over yet. At least not for KC9RP. When the dinner prizes were drawn, the first out of the barrel was Hap Holly. And in addition to the Alinco H-T, Hap also took home a brand new Icom IC-V8000 two meter mobile and base radio.

So what about those who attended. What do they have to say. As everyone was heading out of the HARA Arena following the close of Hamvention 2002, Bob Sherman, K2SJP, summed it up best:

Bob Sherman K2SJP: "Its the best Hamvention that I have been to."
--

K2SJP says that he plans on coming back. Many others Amateur Radio Newsline spoke said the same thing. (ARNewsline™)

THAT FINAL ITEM: THE HAMVENTION THOUGHTS OF W6AQ

And finally this week, another look at Hamvention 2002. This time, through the eyes of a ham who has been to many of them. His name is Dave Bell. His call sign is W6AQ and as Hamvention 2002 was drawing to a close he shared his thoughts with our producer Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF:

--
Dave Bell W6AQ: "This was a great Hamvention. Except for the weather on Friday it was absolutely perfect.

Bill Pasternak WA6ITF: "What was the highlight to you?"

Dave Bell W6AQ: "I think that the highlight for me was the special ARRL dinner on Friday night for donors to the ARRL where we heard Joe Taylor, K1JT, give a really, really interesting talk. He has got a big sense of humor for a Nobel Prize winner, I must say."

Bill Pasternak WA6ITF: "We saw allot of new products here. Anything catch your eye?

Dave Bell W6AQ: "Actually the Yaesu FT-1000 Field I probably would have bought instead of the Mark V if it had come out at the same time. And I must say that getting an FT-817 little radio for under $500 broke my heart because I paid twice that."

Hamvention 2002 is now history, but Hamvention 2003 is now less than a year away. Dave Bell, W6AQ, says he plans to be there. So will we, and we hope to see you there too. (ARNewsline™)

FRS has been with us for a few years already with radios available that anyone could afford. How long will it be before FRS is totally overrun by nonsense, 20 to 30 years?

MURS activity in my area has dropped since it first became legal. I expect to hear a small increase in use when MURS specific radios become available but I don't expect to hear the armageddon that many are claiming.

Most who will be attracted to MURS will not want to put the effort into a monster station (which would do little good anyway.) If they want greater range they'll stick with their cell phones.

I have yet to hear an echo box on FRS.

Roger beeps were initiated by radio manufacturers, not users of FRS radios.

If you hear roger beeps on MURS you can thank the manufacturers.

The one real live problem I've heard about on MURS (as far as non-certified radios) was with Ham operators using their 2m radios on MURS.

The fox hunts will turn up some of their own people.

When is soon? CBers like to talk skip. Do you expect a particularly odd sun cycle that will allow skip on VHF?

The only people who will come close to causing problems on MURS are those who will pay less than $30 for their radio and those radios will not have the range to bother anyone.

Why would anyone give up all their high powered CB gear that talks all over the world for more expensive equipment that might possibly talk to the next town regardless of power?

CERTIFIED MAIL - RETURN RECEIPT REQUESTED

Roger L. Wiseman

[address]

Subject: Warning Notice: Amateur Radio License: KC8JBO

Dear Mr. Wiseman:

The Commission has monitoring evidence that you have been deliberately and maliciously interfering with the radio operations of other licensed Amateurs on the 14 MHz Amateur band. This interference has occurred at various times in the last several months and includes broadcasting music and other unidentified transmissions.

The Commission generally relies upon the Amateur Radio Service to be self-policing. Operation of the type described above is contrary to the basis and purpose of Amateur Radio and degrades the service for legitimate users. This serves as a Warning Notice that such operation will not be tolerated. Additional incidents of operation of the type described above will result in a monetary fine being levied against you and in revocation proceedings before an Administrative Law Judge.

You are requested to contact me at 717-338-2502 to discuss this matter.

Sincerely,

W. Riley Hollingsworth
Special Counsel, Amateur Radio Service
Enforcement Bureau

Stewart, I'll be dipped. You missed the point again. Too bad you were not (obviously) in NYC on 9/11. Go ahead, use your cell phone - IF you can. Amateur radio certainly can't provide the huge infrastructure that commercial concerns can, BUT ...

Beyond that, amateur radio SHOULD be about learning. I've tried to argue that what is being done at my employer's place for data collection is not the way to do it. I think I'll simply leave the latest issue of QST lying around the plant. Maybe someone will read the article on hidden packet stations and come to the realization that what I've been saying for two years is correct. This does relate to amateur radio - do you think we are all still using spark gap and cw or what? I've got news for you - things DO change, but PRINCIPALS and CONCEPTS still apply. 500 volts from that boat anchor can still kill you, despite the fact it was built 50 years ago. Internet, packet, amateur radio - they all have some common grounds. Allowing a CBer a 10,000 watt amplifier will only add to problems, not provide solutions. Your problem is very common - I see it at work every day. This is going to get REALLY funny. I can now retire (I hit 55 on the 21st). You see, many people at work have the same perceptions you do. Once my retirement papers are signed (which won't be for a few more years yet - I want more pension), I will be demonstrating an interesting program. I did it once before with the old Texas Instruments ladder controllers. I wanted to do it 6 years ago (but the young very important folks said - it won't work, you won't have all of the CPU instructions in it - listen to this, Bill Gates!). I can program any of the Allen-Bradley SLCs in under 15 minutes with nothing but the I/O listings. It will be far more efficient than the code they currently use (a 35 ms scan time will be brought down to well under 5 ms). Unfortunatly, I had to sign an agreement with my employer which forbids me to work for a competitor for 2 years - but this was done on MY computer AT HOME with MY software. It has been costing them over $200,000.00 per year for the last 5 years. I will demonstrate it. It will automatically place an OEM LOCK on the program in the controller at which point they can alway leave it in or put their old software back into the controller. My software has a copywrite. Tough ...

BWHAhahahahah

What is pointless is the attitude you and many others display. It is costing FAR more than you will ever have a clue.

Here's to 'pointless' amateur radio!

That was done years ago and we now have a legal service that will continue to operate with very few problems for years.

Additional channels are not needed and will probably not be needed for some time.

stewart,
The likelihood of more channels being added to FRS/MURS/GMRS is very small. If they turn into a 'FUBAR' like other services have, it's a more likely possibility that they will be deregulated and enforcement turned over to local government agencies. Come to think of it, with no license requirements for FRS, it already falls under PL-106-521. Oh ho!

Very true as long as the operator has a modicum of technical ubderstnding and/or an advisor/role model who does.

When the above folks are of the "I got more watts than you have" mindset, all bets are off.

It makes no sense to someone like us who has some technical background. It would appear to make a lot of sense to someone whose extent of technical knowlesge is limited to or focussed on figuring that 100 watts has GOT to be better than 4 watts because that's what happens on 11m and anyway it's more watts.

Consider that I do get greater range (can hit repeater or fixed stations further away) with my 50 w 2-m rig than when I crank it down to 10 watts. It almost makes the ",ore watts is better" argument.

I've been on 2-m proving that for the last 40 years.....

It all boils down to whether the use of amplifiers to increase the power output of a MURS or FRS station is legal.

It is not.

A regulatory policy decision, not a technical decision.

The reason is that The Congress does not want to fund the FCC field enforcement function at a proper level. Put the proper number of agents on the street (about 10-15 times what is there now is a good start) and nrvrddstu mstvchingotfrtd yo yhr Justice Department to stop kissing off such cases and you will see a marked difference/cleanup of all such problems.

The last people that the gov'mint would entrust backuo

Only if the emergency did not require ACTUAL communication. CBers with illegal amps have perfected the art of "one-way communication". Thier technology (if you can call it that) is all concentrated on one goal:
transmitting the loudest possible signal. The receiving side of the equation (DSP filters, narrow IF filters, audio passband filters, directional antennas, etc) is totally ignored because it isn't relevant to them.

Message-ID: <1Zel8.8315$jv5.1798580@typhoon.ne.ipsvc.net>

A story that is fiction because no ham cares about family:

A few weeks ago, I was shuffling toward the basement with a steaming cup of coffee in one hand and the morning paper in the other. I turned the dial up into the phone portion of the band on my ham radio in order to listen to a Saturday morning swap net. Along the way, I came across an older sounding chap, with a tremendous signal and a golden voice. He was telling whoever he was talking with something about "a thousand marbles."

I was intrigued and stopped to listen to what he had to say. "Well, Tom, it sure sounds like you're busy with your job. I'm sure they pay you well but it's a shame you have to be away from home and your family so much. Hard to believe a young fellow should have to work sixty or seventy hours a week to make ends meet. Too bad you missed your daughter's dance recital." He continued, "Let me tell you something Tom, something that has helped me keep a good perspective on my own priorities." And that's when he began to explain his theory of a "thousand marbles." "You see, I sat down one day and did a little arithmetic. The average person lives about seventy-five years. I know, some live more and some live less, but on average, folks live about seventy-five years. Now then, I multiplied 75 times 52 and I came up with 3900 which is the number of Saturdays that the average person has in their entire lifetime.

Now stick with me Tom, I'm getting to the important part. It took me until I was fifty-five years old to think about all this in any detail," he went on, "and by that time I had lived through over twenty-eight hundred Saturdays. I got to thinking that if I lived to be seventy-five, I only had about a thousand of them left to enjoy. So I went to a toy store and bought every single marble they had. I ended up having to visit three toy stores to roundup 1000 marbles. I took them home and put them inside of a large, clear plastic container right here in the shack next to my gear.

Every Saturday since then, I have taken one marble out and thrown it away. I found that by watching the marbles diminish, I focused more on the really important things in life. There is nothing like watching your time here on this earth run out to help get your priorities straight.

Now let me tell you one last thing before I sign-off with you and take my lovely wife out for breakfast. This morning, I took the very last marble out of the container. I figure if I make it until next Saturday then I have been given a little extra time. And the one thing we can all use is a little more time. It was nice to meet you Tom, I hope you spend more time with your family, and I hope to meet you again here on the band. 75 year Old Man, this is K9NZQ, clear and going QRT, good morning!"

You could have heard a pin drop on the band when this fellow signed off. I guess he gave us all a lot to think about. I had planned to work on the antenna that morning, and then I was going to meet up with a few hams to work on the next club newsletter. Instead, I went upstairs and woke my wife up with a kiss. "C'mon honey, I'm taking you and the kids to breakfast." "What brought this on?" she asked with a smile. "Oh, nothing special, it's just been a long time since we spent a Saturday together with the kids. Hey, can we stop at a toy store while we're out?
I need to buy some marbles."

We already had a "VX-5 Tea Party"... but now that all the old Part 90 radios have been made compliant - and all new radios only have to meet Part 95 regs - the citizenry has been appeased.

Yes - I think the "Boston Tea Party" analogy is a DAMN good one. I wouldn't look for anything else like this to happen for a couple more years, however. Right now, we are going to have to fill up the lower three MURS channels.

Could we see consumer MURS radios by THIS Christmas? I hope so - and I also hope they come with removable antennas(BNC connectors preferred).

I'd love to see a T7200 clone for MURS(with Wx), but with a BIG removable antenna, and FULL 2W TPO on all 5 channels. Even if it does cost $129 - I'd buy a pair... eventually the price will drop below $100 at Wal-Mart...

I don't - you misinterpreted the point of my post.

What I'm saying is that Amateur Radio has slowly become less relevant in the last 10 years, but the trend is accelerating. As this trend continues, the ARS is losing it's PURPOSE... this is especially true on the VHF/UHF bands, whose use has dwindled to the point that they are VIRTUALLY UNUSED. Even 2m has no more than modest activity - other than a few high-level repeaters, and an occasional simplex or packet QSO, or some folks doing EME... NADA.

Why not open up 1.25M for a new NoCode Novice Class? At least then we could start getting families/friends/collegues involved with Amateur Radio. Otherwise, why not just let the public use these frequencies?
They aren't being used for anything.

Good news, Stewart! I just checked, and 222-225MHz is open to NoCode licensees. I think it happened back in about 1991. And 219-220MHz is available for high speed data links up to 100KHz wide. Yes, to NoCode licensees. Go do something cool!

Amateur Radio has changed. That is a fact. The reason it changed, is that you can't build a radio cheaper than you can buy it.

All those Hams who could build a radio, are dead and gone.

What that leaves, is the Hams who like to interface things to a pre-built radio. There is a lot of experimentation and fun in doing those projects.

Radio is not the fascinating thing it was in the 60's and before.
Radio is boring since the invention of the CD. Not many people stay up all night to here a far away AM station like we did as kids.

Radio is an appliance to Americans, not as much a hobby anymore.

The numbers will never again reach what there was at the peak of Ham radio. The commercialization of RF to one or two companies in America will continue, and Ham radio will go to the same place that model railroaders, and slot car racing went.

Hobbies die, and people die. MURS is still-born.

Well, everything changes. Vinyl records are gone, but does it mean the music industry is gone? Are musicians gone? Likewise, amateur radio has changed, but it continues and is quite relevant today. If you understand packet, you won't have any problem understanding how many devices communicate (the first foreign language is difficult; others become easier). You mention the repeaters. Heck, we have a pack of 'em here in Rochester, NY. No, they aren't busy a good deal of the time (like at 3:00 am local time - but I've had interesting chats at those odd hours of the morning too, so they aren't dead even then). The purpose SHOULD be about learning. Just opening up frequencies for unlicensed use won't further learning. There are already a good number of frequencies for unlicensed use (even for wireless local area networks). One of the repeaters here locally is connected to several ports connecting 10, 6, and 2 meters as well as 220 and 440 MHz. I've had chats with stations in England and Australia over these (no, not internet linking - all rf paths courtesy of that 10 meter port). That said, this was just a simply recreation at the time. The learning is what pays off for everyone. Most hams have never been involved in an emergency. The point is that many are trained and could offer assistance if needed. I guess the best I can offer is this - hospitals have much more equipment and doctors available; therefore we should eliminate ambulances. Right? No, amateurs cannot compete with the huge infrastructure that commercial firms have provided (I've stated that earlier); but some communications are better than none. Don't bet the farm that adding another 10 million people using FRS, CB, MURS, or whatever else that doesn't require a license is likely to help in a real emergency where telephones and power are out for many miles around.

73 from Rochester, NY
Jim

ps - there are a ton of bands for codeless techs. That is fine. If you suggest they should be open license free, then recheck this post.

That doesn't match my experience.

I've powered an 100-watt HF transceiver, a 25-watt VHF transceiver, and an AM/FM receiver (for easy listening), plus occasionally even the lights (when the mains are off) in my shack for over 25 years using stock lead-acid batteries from my local discount store. They last about as long (3-5 years) in my "shack" as they do in my automobiles.

People who died 10 years ago, are still listed as Hams.
Don't believe the numbers.

The other statistic tool you must know about, is per-Capita. That is, how many Hams per 100,000 Americans in age groups like 9-12, 13-16, 17-20, 21-30, 31-40, 41-50, 51-60, 61-70, 71-80?

Have those gone up? No, they've gone down.

Don't know about slot cars, but model railroading is alive and well.
They have new technology, called "DCC", where each locomotive has an addressable decoder and you have handheld controllers to control individual trains anywhere on the layout. Some of these handhelds use a radio link instead of a wired link. Frequency around 900MHz.

Four clubs to which I belong (W0EF, K0RT, W0YC, and W0TDX) use 1.25M for extensive digital and analog links for contesting/DX packet clusters, and remote receiver and crossband 2M/75CM repeater links. Additionally, several 1.25M repeater pairs are very popular in our area. I notice that there are at least a couple dozen 1.25M repeaters in San Diego county. And In case you missed it, Amateur Radio is in fact "public use" of these frequencies.

I have no way of knowing about your military record, only by what you say. And I have no reason to doubt it. Your knowledge of AF Communications is extensive. Over the period of time you and I were friendly we discussed it a bit.

Another thing of note....anyone who has been in the military can easly recognize another member or ex member. We talk in a certain way, and phrase things in a certain way. Even some words will stand out.

Lllllooooyyyyyddd has none of the above.

Hi,

Maybe because they are very cheap? Here a new 12V 45 AH 'car' battery costs about 24 euros (~22 US$). A 12 V 7AH gel 'alarm' battery costs approx the same. A 12V 35AH gel type is >120 euros (>110 US$). Surely the gel type will be much more adapted to deep cycle conditions, but the price difference more than compensates for it. Of course, car batteries are much heavier, bulky and inconvenient to work with, but, if you have the place to put them, I think they are better.

I do not know the prices of marine / golf / etc batteries, but given the equation "price = K / popularity" (where K tends to large numbers) I think they must also be quite expensive.

FOR SALE: EICO model 460 5" scope. Excellent physical condx, unmodified. This item is part of an estate our group is helping to liquidate therefore have not tested it as do not care to get involved in giving warranties, etc. In the worse case, it is 100% restorable. All controls turn freely. Has all tubes.
No dings, knicks, dents, etc. in case. Going for the best reasonable offer plus shipping.
No charge for packing and hauling to UPS/PO unless we can't find a box then the cost of the box would be extra. Shipping from central Florida.

I don't know if you really have anything to say, Roger. You didn't even allow the death of your mother in mid-April (published in the Moundsville Echo) to slow your torrent of filth. If you'd like to continue those of your sociopathic rants about me or my wife, I'll be happy to speak with Chief Stenger about you once again (as I cautioned you when we met face-to-face at the March meeting of Marshall County ARES). As you know, he has seen the posts you've made to and about me and my wife in the past and he seemed well aware of you.

quite sincerely,

Not at all rare.

The typical "maintenance free" lead acid is not sealed and will spill in some positions, and they do vent under hard charging.

The true sealed lead-acid can be operated in any position (will not leak) and does not vent unless severely abused (venting is a last chance method to avoid a case rupture, similar to nicd/nimh).

I have only seen two technology types of sealed lead-acids. The gelled electrolyte type is by far the most common. The other is the starved electrolyte, typified by the Absorbed Glass Mat (AGM) batteries like the Optima yellow or red top or the exide "6 pack".

The gelled cells are a fraction of the price of AGM cells. They are found in alarm equipment, "portable jump start" power packs, children's rechargable riding toys, emergency lighting, rechargable lawn and garden equipment, consumer computer UPS systems, etc. In other words, nearly everyplace which needs higher capacity than a small nicd pack, and where the weight of lead-acid is tolerable.

The typical yeasu 12v/7ah/$20 "brick" is a gelled electrolyte, and probably the single most common sealed lead acid battery in the US.

> assume that the Mendelsons "gel cells" have liquid electrolyte, not

I wouldn't. But $16 is a very good price for new 12v/17ah gelled...

I hear this typical "garbage" from CBers all the time, Hams operating out of band. However where are all of those so called "Hams" operating out of band, and getting busted? I see far more CBers getting busted for freebanding, and running power. In fact several CBers have said they even heard me ID on the freeband using my Ham Callsign. Since I never operate there it's clear to me that somebody was bootlegging on HF using my call. Then to claim same instance as "proof positive" that Hams operate out of band, stupidly ID'ing themselves, does not persuade me in the least. Any further argument runs into the same problem, just because somebody hears a Ham callsign, does not imply it belongs to the person using it on the air. So until somebody can provide proof positive the accusation is basically BS.

The idea that Hams would limit themselves to 2 watts on five frequencies on MURS, compared with up to 1500 watts over 4 MHz on 2m, is so ridiculous as to not even be worthy of serious consideration.

Ah. That explains the low price. :(

If sitting for four years, I'd expect them to be almost but not quite useless because of extreme sulfation. A couple more years of sitting and that would be the end of them. A year or two ago I purchased a UPS "new in box" which had been sitting since 1994. It contained four, 6v/4ah gell cells. Of those four batts, three of them would not charge above a fraction of a volt. the fourth charges to about 2.1v, with nearly 0Ah capacity.

I sure hope the Mendelson batts are better...

Of course you may be able to recover the sulfated batts, but I'm skeptical. http://www.shaka.com/~kalepa/desulf.htm

At McDill AFB, Wogie was known as a "bitch & bitch man." Little Wogie would go to the club after cleaning latrines all day and bitch about the sergeant who assigned Wogie to latrine cleaning duty.
After two beers, Wogie would put the make on the ugliest WAF in the club, whereupon the bitch would shoot Wogie down. Wogie would then go back to the dorm and pass out, while everyone at the club would break into peels of laughter about the "bitch & bitch man."

It would seem ridiculous to limit themselves to 2 watts on MURS, they were running well in excess of 2 watts on MURS.

=========
1) As Roy Llewallen commented in an earlier posting ,a Sealed Lead Acid (SLA) battery is not necessarily a Gel- type.

2) An SLA 12v-18Ah costs approx US$ 25.- (in the USA)
In the UK ,Mainline Surplus -Leicester sell SLA 12V- 18Ah ,make Kiel (New Old Stock) for GBP 12.50 incl VAT= Value Added Tax) equiv to approx US $ 19.-
I have quite a number of these in the shack and am quite happy with them.

For golfers in the UK : This battery is very suitable for an electric golf trolly. I recently replaced a Yuasa model: NPC15-12 , 12V-15Ah SLA which had been rather active for the past 3 years ,by the above make Kiel battery having identical dimensions . The old Yuasu battery has been retired to the shack where it still performs well be it on loads somewhat lower than a golf trolly motor .

3) The 'cheap' car batteries referred to in the above posting might not be the sealed type .In that case it would not be advisable to have them located in the shack , for safety reasons ....because of hydrogen/oxygen venting. Venting batteries with removable caps for water top-up must be located in a well ventilated area !!

We can thank the broadcast industry who found ways to drop in local more reliable and therefore do not need to go off the air on Sunday nights for "maintenance".

Hello,

I was just curious if anyone has had any experience doing maintenance on there antenna tower using one of those "Buckets" that you rent that looks like a trailer.

Are they stable enough for someone of 260 lbs to go up to say 25 feet or so to get up to the boom of your antennas, etc.

Would also like to know the cost ?

Is this something that you should get a bunch of hams together that need to do work, and rent it and share the expense, or is it something you can pickup and return at a reasonable cost.

Thanks..

I tried Bicycle Mobile for the first time on Saturday. It was great..

I tried it with an old dual band HT and a standard speaker/mike.

My local cycling club is having a ride this weekend (June 2nd). I'm likely going to be on the road 4ish hours..

The feedback I received on Saturday lead me to believe the standard speaker/mike was not a good solution..

Two questions that I'd like to get some advice on:

1) What (headset/earpiece) / mike solution works best for Bicycle Mobile?

2) What dual band HT give the best mix of reliability, power and battery life?

Any input would be appreciated..

There's a whole WORLD of things you don't know, ASSHOLE. In fact by the expression on your gorilla-like face, It'd be hard to believe that you know anything.
Funny, the First amendment allows me to have the opinion that you are a narrow-minded, stupid son of a bitch. See you engage in the very same tactics you say I use with Jim here.

For instance, did you get touch with Carl Stevenson's local police, too?

I dunno, Paul. The thread started about how great MURS is. How is MURS more relevent than amateur radio? As far as your per-captia stats, you might have a point. U.S. colleges are graduating more and more foreign engineers and doctors than ever. You may have a valid point. I wouldn't be surprised to find the U.S. an also-ran 3rd world country in another 25 or 30 years. Everyone wants an MBA. Read Dilbert. It is one comic strip worth reading. Don't worry - Japan will design and build all the FRS, cell phones, stereos, and televisions you want. (oops, make that design. I forgot. The little dragon is building the stuff now - at least the stuff that China isn't.)

Ex-militia leader pleads guilty
Charlie Puckett admits 3 charges; 7 others dropped By Louise Taylor
KENTUCKY HERALD-LEADER STAFF WRITER

In an abrupt turnaround from his previous feisty rhetoric, former Kentucky Militia leader Charlie Puckett pleaded guilty yesterday to three of the 10 federal charges against him and agreed to a sentence that could stretch to just over three years.

Specifically, Puckett, 55, admitted that he:

. had tried in early March to intimidate an unidentified witness against him;

. illegally altered a gun to make it a fully automatic SKS machine gun; and . was a felon illegally in possession of a pistol.

"Are you pleading guilty because you are guilty and not for other reasons?" U.S. District Court Judge Jennifer B. Coffman asked Puckett.

"Yes, ma'am," Puckett replied.

The remaining charges, having to do with possession of pipe bombs, mines and ammunition, will be dropped at his sentencing Aug. 29, said Puckett's attorney, Gatewood Galbraith. Puckett also has to forfeit an arsenal the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms seized from his Garrard County house last year.

Puckett was to go on trial Tuesday.

"It was a decent deal," Galbraith said. "He was looking at 10 years if he went to trial, and Charlie's just not built for that kind of time." Under the plea agreement, Puckett will serve between 30 and 37 months in prison. He could also face a fine of up to $250,000.

Coffman's pretrial rulings in the case and the possible shakiness of a key defense witness helped persuade Puckett that the plea deal was to his advantage, Galbraith said. Without the witness, he said Puckett "was going to be left without a defense." Coffman noted that the plea seemed a relief to Puckett. "You're more relaxed than I've seen you before, Mr. Puckett," she said, smiling from the bench.

Puckett -- who the ATF says told a call-in radio show in 2000 that Coffman was a know-nothing who had illegally ordered the Ten Commandments removed from the McCreary County courthouse -- grinned widely and silently nodded his agreement.

"Once he made the decision, you could tell it was a great burden off his shoulders," Galbraith said later. "Mr. Puckett is a simple man. He's a mechanic and a family man. ... Once he became a figurehead for the Kentucky Militia, it became burdensome. He is just not a political animal." Puckett, who has been the commander and self-described brigadier general of the Kentucky Militia -- a paramilitary group that experts think is among the most active in the country -- has completely cut his ties with the group, Galbraith said.

Puckett was indicted in February, a few months after ATF agents raided his Garrard County home and found almost 35,000 rounds of ammunition, pipe bombs, guns and The Anarchist's Cookbook, a how-to manual for domestic terrorism. Puckett never shied from his dislike of the ATF, and posted a sign near his driveway that announced "ATF Don't Cross This Line" above a hangman's noose hanging from a tree.

The ATF was led to Puckett while searching for Stephen Anderson, a former Kentucky Militia member who was accused of shooting up a Bell County deputy sheriff's cruiser in October, then disappeared. Anderson has not been found, despite a $20,000 reward offered by the ATF.

After the indictment was issued in February, Puckett was placed on house arrest, but in March he slipped his electronic monitoring bracelet and was on the lam for about three weeks before he voluntarily turned himself in to Jessamine County Sheriff Joe Walker. Puckett has argued that he was allowed to own firearms because the federal law that prohibits felons from gun ownership was not enacted until 1968, two years after his felony conviction for breaking into a Virginia store.

He also has several misdemeanor convictions in Virginia and Kentucky, including indecent exposure and disorderly conduct, all dating from the 1960s and '70s, according to the ATF. The ATF sworn statement says that after one disorderly-conduct arrest in Versailles in 1972, Puckett was referred to psychiatrists at the University of Kentucky. That arrest was his last before the federal charges this year.

-------- cut - end of article ------

Note: It is suspected but not confirmed, that Puckett was the person who would check into a now-defunct ham radio militia net on the 75 Meter SSB ham band using the call name "Wolfman Jack".

Well I have seen hams use out of band freqs, 151.055, 451.1875.... not just heard, but seen. Don't for a minute think that hams don't go out of bandm they do it all the time, for various "reasons". Threy don;t get busted, cuz they don;'t cause interference, they run open pl, and aren't running dirty amps.

I hear this typical "garbage" from CBers all the time, Hams operating out of band. However where are all of those so called "Hams" operating out of band, and getting busted? I see far more CBers getting busted for freebanding, and running power. In fact several CBers have said they even heard me ID on the freeband using my Ham Callsign. Since I never operate there it's clear to me that somebody was bootlegging on HF using my call. Then to claim same instance as "proof positive" that Hams operate out of band, stupidly ID'ing themselves, does not persuade me in the least. Any further argument runs into the same problem, just because somebody hears a Ham callsign, does not imply it belongs to the person using it on the air. So until somebody can provide proof positive the accusation is basically BS.

The idea that Hams would limit themselves to 2 watts on five frequencies on MURS, compared with up to 1500 watts over 4 MHz on 2m, is so ridiculous as to not even be worthy of serious consideration.

As usual, I've got a lot to learn. What I've seen overwhelmingly at flea markets, electronics stores, and places like EH Yost are Panasonic SLA batteries. These are of the absorbed electrolyte type, in which the liquid electrolyte is absorbed into the plates and separators. http://www.panasonic.com/industrial/battery/oem/images/pdf/slaover.pdf discribes these units. In second place for the number of batteries I've seen for sale are the small Yuasa SLA batteries. I couldn't find a description of the electrolyte system in a quick search of the web, but an old data sheet I have describes the system as "suspended electrolyte". I've assumed that these are also AGM type, but perhaps I'm wrong.

I couldn't find any reference to Yaesu batteries. Perhaps you mean Yuasa. But I couldn't find a 17 Ah battery among their offerings. Do you have the part number of this apparently very common battery? I'd like to look at a data sheet to learn more about it.

Well I'd like to ask all you battery gurus, what type battery is in my apc computer backup box? I think it must be a GELCELL type. If so how long do that hold up in that type of service.
I use mine to backup a thing called "ram-link" which contains my operating system 16 megs worth of data. It only draws about
.5 amp or less and must have power on it 24/7 or the system is lost and has to be restored (time consuming)!.
It went for about 3 years and handled power outages of up to 5 or 6 hours without a problem. Lately (this past year) it seems to nose dive or something when I'm not watching it and I guess the internal battery is not charging fully or the battery is slowly ageing or both.

This is something illusory that I suspect will slowly disappear.
People forget the time value of money. Yeah, sure, they'll earn an extra $20 here or $30 there --but how much did they shell out to get that money? And what about the botched sales where they end up taking a loss?

It may be true that the true flea market nature of Dayton and other hamfests may slowly attenuate as time goes on. Further, as people get burned more and more on E-Bay, I think that flea-markets will go up in price because you can see and poke at the things people are selling while E-Bay's prices will go down some. At a flea market you can actually see what you're buying and you can pay for it and carry it away on the spot.

And by the way, hamfests are not just about flea markets. Yes, that's a big part of them. However, there are still symposia, VEC testing, socializing, and yes, even operating various radios and the like.

NOW AVAILABLE "DIPCAGE1.exe"

RESONANT LENGTH, END-EFFECT, BANDWIDTH, INPUT RESISTANCE OF 1/2-WAVE DIPOLE.

This is a little more accurate version of WIRECAGE.exe which it replaces. It may be found easier to understand and use. It computes the resonant length, end-effect, bandwidth versus various SWR points, receiving 3dB bandwidth, center feedpoint input resistance at resonance, etc. Input resistance values are somewhat smaller than usually stated but this is not of great consequence since in practice there are a number of sources of uncertainty affecting this non-critical parameter.

The dipole conductor may be any wire gauge, rod or tube, or a cylindrical cage of any number of wires. The usual facilities are available to vary antenna dimensions and number of wires in small increments while observing computed output values.

This program is more of educational than practical value since it will be seen that at HF the trouble and expense of increasing antenna diameter is not justified by the trivial improvement in bandwidth which might be obtained.

DIPCAGE1 is contained in one 36.5 KiloBytes file. Download from website below in a few seconds. No unzipping inconvenience. Run immediately. Or it can be run without downloading.

I've been using them for nearly 15 years here and no problems. Car batteries hold up fine as long as you don't overcharge them, don't let them discharge too far, and keep the water up in them. But I do prefer a marine deep cycle if I had my choice as their design suits radio use better. But a car battery will work just fine. I'm running a 706 on one right now. I use a fully automatic charger to keep the charge up, but a trickle charge will work fine as long as you remember to unhook it when you have a full charge. Heavily discharging a car battery will greatly shorten it's life and capacity. All long as you avoid that, you won't have much trouble. A deep cycle can handle heavy discharges better, but even with those it's best not to heavily discharge them. I never heavily discharge any of those lead acid batteries on purpose. Sometimes it'll happen though out portable etc. If I buy a new battery just for radio use, I get the big marine deep cycles. MK

I am looking for the stand off that mounts at the top of each tower section of a Hygain or Triex crankup tower. Stand off is galvanized with 1 U-Bolt for attachment to tower, and it is an angle or tubular rod to a V on the end to attach coax.
If you have one in good condition please let me know what you want for it.

I ordered one on the Hygain website this weekend, to later find out that Hygain or (MFJ, Ameritron, Vectronics, etc..) does not have these items to sell. They don't even have the towers, yet they will be glad to process your transaction to your credit card for something they don't have. There representative had no idea this was on the internet, and they said it may be a few years before Hygain will be selling towers again.
I sure saw one at Dayton with antennas on it !

Please send email to laborkei at hotmail dot com

5509. Debunking the MURS/GMRS/FRS Amplifier Myth

Newsgroup: rec.radio.amateur.misc
Date: 2002-05-29 00:16:40 UTC
From: horseshoe7@yahoo.com Message-ID: <5f4fe4c2.0205281616.4a5ccf0@posting.google.com>
Source record: 76901
Cross-posted to: alt.radio.family,rec.radio.amateur.policy,rec.radio.amateur.digital.misc,rec.radio.cb,rec.radio.amateur.misc

Like any of the classic urban legands - LSD tattoos, Kidney theft, Alligators in the sewers - the GMRS/FRS/MURS high-power amplifier myth just keeps making the rounds...

http://www.urbanlegends.com/

The myth - spread by hams having a strong "radio cop" slant - has absolutely no basis in fact. The motivation for spreading the rumor is somewhat complex - but, the main motivation appears be to maintain some kind of "superiority complex" these hams harbor over "CB users".
A secondary motivation seems to be to stop the growth of these wildly-popular radio services - as ham VHF/UHF usage has continued to decline in recent years, these services are rapidly growing in popularity.

There has never been a reported violation involving amplifiers on any of these VHF/UHF frequencies; and, the fact is, there is simply no real motivation for the average person to use amplifiers on these frequencies.

THE BASIS FOR THE LEGEND:

Illegal amplifier use on 11m CB frequencies has been an ongoing problem for many years. However, the dynamics of radio wave propagation on HF CB vs. VHF MURS or UHF FRS/GMRS are quite different.
Sky wave, or "skip" propagation is commonplace on HF frequencies. To take advantage of this propagation requires running more than the legally-allowed 4W output allowed on 11m CB... as a result, many truckers(and other citizens) have resorted to using illegal amplifiers to raise the output of their radio stations to outrageosly-high values; 500, 1000, 1500, even 2000 Watt amplifier use is commonplace - allowing these individuals to communicate great distances(sometimes 1,000s of miles when the "skip is in"). A side result of this "culture", has been that these individuals resort to a kind of "entertainment" by jamming smaller-powered stations ("squashing") when the "skip is out".

However, on VHF/UHF frequencies, greater than Line of Sight(LOS) propagation is a fairly rare occurrance - so there is no initial motivation for an average individual to run a high-powered amplifier on these frequencies.

The fact that there has never been any direct proof of individuals running amplifiers on these frquencies, seems to be of no consequence to the professors of this urban legend. They will come up with all kinds of contorted reasons why "The end is near", and "widespread amplifier use on these frequencies is just a matter of time". Of course, these are the same arguments these individuals have been making for YEARS, and still - as there are no alligators in the sewers, there are no high-powered amplifiers on GMRS/FRS/MURS.

I've been monitoring all 5 MURS frequencies for some time now mobile. All I have ever heard is the typical business junk and fast food drive through order windows with just one single exception. I hear low power 1.2KBS FSK packet activity on 151.880 MHz around the Square Lake and Interstate 75 junction in the city of Troy Michigain. Once you get more that a mile or two from that area the signal drops from a S9+20 to almost nothing. A high power signal this is not. And this is in a metro area of several million people with a good percentage of active Hams. So if what you say is true then I should have picked up more that one lousy low power packet station in the last year I have been monitoring, particulary given the size of the Detroit area.

And some of them may in fact be legitimate depending on the Ham. Some do have license privileges to transmit on other than the Ham Bands. In one case I remember seeing a Royal Oak city cop, in full uniform with side arm, sitting at a table in a small restaurant on Woodward Avenue with a very plainly obvious Yeasu HT. His heavy duty Motorola radio was nowhere to be seen. Was he a Ham? I don't know because I didn't ask, and I didn't see him making a transmissions with it while I was there to check for a callsign.

It is not "VIRTUALLY USELESS". For operating well beyond the LOS for two stations it would be true most of the time. However for two stations within LOS of each other it is not. One of the factors is the about of ground clutter between them, and how much of the RF power is either reflected off in to space or absorbed. The only other way to beat path loss, while using the same rigs, other than antenna gain, is to boost TX power, thus the market for V/UHF amplifiers. Think about it the next time your cell phone will not connect while inside of the big department store or a customer's factory location etc.

I make my own, it's very easy to do and it also allows to attach a pulley on the opposite side for raising dipoles.

I bought (3) three foot 1" square steel tubing pieces from the local hardware store, along with three 3" "U" bolts, and three 2" bolt mounted pulleys. Drill the tubing for a "U" bolt on one end, and mount a pulley on the other. Then center the tubing against the top flat strap on each tower section and drill two holes through the tubing and the section top strap. Bolt it down, and you're done.

If you attach the coax only at the top standoff, and let it float in the "U" bolts on the other standoffs and it will go up and down with the tower and coil up nicely at the bottom of the tower, rather than having big loops of coax at each section when the tower is lowered. Also, you have 3 easy attachment points for wire antennas on the other ends.

Total cost was about $20.00 and 1/2 an hour to put them together...

I don't believe that 73 has ever had a website. I remember Wayne giving some reason some years back for not having one. I myself haven't seen the magazine in a few years, when they cut back on newsstand distribution.

A websearch turns up a former columnist's webpage, that gives this contact information:

73 Amateur Radio Today Magazine
70 Route 202 North Peterborough, NH 03458-1107

Tel: 603-924-0058
FAX: 603-924-8613

e-mail: design73 @aol.com

http://www.waynegreen.com/wayne/

(I thought the magazine had moved out of Peterborough proper?)

It looks like the page was last changed a year ago, so perhaps the contact information is out of date.

That URL does get you to some writing by Wayne, but I don't see any specific info about the magazine (you might look further youreself). I had a URL for Wayne, maybe it was given out one time when he was on the Art Bell show, and it was a page off a related business; going there now, it links to the above URL.

This one gives different contact information:
http://www.waynegreen.com/wayne/order.html and of course, it seems to be Wayne's personal stuff, rather than the magazine.

I think that's the best you will come up with. I gather, from a recent thread, that the magazine is still publishing.
I have mixed feelings about that, since the last time I saw it, it had withered considerably, yet at one time it was a great magazine, yet different from QST and Ham Radio.

Good grief, Stewart. One begins to wonder exactly what you are trying to promote. I've run phone patches from Guam to Webster, NY, running only 15 watts! I've gotten into a cw net thousands of miles away - running MILLIWATTS. Power is needed in VHF/UHF for some of the more exotic modes. Meteor trails, moonbounce, some scatter work ... heck, with my 6 double a alkalines, I can open repeaters close to 100 miles away (well, one that is high - and that is when I'm up on the 23rd floor of an apartment complex, but you get the idea). Problems happen when unknowlegable folks apply the golden screwdriver. I've seen posts which state you only have to turn a pot to make your FRS radio 'louder'. I doubt going into deviation and descriminators would help as it is likely over that user's head. Believe me, I've had a lot of fun back in the early 70s with CB. The urban legends usually circulate amongst those who don't know enough technology to know when something is simply not true. I saw a post perhaps not a week ago on a board from someone looking for a mod for a radio. Another guy posted a link to a website with the mod. Sure enough, TWO DAYS LATER, the first guy posts again with the subject 'HELP'. Seems he let the smoke out of the components. Seems the radio is stuck on 28.500, won't transmit, and squeals when the audio gain is turned up. You seem to think the amateurs are putting people down. The problem is that some folks are being led into things that they know nothing about - and it shows when some 27 MHz signals are 50 KHz wide. Unless you are working moonbounce, a 3 dB signal gain or loss won't usually amount to anything - yet people mod their rigs to try and get that 3 dB extra, which is usually spread where they don't want it. My guess is that the majority of amateurs are running 150 watts or less. The large majority. And working stations worldwide every day. Why do you think one necessarily needs a linear? Sure, the big gun DXCC guys run 'em (often with a mentality that is similar to yours), but most don't honestly need 'em. Besides, going from a ground mounted vertical to a 3 element beam up 60 feet will often gain you as much or more than increasing from 100 to 1000 watts and cost less.

Roger is quite obviously disturbed. Why else would he be posting such juvenile, filthy diatribes? I have often thought that his posts sounded rather like an immature 17 year old, what with the incessant filth. This is not the mark of a mature person.
Note, too, that he seems to be extremely well versed in this filthy jargon. I suspect that Roger has read many, many perverted adult books wherein this kind of terminology is used. He has apparently done so with quite a bit of regularity since these terms seem to roll off his tongue with such ease and expertise.
I suspect he reads this kind of trash because he finds it sexually stimulating and uses it as a precursor to self-gratification. Such is Roger's fantasyland in a real world he is ill-equipped to deal with.

I know the fellow. He wasn't jerking anyone's chain. He was a bit upset by their arrogance, not really caring if anyone found out who they were.

Sure, if VHF had skip. I have not heard any high powered MURS stations anywhere between Everett and Seattle WA.

If you'd like to chat with your high powered buddies on MURS you might take a little trip to Billerica, MA. Sounds like it would be an easy fox hunt, well, more like an elephant hunt.

Isn't it just TERRIBLE! People are starting to communicate all OVER the place. We can't have THAT now, can we? Better start a rumour on the Internet, right away! We need to get this evil GMRS/FRS thing BANNED!!

NOW - THE REAL REASON FOR THESE SMOKESCREENS:

Having failed in their attempts to assert the URBAN MYTH that high-powered AMPS are being used on MURS/GMRS/FRS, these ham "Internet Lobbyists" are now trying this NEW TACTIC to divert attention from the fact that the ham VHF/UHF bands are VIRTUALLY UNUSED - and that FRS/GMRS/MURS are runaway success stories in public communications.

PSSSTTT!!! Don't look now - but the ham 1.25M band has FALLEN SILENT... go ahead, scan it for activity sometime - THERE ISN'T ANY!
... and sales of radios for the 222Mhz band have all but dried up.

... what to do? WHAT TO DO?! Let's start another rumour - there are CHILD MOLESTERS on FRS!! That's it! We need to BAN FRS, because the Catholic Priest Radio Club has infiltrated FRS with GMRS bubble-pack
radios!

Just like the CW code speed reduction idea, eh?

As I recall, you LOST that one BIG TIME... and you'll LOSE this one eventually, too.

Yes - eventually the ARRL and the FCC will see the obvious - it is only a matter of time. You can try to slow down progress - but EVENTUALLY it will catch up to you and pass you by.

Tell me - why do you do it? Why do you fight progress? Go back and think about all the arguments you made fighting the code speed reduction - they are the same ones you'll make against opening up 1.25M to a new Novice Class. It's been quite a long time now since restructuring, and NONE of the bad and evil things you predicted have come true. Why are you so NEGATIVE? Don't you have ANY faith in your fellow Americans?

The discussion was really about "high-powered amps"; it is VITUALLY USELESS to use high-powered amplifiers(>75W) in the context of LOS MURS. Rather than restating the whole premise in each and every post
- I've posted the entire premise in another thread... the point is - people simply haven't been using these amps on UHF GMRS/FRS or VHF Itinerants in all the years of the existance of these services - why all of a sudden would anyone think they are going to start to use them now?

Dan,

Replies below.

> Just earned my tech plus and general within two weeks of each other.

Congrats in the new license!

I'm interested in buying a 10 meter mobile that I'm planning to > use on the road and at home.

OK, but ten meters is going to be a dead band for the most part very soon.

> 1)Is this a good choice for a beginner?

Not really, Dan. Look around and you can find used multi-band HF rigs for about the same cost as a ten-meter only mobile rig. If you can swing 600-800 dollars new HF rigs can be purchased.

> 2)Will I be able to do some decent dx with say.. 25 - 30 watts ssb?

Yes, but again, due to the diminishing sunspot activity, ten is going to be quiet for months at a time. I would hate for you to become disappointed and quit because you never heard anyone on!

>3)Is 10 meter still a popular band?

Yes, but again, if the sunspots are not cooperating it can be very quiet! Please expand your horizons a bit and consider a real HF rig. That way, if ten and fifteen are dead, you can always go down. Twenty will always be open to someplace. Forty is always good for a chat, as is 80, especially at night. Don't limit yourself to any single band, and forget about QRP until you have sharpened your operating skills. Use a normal 100 watts or so, at least in the beginning.
This will ensure that you will make some contacts and not get disappointed.

73 for now, and again congratulations on that new ticket!

Why not go fo a Yaesu FT 100-D? It has variable power output. 10 meter is an excellent band for DX. There is even a club, Ten-Ten International that promotes the band.

stewart,
It's not progress you're talking about, it's only change. Change, just for the sake of change is one of the stupidest ideas going. If your ideas had any merit, that would be different, but they don't.
As to the code speed reduction, how would you possibly know what my feelings are about it? I've never expressed them to you, or this NG. If you knew what they were/are, it might suprise you.
And what new 'novice' class are you talking about?
The one you proposed which was rejected, or did something happen and no one told me about it? I think you're mixing fantasy with reality Stew.
Do I have faith in my fellow Americans? Yes I do, but what has that got to do with what we're discussing? Just more 'smoke', and trying to focus on a totally unrelated topic. You've really got that 'politician two-step' down almost pat!

Hi Dan,
I hope the information contained in this reply is helpful to you.
First, CONGRATULATIONS !! on you GENERAL.
10 Meters is a great band, always has been and always will be.
Lately 10 meters has been up and down with the band being open, when it is open you can work the world and is about the greatest band there is.
Having a 10 Mtr. mobile gives you the flexibility to do a little mountain toppingtopping. I see you are in Bristol PA, I do not know if you have some very high areas in that area but if you do... drive up to the highest point one day and start calling CQ or just scan through the frequency. 10 Mtrs. also has an FM repeater which is great to monitor and be active on too. Check the repeater directory for a 28
Mhz. repeater in your area.
Radio Shack makes a very nice 10 Mtr. radio. There are 10 mtr. mobiles which have a (Roger Beep).. a small tone after your transmission... I would not use this feature personally, you will find a lot of other hams do not like to hear this roger beep for reasons being it reminds them of CB'ers with echo mic's and all that other happy junk. If you are calling CQ with a (roger beep) activated you will more than likely be turning away some nice DX contacts. Do not worry about the power (Watts) 50 watts is perfectly fine. 25 watts/20/15/10 is perfectly fine also when the band is open. You have probably heard of QRP (Low Power) some hams run QRP and make amazing DX contacts on 3 watts !!!
I would suggest checking out Ebay in the ham section. There is a ton of ham equipment there and you can usually find what you are looking for and save some money too. If you do not know of Ebay send me an email and I will fill you in on some very helpful information if you are a new buyer.
Good Luck with the search of you "Dream Radio" and again
CONGRATULATIONS with you GENERAL CLASS LICENSE.

I couldn't dissagree more, , , , , ,

I have bought several radios on Ebay at prices that would blow your mind. How about a IC-751 for $300 bucks? Works and looks like new.
I also bought an IC-=735 a year ago for $500, and it also was like new. Yes, I had some minor problems when I first started using Ebay, but you just have to learn the ways of bidding.

MY complaint with "new" radios is that the damn knobs are too small, they seem to be built for midgets and children.

Anyway, Ebay is for INTELLIGENT buyers and can give some trerriffic buys , , , , ,Just don't let the price get away from you. I find that it is better to snipe. My 10 second bids have almost always won. and I never, never, ever, raise my maximum spending amount.

You might do a web search for "T-E Systems."

They make high power amps for VHF/UHF ham applications. They may have an amp for the 450 MHz FM ham band that makes that much power and only requires a few watts of drive power. Hopefully you have an early FRS radio that had the potential to make more than 3/4 of a watt. If not, you'll have to start with a low power amp, see what the output is, and then buy a suitable high-power amp designed to deal with the amount of drive power that the low-power amp produces.

Good luck.

But it does have a basis in history, and human nature, together with a declining morality standard, and a general "up yours" attitude.

And how does one do that? Whether or not one operator is "superior" to another would be easy to discern based on their overall achievements and their dedication to their respective service. One does not need to promote a superior attitude. The facts will speak for themselves.

Why would hams want to purposely halt the growth of another radio service? For what gain? As a radio hobbyist, I welcome any and all outlets for experimenting.

How about the "entertainment" that you spoke of, of "squashing" other stations? How about for inproving their distance? How about the same motivation that pushed most high powered Cbers, and that is the "king of the hill" syndrome?

So you think that "skip" is the sole reason that CBers run amps? You obviously haven't spent much time on CB in the last 20 years. When the "skip" is running, you can work the world with 10 watts. If the skip isn't running, you can't work the next state with 5,000 watts. (Unless, of course, the next state is less than 150 miles away).

I'll give you a clue. Amp usage on CB is about two things, either being heard above the next guy, or preventing the next guy from overrunning you. It's nothing more than a competitive spirit gone horribly wrong, and there's no evidence to suggest that this same attitude would not cross over to any other band available to these same undisciplined people.

A "side" result? I'd say that this is probably 50% of the activity on CB during any given day. Just listen to Channel 6.

Sure there is. The attitude of being the big dog on the block is still as strong on 154 Mhz, as it is on 27.

One other thing is needed for this to happen; popularity. And then there has to be someone willing to market these accessories to the people that want them. FRS has deliberately been manufactured and marketed to discourage amp usage, or modifications in general. MURS is still a service in its infancy. It hasn't really caught on yet with the yahoo crowd. As long as there is activity on 11 meter CB, what is the incentive to move to MURS?

As long as these VHF/UHF services are marketed as short range, mostly handheld units, there will be little incentive for the "big guns" to set up shop. But give it time. Start offering fancy radios, cheaply, with lots of knobs and gadgets, and billy bob will be on those bands eventually.

Well, if you think about it, it just makes sense to do it that way. You are creating a service for non-technical people (as evidenced by the non-license requirement), and yet expect them to calculate their transmit power plus antenna gain and subtract feedline loss? Add to that that the radio would then need a means to adjust the power until the ERP fell into spec. It was a quagmire to deal with, at ERP levels.

But it does open up a bunch of possibilities, running 2w into stacked 22 element yagi arrays.......

While I'm pretty much a QRP-type operator, I really don't have any argument with anything you are saying. But, all of this stuff really doesn't apply to the services or the discussion at hand. The point is, there have been ZERO actions by the FCC against any individuals/entities for running high-powered amplifiers on the MURS/GMRS/FRS frequencies; and there is(and never has been) the same type of incentive to run these things, like there is on 11m. That's all I'm saying.

What you are failing to see is that rarely do two radio operators operate strict line-of-site. Most, if not all radio communications using VHF and UHF radios are sending a signal to the other radio through vegitation, buildings, cars, people, etc!

Even when I am taking to repeaters on high locations, I have to contend with objects between me and the repeater antenna. Higher power DOES help you to overcome these obsticles.

When I use my FRS radios, I rarely can see the person I am talking to.
DO YOU?

Nope, they are very useful services... that would be like tearing up the beginnings of the Interstate Freeway system, because of a few drag racing gangs (known as the CBers and Freebanders) on Mulholland Drive in the early 60's.

Quite the contrary - these services are reaching saturation, and need to be EXPANDED. Another possibility is to release some of the pressure on these services by allowing family members and friends to easily get a ham license by opening up the 1.25M ham band to a New Novice NoCode Voice Class License.

For some of the same reasons they get used on 11m. Not that the operator wants to work DX, on the contrary they want to be king-of-the-hill. Some of these poor folks have such a huge desire to control other people that the only way they can find to do it is by "taking control of a local frequency or channel", as with CB radio. They maybe the low person at work etc., but when empowered by a huge amplifier, that allows them to determine who talks and when or they get jammed, gives them the brief feeling of being in control - i.e. the Boss. How many times on 11m have you heard some channel control freak say " you're not going to talk on MY CHANNEL" followed by a dead carrier, loud music etc? Right, too many times. In short its an ego trip for some of the idiots, and has nothing to do with logic and V/UHF propagation facts. The bigger the amplifier all the better to key over other lesser powered stations in their mind.

Billerica is just a fly speck of a town on the map, and about half way between Boston and Why bother? All you want to do is spam these newsgroups with your MURS crap.

This is amateur radio, CB radio, or FRS, depending on the newsgroup cross-posted to, not MURS.

MURS has no purpose. It was an FCC wet dream to clean after a radio manufacturing mistake - and it will never be more than that.

There is no such "novice no-code" class. Must be another of Stewart's wet dreams.

Leleand, lets cut to the chase, if the cop was using his ht as a work radio, he is wrong, period.
> bandm they do it all the time, for various "reasons".

And some of them may in fact be legitimate depending on the Ham. Some do have license privileges to transmit on other than the Ham Bands.

We're not talking about mars or caps here. the thread was typical ham operator, going out of band, using a murs, or up here in the GWN, one of the lpu freqs. Wrong , of couse, bothering anyone, no. BUT it does happen, something I can say I have witnessed. and done the odd time. Why, hmm, not enough radio's at an weekend event, dial up the handi to the radio's being used, and off we go. Wrong, of course, hurting anyone, no. He're another example, I was working with another ham and we needed radio's, we couldn';t very well use 147.555 for our purpose, being commercial, so we used 151.055, an lpu freq, with no tone to ensure we didn't bother any of the local security guards, et c.
I'm not trying to call you out on this, just make you aware that just becuase hams have thousands of freqs available, doesn't for a minute mean they won't wander. I will conceed that many hams take a dim view of this, but there are plenty that don't.

Sincerely

Dan

In one case I remember seeing a Royal Oak city cop, in full uniform with side arm, sitting at a table in a small restaurant on Woodward Avenue with a very plainly obvious Yeasu HT. His heavy duty Motorola radio was nowhere to be seen. Was he a Ham? I don't know because I didn't ask, and I didn't see him making a transmissions with it while I was there to check for a callsign.

I have seen court officer using the yeasu ht, I think it's a tad easir to get ear plugs for that the typical Motorola. As long as he's only monitoring, there no harm being done.

Congratulations!!! Having been hamming for 55 years, I have many nostalgic memories. Among them ten meter memories. Nowadays there are a few 10 meter repeaters around. In the fifties I would work Australia on ten from Tennessee. This was with about five watts. There were times when we would just fire up the signal generator, hook a mike to it and work around town. In those days many mobiles were on ten. Good for about 20 miles under good conditions, and for 10,000 when band open.Right now with cycle as it is, you probably won't work much DX on ten, but you may find a repeater near and some other locals may be on ten and mobile ten. Here's a bit of a response to all the hams who seem to bash cb'ers with amps(no I've never owned a linear) Why is it so bad (besides illegal) to run 100-200 watts on 27mhz, but ok to run 1500 on 28 and 29 ?

I respect all the points you have made. However, because of the fact that we already have had GMRS and FRS for a great number of years(and GMRS does allow external antennas, and does share freqs with FRS, and will allow you to run easily obtainable Part 90 eqpt.), and these types of antics are not going on - I stand by my basic premise that the CB culture is FIRMLY ENTRENCHED and QUITE HAPPY on 11m... these 'ol boys can't just "reach out and knowingly squash somebody" for an extended period of time over in the next county - now matter how many WATTS they pump out. Oh sure, they could squash the conversation of little Billy or Susie on FRS for about 30 seconds, while they were passing thru town, or interfere with a business inventory being taken on MURS for a minute or so - but that is NOTHING compared with the HOURS OF PURE ENJOYMENT these CLOWNS can get on CB.

Oh, COME ON, these people are also running high gain antennas on bands not INFESTED with the level of noise present on 11m. With the type of antennas these 'ol boys typically run, they need the watts to be heard thru all the noise, and to overcome the ineffeciencies in their antenna systems, and to communicate with the other good 'ol boys running a similar power level and antenna system at the other end of the link.

Of course they are going to try to extrapolate their knowlege of 11m to 70cm... but IT DOESN'T WORK - because of LOS limitations, because of the increased imporatance of transmission line loss and antenna gain, and because of the fact that nobody else runs a similarly-powered system, the clowns get NO REASONABLE FEEDBACK, and so they slink back to the 11m slimefest, where they can interfere with conversations of thousands over a five county area, instead of the sheer boredom of only being able to interfere with little Billy or Susie's conversation down the block for a few seconds - who just end up putting on CTCSS, and don't even know that they are being interfered with. There just isn't the same THRILL.

This is why we haven't been seeing this kind of activity on GMRS/FRS/interstitials. If this high-powered amplifier activity were REALLY occuring on these services, wouldn't you think the UHF and VHF amps would be being sold right there alongside all of those HF amps at the truckstops?

The biggest problem is the sort of "arms race" mentality that has developed. It leads to a kind of "nuclear winter" in which the whole band is so over-saturated with RF energy, that nobody except the ones with the largest amplifiers can cut thru the noise to communicate.
Things are ESPECIALLY BAD on the HF bands(like 11m CB), because of skip - as the noise gets propagated ALL OVER THE WORLD!

I would assume the same problem holds true on the HF ham bands to a certain extent. However, hams are taught to use only as much power as necessary to maintain a contact(I don't know how many follow the rule, and how far they will go in interpreting it, but I'm going to assume most follow it to a certain degree - although it isn't the "prime directive" of each and every ham).

Of course not - RF LOS propagation is different than Visual LOS propagation.

Why don't you take a gander at this:

http://www.ictp.trieste.it/~radionet/2000_school/lectures/carlo/linkloss/INDEX.HTM

... pay particular attention to Huygens' Principle, all right?

And while you're at it - why don't you look into upgrading that

Not a chance. With 8 zillion FRS units sold and more being

I see no such saturation of FRS. Another family and mine often travel on weekends and we use FRS between cars. No saturation encountered at all...much less even another occasional user on the same channel. This is in the northeast, probably the most densly populater area of the country.

5572. Call for a cease fire on the GMRS/MURS Amp issue.

I'm beginning a 1 week "Internet cease-fire" on this issue. After that, if no further claims of "High-Powered Amps on GMRS/MURS" are made - there will be no further need to defend against these rumors.

You see, it is kind of a chicken-and-the-egg issue... Amps on GMRS/MURS do no good, as long as there aren't enough other people with amps out there... and there isn't a market for amps, until there are enough amps out there... and without a market for amps, there aren't enough amps out there...

What few morons who have tried to use amps on GMRS up to this point have surely gotten such rotten results that they most certainly have long ago abandoned these "experiments".

Now - as long as people don't go around spreading rumors that there are amps on MURS/GMRS(which could encourage the growth of this "rotten egg" syndrome), then we can all live happily ever after, in a low-noise environment.

As for me, I'm going QRP on this issue...

Stew,
"A great number of years"... Are you sure that FRS has been around for a great number of years?
How about 1 year (I think).
You know, the way you re-arrange facts to fit the argument you're making, I think you're a politician.
Are you getting paid by the 'word', or by the pound of

Some people say 5 wpm is equivalent to "no code". If you accept that, then we used to have an "all code" "no-code" license. A license where the only permitted mode used to be CW.

I suspect that the "minimum power needed for the contact" is observed by hams at the "order of magnitude" level. Can't reach that interesting DX on 20 with just the 100 watts your transceiver puts out, well, fire up the kilowatt linear.

There are any number of "opened up" 2M mobile rigs running on MURS. You can find them advertised as "MURS Ready" on EBay any time you like. Just did a search on "MURS" and found 50W Icom IC-2100H available, with prominent mention that it would work on the "new MURS" CB service.

The Class D Citizens Radio Service was never intended for hobby or experimental use. It became that way by default. Because of laziness as a resault of a well-known-inside pizzing contest between certain managers at the FCC - it was easier to just nake thw rules conform to what the outlaws were doing than to enforce them.

The GMRS and the FRS and the MURS were never intendced to be for hobby or experimental usage. But alas, the same throwing-up-of-the-hands that overcame the FCC with the CBRS overcame them for these, too.

FRS was a pet project of Radio Shack to sell lots of junky throw-away radios and MURS was a pet project of EF Johnson to sell more JobComm radios than its competitor could sell Color-Dot radios which both were selling when a Business Radio License was required for their usage. But the outlaws walked into CostCo or Wal-Mart, bought the radios and used them unlawfully and the FCC again changed the rules rather than enforced them.

If you think that these companies had the good intentions of "making communications more accessible for the average person", I have a bridge for sale that may be of interest to you....

Wanna do hobby? Wanna do experimenting? Get a ham license....it's much easier now than when the CBRS and GMRS were first founded.

It's the way you're using them. On the highway, with the limited range, you WON'T find many other users. Even around Boston. (I'm below Worcester.) I've used FRS between multiple cars to the cape and to ski trips, and never run into someone on the highway.

On the other hand, I took FRS on a motorcycle trip. And stops up north of Lowel found a couple of channels busy. On ski trips to Vermont almost every channel is so busy as to be almost unusable. Going to things like NHRA (big events with top fuelers) FRS is one big party line. Even with PL.

Hey, even in the summer, when I was at the summit of Wachusett, I found about half the channels active. A lot from there, but I was also getting some pretty distant stuff. One conversation was hikers. Sounded like they were on Monadnock.

No arguement there. You are correct, but it doesn't change history. Be that as it may, the CB band, the FRS band, and I'm sure the MURS band are open to be used by THE PUBLIC, for whatever usage they seem to see fit. GMRS is also (sadly) heading down the same road, now that blister-pack GMRS radios are available to clueless people that think they are just higher powered FRS radios.

They were never intended, but nonetheless are, the cheap and dirty way to play with radio without taking a test.

That seems to be a common thread for the FCC. "If you can't beat 'em, change the rules". Had the FCC's presence been stronger, 25 years ago, we wouldn't be having this conversation. But it's water over the dam now.

Oh no, I'm far from naive. Any commercial venture has as it's primary goal, the advancement of their profits. Clever marketing types will look to find any new niche, that they can exploit for monetary gain. Why do you think companies like Uniden and Yaesu, made ham radios that (Wink wink) could be easily modified for 11 meter usage? That was no accident, and their sales demographics proved it, even though they ended up flooding the market with gear that was destined for illegal usage. But their bottom line was much better....

> Wanna do hobby? Wanna do experimenting? Get a ham license....it's Seems almost too easy doesn't it? Why would someone play arounf with services like MURS, and FRS, when ham radio offers so much more? The theory test is disgustingly easy these days, so there's really no good technical reaason why someone would not go the ham route.

But many seem to harbor a deep rooted hatred for hams and the service in general. This is likely due to bad exposure to "stuffed shirt" types that feel that "real hams" operate DX on HF with at least 75% of all contacts on CW. The bad taste left has turned away many prospective radiko hobbyists. Maybe that's why there's interest in these other services.....

I agree that there always will be some that have no desire to leave the 11 meter band. But there are also others that like to test new waters.
Many upgrade to ham radio. Many find other avenues.

In my opinion, the only reason that GMRS has stood the test of time, is that the service was not (Until very recently), widely marketed to the public in places like Wal-Mart. Gear for GMRS was largely made up of converted business radios, which are fairly expensive, and not always easy to find, unless you cruise around in the radio world. In other words, you had a need.

CB was also not very popular before the 70's, when the mass media coverage of the "convoy" phenomenon, catapulted CB into every household, and many companies started cranking out radios and selling them in places like auto parts stores and 5 & 10 stores.

What will ultimately kill GMRS is the increasing marketing of cheap
"bubble pack" radios, with the predictable resultant rise in illegal activity. The FCC, will once again run rather than fight, and will most likely deregulate the band, and that will be the final death knell for a once usable band.

And this is where your reasoning is flawed. Because the FCC hasn't publically flogged someone for running excessive power on MURS or FRS, you assume that it isn't happening. If I were to apply that logic to 11 meter CB, I'd conclude that since there are only a handfull of people getting NAL's from the FCC, that there are only a FEW people running illegally there. Anyone that's familiar with 11 meters, knows what a crock that is. The FCC isn't going to bust someone unless they are causing interference problems, that bring the illegal to their attention. If you can run a few more watts on MURS/FRS, and no one notices, do you think the FCC would care, or even know?

On the other hand, there is a certain amount of circumstantial evidence that would suggest that there is at least the intention or interest in running higher power equipment on the FRS and MURS band. I see radio mods for ham VHF/UHF radios that specifically address usage on those respective bands. I see radios for sale that mention being usable on FRS/GMRS/MURS. I guess it's a major selling point to have a single dual band radio handle 2 meter ham, MURS, the marine band, 440 ham, FRS, and GMRS. So why mention it, if it wasn't a desired feature by some?

Higher power operation on FRS and MURS wouldn't be particularly noticable either, due to the band's propagation (or lack thereof). Would you be able to tell the difference at a glance, between a 2W MURS station feeding a 10 element beam, 500 feet HAAT from a 50 watt mobile on the same frequency? Descrete use of ham gear on these frequencies will not attract much attention. But once Billy Bob finds out, it won't be so descrete.

(SNIP)

Than't what I like about these ham radio. The easiest way to start a 2-terabyte-long multithread commentary in newsgroups is make a PRO/ANTI-CW message, or comment on illegal power amplifiers being sold at Dayton or used by CB'ers or others. Works every time like Maalox or prunes. You would think the topic of CW and/or amplifiers would have died out long ago, but in ham radio it seems, change comes, about as fast as it takes for black strap molasses poured down from the top of a 6 foot long fencepost in Alaska to reach the bottom...

On a more curious note, it seems one of the ole 75 meter standouts is still going strong, even after many years and the best efforts of R.H. Take a listen down on 3.853 late at night for a certain station in Co--oe Tx we all love to listen to.
He's mellowed out a tad from the "old days" when "Johnny Reb" and "Lyin Dick" and the other LA/TX/MS used to hang out down there, but still an amusing SWL catch for U late nite insominacs.

I guess that's why there is at least a 5 year wait to get a repeater

Thanks for all who replied about my 10 meter question! Now I'm wondering if I should start at 2m since there is no way I could afford an hf xcvr at this time.
Seems like dx on 10m would be limited because of the cycle were in now. And with 2m, I heard that some 300-400 mile dx could be achieved with loop antennas.
But I'm still interested in 10m. Any thoughts? Thanks!

The Loads of people into running high power/unlicensed equipment at FRS/GMRS/MURS are most likley to be people that have more of a "purpose" for a semi-closed PL (ctcss)/DPL radio like MURS/GMRS/FRS.
These include loads of Amateurs that are using these radios to communicate with the rest of their family & friends, the ones that had no interest to jump thru hoops to take a Federal Amateur test, just to play with a radio twice a year, also Scanner buffs, & the "cop/fireman

Believe me, you may want to believe that EVERY "bad guy" is a

Ham amps don't tend to be intentionally set up to splatter across half their band.

It might be on a down cycle, but it's far from dead yet! I bet it'll be good for another year or two, and even after that it'll be a lot of fun.
South America will still come in every afternoon.

Unlike CB amps that are "intentionally set up to splatter across half their band"? Do the CB mags run articles on how to intentionally set up an amp to splatter across half the band? Is there a splatter per MHz spec for 27 MHz stuff?

As I've said, I'm not going to post for awhile regarding the high-power external amp issue... but I've noticed that it has now evolved to somehow include the subject of ANY radio that runs more than 2W TPO - which is really a different subject.

I have no doubt that there ARE people running 50W IC-2100 radios on MURS. Oddly enough, the few cases I've heard of involving the IC-2100 have all involved Hams.

As far as the individuals selling these radios on Ebay, can't Ebay be contacted regarding the illegal wording in these ads? Also, can't the FCC be notified, so we can BUST these jackasses?

The dreaded "hum" can be a sign that the single electrolytic cap or bridge is starting to break down, or the transformer laminations are comming loose from age. Most of the adapters available today are made in China and Mexico and are produced with the most inexpensive materials available. I've cracked-open a few and have been suprised that they even made a UL or CSA certification, looking at the sloppy soldering and workmanship inside. Scary s-it. If your wall-ward is getting warmer than usual, it may be time to replace it. Radio Shack carries spares in popular voltage/current configurations, but I like Hosfelt Electronics much better. Here is a link to their website where you may find a spare that's comprable to the original unit's ratings and specs.

i have done quite a bit of 2m ssb and the range you mention is doable, no problem.
it will be rare when it is done with a loop.
generally a fairly long yagi is required on a tower and power output of 150 - 200 watts.

I've just had some interesting and informative email correspondence with Sylvan Butler, N7OWL, about gelled vs absorbed-liquid (AGM) sealed lead acid (SLA) batteries. I had commented that batteries with gelled electrolyte are rare, despite the fact that amateurs call all SLA batteries "gel cells". Sylvan had disagreed, saying that gelled types were common and AGM types rare.

This, and our correspondence, prompted me to do some web searching, and I came up with the following:

One of the batteries I see very often is the Panasonic SLA. Its electrolyte system is described at http://www.panasonic.com/industrial/battery/oem/images/pdf/slaover.pdf. It's pretty clearly AGM type and not gelled.

Sylvan and I both agree that one of the most common SLA batteries encountered is the Yuasa NP series. He had taken one, or a similar battery, apart and found gelled electrolyte. But Here's what the Yuasa web site says about the NP series, at http://www.yuasa-battery.co.uk/NP_Batteries.html:

"All NP batteries utilise Yuasa's unique electrolyte Suspension system incorporating a microfine glass mat to retain the maximum amount of electrolyte in the cells. The electrolyte is retained in the separator material by miniscus effect and there is no free electrolyte to escape from the cells. No gels or other contaminants are added."

The vent is described:

"The batteries are equipped with a simple, safe low pressure venting system which releases excess gas and automatically reseals should there be a build up of gas within the battery due to severe overcharge. However, on no account should the battery be charged in a sealed container."

I downloaded the Yuasa NP manual. It uses slightly different wording to describe the electrolyte system:

"All Yuasa NP batteries utilise an electrolyte suspension system consisting of a glass fibre separator material. This suspension system helps to achieve maximum service life, by fully retaining the electrolyte and preventing its escape from the separator material. No silica gels or other contaminents are used."

So it's clear that the common Yuasa NP series is also AGM and not gelled electrolyte type.

In email, Sylvan commented:

I agree.

But I do know I've taken apart several defunct SLAs and found a pudding-like substance (usually visibly dehydrated and cracking) inside, under the epoxy or tar seal.

Looking at the www.yuasa-battery.co.uk site, they only mention AGM types of SLAs. They also refer to their "NP" family as "a new generation". I wonder if they used to sell gelled electrolyte a few years ago, but now are not?

There are a lot of advantages of AGM compared to gelled, so discontinuing gelled and replacing them with AGM would not suprise me. The only disadvantage would be cost, and that may be somewhat mitigated if (as some nations require) the manufacturer is accounting for end-of-life recycling.

--------end of comment-------

With at least the popular Panasonic and Yuasa types not being gelled, I'll stand by my statement that truly gelled electrolyte SLAs are uncommon, although they certainly do exist. Does anyone know of a relatively common type of SLA that really does have gelled electrolyte?

FRS was created by rules effective July 8, 1996.

MURS was created by rules effective November 13, 2000.

GMRS (Formerly Citizens Class A) has been around for about 50 years.

Rarely will you work 300-400 miles on 2 meters. Previously, I lived on a small mountaintop. With four 19-element Yagis and 160 watts I could work 150-200 miles under good conditions. Short range, local work is more common.

10 meters is the top end of the HF bands. DX propagation on 10 is not as plentiful as on the lower HF bands, but it's still there.

Shop around and you can likely get on 2 and 10.

For the 10-meter rig, do not settle for less than a small tower and a tri-bander.

Evidently... there is a ham selling modified 2100H radios on Ebay, and he mentions MURS:

http://cgi.ebay.com/ws/eBayISAPI.dll?ViewItem&item=1355829496

The funny thing is, there are actually jackasses out there willing to bid $255 for a $149 radio...

Oh, BTW, did I already mention that this seller is a ham.

: I've been using them for nearly 15 years here and no problems. Car
: batteries hold up fine as long as you don't overcharge them, don't let : them discharge too far, and keep the water up in them. But I do prefer
: a marine deep cycle if I had my choice as their design suits radio use
: better. But a car battery will work just fine. I'm running a 706 on : one right now. I use a fully automatic charger to keep the charge up,

: never heavily discharge any of those lead acid batteries on purpose.
: Sometimes it'll happen though out portable etc. If I buy a new battery
: just for radio use, I get the big marine deep cycles. MK

Here's my experience:

I find that I have had to replace stock Automotive starting batteries about 2:1 when compared to Marine Deep Cycle batteries.

I have had good life with Gates cells even though I have only bought used ones. All of gells (or whatever) are pulls from UPS service, and either they are good and I get a few years use or I pitch them. I have a couple that claim to be sealed that didn't have as much life as the sealed Gells (says "GELL" on the side) that were 5 years old when I got them.
```

Currently I have 7 years on a Nautilus group 27 Deep Cycle Marine in the trunk (in a box with a fusible link) that pulls all the radio gear with the key off and has still outlasted 2 "premium" 72 month batteries in the front of the vehicle. Before I went to dual systems my battery life on the front OEM and Premium batteries was even worse. Even when I was buying the best that could squeeze into the space.
I can't count how many Die Hard and JCPenny batteries I fried when I was running around with Motracs in the early days. If only Radio Shack had them on the "free battery a month" cards along with "lifetime" tubes.

I wouldn't rely on 2m for DX contacts on any regular basis. Most hams use it only for 2m FM work, on repeaters or local simplex stuff, generally within a 50 mile radius depending on a variety of things. There is some 2m SSB activity, but it's not as popular as 6m SSB or 10m SSB. You can get a 10m only rig for about $200. Copper electronics (www.copper.com) sells RCI-2950 radio's for only $200. When the conditions are right, you can work the world on those 25 watts and a wire antenna.

Actually, there was a time several months ago where a whole bunch of illegally modified 2m equipment was removed by Ebay. If you find a radio that has been modified, you can let Ebay know about it and they may remove it if you can show that it allows out of band transmissions.

MURS (Multi-Use Radio Service) is a no-license VHF personal radio service which operates on 151.820, 151.880, 151.940, 154.570, and 154.600 MHz with a maximum Transmitter Power Output limit of 2 Watts. The FCC MURS rules permit voice and data communication; as well as external gain antennas. Unlike some other services, there are no restrictions on business activities with MURS, and the 2W power limit works as a major benefit for allowing more users per channel. With the latest changes to the FCC MURS rules, most any low-power VHF Part 90 business radio that was certified before May 2002, can be used on at least some of the MURS frequencies(radios certified after 5/2002 will only need to be certified under Part 95). Additionally, the new rules no longer specify an ERP (Effective Radiated Power) restriction of 2 watts - so it is now possible to build quite efficient stations, using external gain antennas.

Who's fault is that? Could it be the manufacturer's? I cannot buy enough parts to make a "decent" rig even 1/10 of the quality and stability of today's rigs locally here where I live. Christ, the manufacturers are also responsible for the virtual death of some of the VHF and above bands.

Hmmm.... the numbers have (for the most part) gone up every year. Granted some years were definitely not as large in growth as others, but almost every year for the past 20-30 years has appreciated some level of growth, not decline. If there is a death in ham radio, it is going to come from lack of promotion on a national level down to the local/club level and of course the personal level. If we also spent as much time whining about what is supposedly so shitty about ham radio, and spent that time educating prospective hams and new hams we would have a greater growth that we currently do have.

That is true if you want them to, or a person can be proactive and work for positive change or at least to keep things at a even keel.

Pardon me for saying this, but you sound like you're backpeddling a bit.
In all reality, what's the difference between someone running a 2W HT into a 100 watt output amplifier, or someone running a modified Motorola Micor at 100 watts?

It's not about "amplifiers" as much as it's about ignoring the power

If their were less questions and arguments about 800Mhz Analog Cellular mods and recievers,Citizens Band and also morse code for amateurs, , most newsgroups would have no posts.

instead of whining about these issues, why dont you find something else constructive to do with your time. bulid an antenna, make a reciever or some other gadget. Then you let others know what you are doing and someone improves on your idea.

I know i will see alot of problems regarding my message but its true. here are my thoughts for the record.

Cellular Scanners-- Why do people want a 800Mhz full coverage reciever today. Most areas are using some form of digital service, and not even in the 800 band anymore. What is so interesting about listening to cellphones? Ive had radios that are capable of it, and never even listened to that portion. I think you just want something that has no gaps, and are willing to pay more for something that most wont listen to. If its so good how come i never see monitoring posts about how Mary got her nails done?
Unless you are in the FBI and are trying to foil the next terrorist action, dont be bothered with cellular capable scanners

Morse Code-- have you looked at new licenses lately, looks like our ranks are dropping. Ive been a Tech(No-Code) for three years and would like to use HF but could care less about morse code. Its an antiquated mode, which had its time, although still usefull sometimes, if we keep saying we need Morse code, us amateurs will be way behind times(which we still are). Lots of people say, when a repeater ID's or i am tuning around the morse sub bands, "Is that Morse Code, someone still uses that?" I say yes, its part of amateur radio. The person whom im talking to usually says "ill just go to Walmart and get those radios for $50 and dont worry about the code" Amateurs now adays need to concentrate about leading edge technology, like we once did, and stop hanging on to the past. PSk31, APRS, IRLP, and satellite is the future, so we should stop saying amateur radio is only HF and Morse. The military does not use MOrse anymore, they use ALE type signals, which is faster, and almost error free .Those of you that have been around for a while should get off your "Extra or Advanced" horses and get some new blood into amateur radio. Also a Tech (no code) IS still an amateur, so we should be treated like one. I hear it all the time, Im speaking to someone about some technical topic, and they happen to be at QRZ.com and look up my call. Then they say how come your only a tech? didnt you pass the code test? i say no and dont want to be bothered. "well its been good talking to you, 73" is the common response. And also those that upgraded, change their whole demeanor towards you like they dont remember you. WOW!! your a general, advanced, or extra! can you set up a packet node, or work a satellite via a digital mode. NO, gee i guess that morse code is really good!

Citizens Band- Those that are on SSB are almost like amateurs, and some wont get a license because they dont like the dryness of amateur radio. Regular AM'ers are usually a 50/50 bunch, some are the nicest and most helpfull people youll ever meet, and the others, well you know what im talking about.Amateur ops always complain about how 11m was stolen and CB'ers dont know anything. Well guess what, if its about amplifiers(yes ILLEGAL on 11m), DXing (less than 125 miles wink wink) or just general radio stuff, some know more than some amateurs. If a "general" is confronted by one of these CB'ers they say "well your so smart do you know Morse code" CB'er replies "NO!!". That amateur will either leave or will find what channel they are on and throw a carrier or send code with his friends. This is not the way!!! "cant we all just get along" well thats it for now, if i made any spelling or puncuation errors, oh well!!

Sincerly,

Steve Bossert , KC2GOG (tech and proud of it) and i dont need to hide behind an alias like some others out there!!!

Isn't there a "commercial" Yaesu model HT that is/was marketed for the 155's and 460's which looks like an FT50RD? I thought some of the vendors were closing out battery packs for those a year or so ago, seliing them as spares for the FT50's etc.

At least the radio oriented ones, it seems.
I subscribe to some where radio is rarely mentioned.

It's the onerous mix of bad politics and technology.
(keep your laws off my body, and out of my receiver)

I don't think any readily available "scanners" (blocked or not) cover the sat phone bands where the FBI is concentrating.

Now that the ionosphere is shot to hell, that's sort of a moot point.

Just as a paper and ink book is.
Some folks (like me) are hopelessly nostalgic, though.

If being contemporary is important, and working the world is an objective,

then get a cell phone.
A multi-minute call plan,
3 watts,
and you have anywhere on the globe with Q5 clarity.
Up to date?
Get your cell phone in a color scheme to match your Hilfiger's or FuBu.

That's just the niche of users that GMRS and FRS (and originally CB) were designated for.
.....and $50?
Walmart (Santee CA) has Bellsouth Communicators (FRS) for less than $10
....hellofa deal.

Been down to HRO lately?
Several kilobucks will get you all the leading edge technology you can afford.

They are "both" amateur radio, all the digital gimmickry you referred to above, as well as the old brass pounders on the "long bands".

No thanks.
That's the equipment vendors that want more customers.
The bands are crowded enough (when they are open) without any more impatient "new blood".

There's arrogance everywhere you go in life, not just hams.

A real comedy show too.
"I'm QRT and standing by" ;-)
If ham is so bad,
why don't they develop their own set of brevity codes, instead of making such a pathetic attempt at plagiarizing from the hams?
With all the superfluous and obsequious blather on freeband, the use of any shorthand isn't expedient or even necessary.

Just like in the real world.

I think you are being too broad in your assessment here.
Damn few hams of today even remember the late 50's, let alone the transference of a scarcely used band to the general public.
(the lowest common denominator aspect didn't emerge until well into the 60's)

My 10m amp was made by someone who caters to the CB market.
Parts is parts,
and if he can sling 'em together better and cheaper than Mirage, then that's where I'm gonna buy it.

Maybe you should look beyond the boundaries of the radio community.
You'll likely see that what you're complaining about is part of human nature, and radio is just reflecting those squabbles within its own scope.

A very narrow look at this! The men you quote all were for laws.
They were just for laws that was balanced by representation!

Very interesting indeed Steve. I have but on question...what kind of goofs do you talk to anyway? I've never heard anyone ask or make comments like you say have been said to you concerning CW.

And guess what Steve....I've got my Extra, had it a while now, and I do satellite, and V/Uhf weak signal, and HF and Contest, etc. etc. I do it on voice, digital and believe it or not CW. So please don't stick us all in this bag you apparantly have created.

If you don't care to do CW...fine...less QRM from a lid to contend with. I could care less if folks like you, that apparantly hate CW, don't want to operate CW. Why do you think that bothers types like me that enjoy it?

i did not want my post to come out in a negative way, and i should not of even of bothered to write, because i ended up addng fuel to the fire.

i really should of made the point that when radio communication first began, it was all about improving technology. i really dont see that anymore, and i am NOT talking about buying a station. thats just like some rich guy buying a brand new Harley Davidson and custom leathers, trying to pass himself as a hardcore biker.

and by the way i am not a LID, and its what ever floats your boat (as far as what mode you operate)

all im saying if you hold on to the past you cant go foward (i.e Morse Code)

if certain people enjoy Morse dont force it upon others, just like i am NOT making you agrre with any of my statements, they are open forum, and oh by the way

HUGE difference. The "bigger is better" External High-Power Amplifier "arms race" culture that exists on 11m CB leads to a never-ending escalation in amplifier power... nowadays 3000W "just isn't enough".

With use of integral radios(with internal amplifiers) on GMRS/MURS, there is at least a somewhat "reasonable upper power bound" that exists on these services. Even in light of this, it should be noted that the vast majority of users on MURS use rules-conforming handheld radios having <= 2W TPO capability. While there have been a few recent reports of hams using and/or selling low-cost 50W IC-2000 mobile ham rigs on MURS - these individuals are being pressured to "cease and desist" their high-profile illegal activities.

Additionally, while it can't be ruled out that some individuals have experimented with the usage of external high-power amplifiers on MURS/GMRS, it is quite clear that the usage of these devices is not culturally endemic on these services, as it is on 11m CB.

While I understand your point; as a MURS user, I'm personally much more concerned with an individual running an external 500W amplifier, than I am with someone running a 5W handheld with a rubber duck dummy load antenna.

Common misconception... just because they are allocated, doesn't mean they are used.

I've got plenty of good radios and antennas...

Hams better start dealing with reality - or we all are going to wake up one day soon, and - POOF! there goes 1.25M!
